I am in receipt of your letter of March 16th, and in reply I wish to inform you that your nephew, Lieut. Logan is safe, and a prisoner of war in Germany. This information was communicated to us per medium of messages dropped from a German aeroplane and can be taken as authentic.

Offensive Patrol.

Lieut. Logan was one of a patrol of four who left the squadron on an offensive patrol 21st February, and was last seen by his fighting partner apparently O.K. over the enemy's lines, but a thick mist was developing at the time, and it is thought he lost his direction and encountered many aircraft who drove him down in their lines. Another pilot of the same patrol lost his way, and was forced to land behind our lines, and a good distance from the aerodrome.

Reported Missing.

About three weeks after he was reported "missing," he wrote a letter to his fellow-officers of the squadron, wherein he mentioned that he was settling down to his fate and was going as well as could be expected under the circumstances. This letter was dropped in our lines from a German aeroplane.

On behalf of the squadron officers and then I wish you to accept our best wishes for his welfare, and at the same time I take this opportunity of expressing my appreciation of his excellent work while serving under my command.

Yours respectfully,
R. C. PHILLIPPS,

use our rooms for their regular or occasional meetings, among them the following. The 57th and Otonabee Chapters of the I.O.D.E. the Kitchener League, the Peter Robinson Chapter, Local Council of Women and the Business Girls' Club.

On the whole, the review of the past year's work of our Y.W.C.A. is very encouraging, and the promises for the future very bright. When we realize the numbers of girls there are in Peterborough to whom our Association could be a source of wholesome pleasure and of help, and when we see the enthusiasm and interest of our members who are already active in Association, we feel that indeed it is a great work entailing a tremendous amount of responsibility.

This report would not be complete without mention of the debt we owe to the good friends of the Association who have responded so willingly to any calls we have made upon them, to the kind interest and encouragement of members of the Board, and the hearty co-operation of the House Superintendent and the Physical Director, and above all we thank our Heavenly Father that He has permitted us to be instruments in His hands for the carrying on of a little part of His work.

Did you ever know any person who was permanently cured of Constipation by taking drugs of any kind? Drugs seem to assist Nature at the time, but as time goes on larger doses are necessary until the trouble becomes chronic.

Internal Bathing is the only real cure for Constipation. It keeps the Colon or Lower Intestine free from all accumulation. Soon the system performs its regular functions unaided, and there is no further trouble.

Mr. A. McLean, of Conger Lumber Co., Parry Sound, writes:—"I have been troubled with Constipation for the last 35 or 40 years, and could not pass one day without taking medicine. I have used the 'J. B. L. Cascade' since getting it 21 days ago, with wonderful results. Will recommend any person to use it."

Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York invented and perfected the "J. B. L. Cascade" for Internal Bathing, which is to-day the only efficient means of accomplishing the desired results. Dr. Tyrrell has published an interesting book on Internal Bathing, called "Why Man of To-day is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient," which can be had free for the asking at the Warne Drug Co., Peterborough. They will also be pleased to show and explain the "J. B. L. Cascade" to you.

Budget Speech And Its Effect On The Market

A Number of Grocery Items Affected by Taxation

Interest has centred on the Budget speech brought down in the House of Commons on Tuesday and the lines in which the grocer will be particularly interested are tea, coffee, chicory and tobacco. In brief, there has been a customs duty of 10 cents per pound levied on tea, and an excise duty of 10 cents per pound on all stocks now in dealers' hands. The customs duty on green coffee and chicory has been made 5c. per pound British preferential and 7c. intermediate, as against 2 1-4c. and 4c. formerly levied. The excise on tobacco, cigars and cigarettes manufactured from foreign leaf has just been doubled and an excise of 5c. per pound is now to be imposed on the home-grown raw leaf. Another item to be affected is matches, on which an excise taxation of one cent per hundred is imposed. At time of going to press, it is impossible to secure expressions of opinions from manufacturers and wholesalers affected.

Imported groceries generally are reaching a low ebb as regards supplies, and little opportunity presents itself of replacing. Not only is difficulty in securing evident, but continually higher prices continue to be manifest. Orders now placed in foreign markets are only being accepted in the event of bottoms being available at time goods are ready, and no guarantees as to prices are given—in short, contracts cannot be made today for foreign goods.

Quiet Situation.

An unusually quiet situation prevails in all markets during the week, and price changes have been comparatively few.

New prices have been established on war grade flour, which provide for a decline of 15c. per barrel. This is due to the lengthening of extraction from 74 per cent. to 76 per cent. The demand for wheat substitutes shows a decided increase and indicates that efforts to save wheat are bearing fruit. The action of the Government in curtailing the use of wheat flour in cakes and pastry is expected to still further relieve the sit uation, though as yet no opinions are given as to how greatly this will ease matters.

Government action in curtailing the amount of sugar which can be used in the manufacture of confectionery and limiting supplies which can be held by individuals will, it is thought, release greater supplies to the consuming public generally. With the preserving season not so far away, it would seem that every measure to enable refiners to provide surplus stocks should be adopted. How the household will fare in distribution at that time has not yet been made the subject of an announcement by the Canada Food Board.

The position of spices may still be termed one of extreme scarcity and continued high prices. During the week sharp advances have been recorded in paprika, and intimations are out at ordinary points there is an absolute dearth of supplies. Nutmegs have also recorded an advance of 5c. per pound in some quarters, and spot stocks are reported light. Celery seed is firm, and prices being quoted for the past few weeks by some sources are due for higher levels towards the end of this week, more in keeping with to-day's market.

A very firm situation prevails in all lines of nuts. Almonds and walnuts are reported as considerably higher or import and an even stronger tone is expected to develop. Filberts, it is thought, will also go much higher.

"MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM" WAS A SPLENDID SUCCESS

Collegiate Assembly Hall Was Filled to Capacity Last Evening With An Appreciative Audience.

THOSE WHO TOOK PART

"A Midsummer Night's Dream," perhaps the most unique enterprise ever undertaken by the fair sex in Peterboro, proved a complete success in every way. The Collegiate Assembly Hall, in which the play was presented by the Women Teachers' Guild, was crowded to capacity with an audience strictly composed of the gentler sex. Miss Williams was the "chairman."

THE PLAY.

The play was run on decidedly novel lines. Each separate scene was presented by a different cast from a different school, which gave scope to those taking the same part in a different scene to profit by seeing the splendid work of her predecessor in the same role and improve, if possible, upon the work.

THE COSTUMES.

The costumes cleverly contrived by the young ladies themselves, were most effective, especially those of Demetrius and Oberon, who made most princely lovers in doublet and hose and plumed hats. The young ladies have evidently put a wealth of originality into both their costumes and scenic effects. Puck in each case was represented by an agile young lady who took the part acting the ubiquitous fairy to perfection.

It is only to be regretted that the "Mother Grundy" spirit of the girls forbade the entrance of the stronger sex to see so splendid a production so cleverly worked out.

THOSE WHO TOOK PART.

Those who took part in the various acts were as follows:

Act I.—Central School Staff — Miss Bennett, Miss Armstrong, Miss Gordon, Miss Denne, Miss Caldwell, Miss Shearer.

Act II.—Queen Mary Staff.—Miss Cairns, Miss Brown, Miss Thomas, Miss Caldwell, Miss Moffatt, Miss Stuart, Miss Buck, Miss Jackson, Miss Thomlinson, Miss McKay.

Act. III. — Collegiate, Normal and Separate School Staffs. — Miss Rutherford, Miss McVannel, Miss McRae, Miss Rannie, Miss Williams, Miss Wallace, Miss Lalande, Miss Sanderson, Miss Milane, Miss Sage, Miss Caldwell, Miss Deyell.

Act IV.—King Edward Staff.—Miss L. Elliott, Miss Lapp, Miss Sage, Miss S. Elliott, Miss Read, Miss Nichol, Miss Burgess, Miss McCutcheon, Miss Wilson, Miss Rae, Miss Moore, Miss Jory, Miss Lancaster, Miss Gillespie.

Act V.—South Central Staff. — Miss Fleming, Miss Kennedy, Miss Graham, Miss Esplen, Miss Bennett, Miss Sisson, Miss Collinson, Miss Dorman, Miss Dix, Miss Rush, Miss Moore, Miss Buck, Miss Gillespie, Miss Nichol.

Many Reasons Why Liquid Cough Mixtures Can't Cure Bronchitis

But the Healing Fumes of Catarrhozone, Which are Breathed to the Furthest Recesses of the Bronchial Tubes, Bring Quick Relief and Sure Cure.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs attacks the trouble at the source, disperses the germs of disease, and cures the ailment thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure, medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and, in fact, have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary relief but will always cure permanently. Yours sincerely, (Signed) WILLIAM RAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolute, permanent cure, use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit costs $1.00; smaller size, 50c., at all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

WOMEN WILL BE EMPLOYED ON THE PETERBOROUGH STREET CARS

Mr. W. G. Ferguson, Manager of the Peterboro' Street Railway Says the Employment of Women is a Necessity —Five Returned Soldiers Are Already Employed—Retired Farmers Will Go Back to the Farms.

WOMEN WILL RECEIVE SAME WAGES

Women street car conductors and motorwomen are not only a possibility, but a probability for Peterborough, in the near future. Mr. W. G. Ferguson, Manager of the Peterborough Radial Railway, said this morning that with the shortage of men, that is capable and trustworthy men, women to replace those who have gone overseas are an actual necessity.

At present on the car service there are five returned soldiers who are unable to return to the war, and a number of retired famers who are in good health and physically fit to return to help out in the crying need there is at present for farm labour. Some of the latter have already gone back and in all probability others will follow.

Must Have Nerve.

Mr. Ferguson stated that in putting the young ladies on the car service great discrimination must be used. Only girls who have a strict sense of honour in business dealings will be capable of filling the position of conductor, and only girls with a splendid nerve will be eligible for the motor service. Any girl who can run an automobile can a street car.

Equal Wages.

The young women will receive the same wages as the men. "We expect to get as good, if not better, service from women as from men, women conductors will perhaps excel men in courteous service, so in all fairness the wages they receive will be the same as those given to the men." Mr. Ferguson said, "and the wages are good, ranging from $10.00 per week up." The new conductors will also have the same hours as men.

Will Receive Uniform.

The girls will be outfitted in a neat navy uniform directly they are taken on the service.

POSITIONS FOR RETURNED MEN

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys and Neutralize Irritating Acids

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

INCREASE YOUR SALES OF VEGETABLES AND SAVE WHEAT

The following article from the Canada Food Board has been addressed to the local food dealers:

"The present situation demands that greater quantities of wheat must be conserved for the use of our Empire and our Allies than is now being done. The situation is becoming more acute each day, and we know that it is only necessary to draw your attention to this fact in order to obtain our maximum efforts and co-operation in urging your customers to increase their purchases of wheat substitutes.

There is no better substitute for wheat products than vegetables — potatoes, carrots, onions, turnips, etc., and as there are still large quantities of these available at reasonable prices, we would request that you make a special effort to increase the consumption of these.

DETECTIVE WENT ASTRAY.

But Man Who Was Wanted in Toronto Was in Peterborough.

KINGSTON, May 4.—There was a good joke on a Toronto detective recently. He came down from Toronto, on the noon train to get a prisoner at the police station, but on his arrival he found that the man he wanted was in Peterborough, and that he should have gone to Peterborough for his man. He was quite surprised when told by the local police that they did not have a prisoner for Toronto, and on looking up his warrant, he found that he should have gone to Peterborough. The local police headed him for Peterborough. The detecetive stated that one of the Toronto sergeants gave him instructions to come to Kingston.—Kingston Whig.

WORTH OVER $500 A BOTTLE TO HIM

"After Three Years' Misery I'm Now Almost a Well Man Thanks to Tanlac," He Says

"Positively, I wouldn't take a thousand dollars for the good this Tanlac has done me and I have only taken two bottles so far," said Edward Costello, of 270 Pape Ave., Toronto, the other day. Mr. Costello is an employee of Thomas Tomlinson and Son.

"For over three years," he continued, "I suffered agonies from stomach troubles and although I took all kinds of medicine I got worse instead of better. Nothing seemed to agree with me and soon after eating I would so bloat up with gas that I could hardly breathe. I had a heavy feeling in the pit of my stomach, and at times it pained me so that I could hardly stand it. My heart would flutter and palpitate, and I would feel just like I was going to faint. After supper when I sat down to read the paper I often felt so dizzy I would have to get up and walk about, and I have even had to stop work at the shop many a time on account of an attack coming on. My tongue was badly coated and I would have an awful taste in my mouth on getting up in the morning.

"I had taken so much medicine that I was disgusted with it, but when I read how Tanlac had relieved so many cases like mine I decided to try it. Well, sir, by the time I had finished my first bottle I noticed a big improvement. I am on my third bottle now, and after three years of misery I am almost a well man, and feel better than I have in all that time, thanks to Tanlac. I can eat anything that I want and have no more trouble with gas or indigestion. That dull heavy feeling is gone, my heart does not worry me like it did, and I sleep like a log all night. I have never given a testimonial to a medicine before but my relief has been so wonderful that I feel it my duty to give Tanlac the credit, and will recommend it to anybody."

Tanlac is sold in Peterboro by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield by the Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert by A. J. Scott; in Westwood, by G. Pringle and Son.

In placing the VIVID Lamp before our patrons we can highly recommend it to give satisfaction, because it results in cheapness in the end, as it is thoroughly tested in every way against electrical and mechanical defects. It is the life of the lamp that makes it cheap or dear. Nothing better than this lamp can be had at the present time.

The Heart of a Range

BY its fire-box the usefulness, efficiency and durability of a range is measured — it is the heart of the range.

It must be scientifically proportioned to the whole range,

—It must be both heat-resisting and heat-conserving.

McClary's exclusive process semi-steel linings, fitted to expand and contract at different degrees of heat, has the tough durability that makes for long life under constant usage.

And the close-grained texture and toughened hardness of that semi-steel resists the permeating destructiveness of fuel gases.

Then the fire-box is built wide to give maximum utilization of the fire body and it is just the right depth to maintain a steady, dependable body of fire—under perfect control.

No part of the Pandora Range has been given such close study by its makers as the fire-box, because the fire-box is the most important and most difficult problem in building a perfect range.

"The Magic of the Pandora"—Booklet Free

This is only one of the many features of the Pandora Range described in "The Magic of the Pandora," a little booklet full of information that every woman will want before she buys a range. Write for it to the nearest McClary Branch.

SCARLET FEVER IN EAST CITY

A Number of Cases Removed to the Isolation Hospital.

A number of cases of scarlet fever are reported in East City. Two houses on Rogers Street have been placarded, and several of the inmates affected have been removed to the Isolation Hospital. Dr. C. H. Amys, Medical Officer of Health, is of the opinion that the cases originated from a couple of obscure cases that were not properly isolated and taken care of. Milkmen delivering milk to houses placarded are warned not to remove milk bottles from such houses as it is illegal and renders them liable to prosecution.

NATIONAL BICYCLE WEEK OPENS TO-DAY

Peterboro Dealers Will Participate in the Event.

From the reports of its field men, who are touring the country in the interest of National Bicycle Week, the United Cycle Trade Directorate, with headquarters in New York, estimate that more than a million riders will take part in the celebration beginning to-day and ending next Saturday May 11th.

The bicycle dealers in Peterborough as well as in every important city and town in Canada and the United States are thoroughly organized to carry out the programme outlined by the National Bicycle Association.

To-day is the day set for the International bicycle parades in Canada and the United States. In cities where the weather is not favourable to-day, the date will be extended until next Monday. The Directorate's field men report that probably 1,000 separate parades will be held. If it were possible to combine these men, women boys and girls awheel in one master procession, it would present a moving picture of startling magnitude.

But the movie men are, nevertheless going to take pictures from many points and when these films are assembled millions of people will see the whole national parade on the screen and it will surprise everybody to see such an army of enthusiastic wheelers still using the bicycle for recreation, health and business.

Summary Of To-day's War News

Vienna despatches to-day indicate that the predicted Teutonic drive against Italy may be about to begin. Simultaneously there are indications that the Germans are on the eve of a renewal of the major attacks on the Franco-Belgian lines. It is announced that Emperor Charles has left Vienna for the front.

INTENSE BOMBARDMENT.

The Austro-Italian front and Vienna War Office statements report pronounced activity all along the practicable fighting line from Lake Garda to the Adriatic. London announces the beginning this morning of an intense bombardment of the Anglo-French positions on the Flanders front south and south-west of Ypres. It was here that the Germans met their disastrous defeat early this week in their vain attempt to develop their success in capturing Mont Kemmel the week previous. It has been assumed that they were gathering their forces for another and presumably a greater effort. To the south on the Somme front, artillery activity continues, but there have been no infantry movements by the Germans.

NEW YORK, May 4.—The Associated Press war summary to-day says:

Germany's military leaders still hesitate to renew in force the offensive to which they are committed, and the lull in Flanders and Picardy is still unbroken by heavy infantry fighting.

The past week has been a distinctly unfavourable one for the enemy. After capturing Mont Kemmel and heralding it as only the first step of the victorious blow in Flanders, the Germans have not been able to advance either southwest of Ypres or east of Amiens. Checked by the heroic defence of the French and the British in the north they were also unable to gain south of the Somme. In Picardy during the past few days the British and French, especially General Petain's men, have made important local gains and the Germans have not reacted in force, an unusual procedure. Their enemy activity on the southern flank in Flanders has not yet been followed by infantry fighting.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES IN ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH TO BE HELD TO-MORROW

Anniversary services will be held in St. Andrews' Presbyterian church to-morrow. The Rev. R. Bruce Taylor, D.D., principal of Queen's University, will preach at both services. Dr. Taylor was until recently pastor of St. Paul's church, Montreal, and is one of the leading preachers of the Dominion. Queen's University is one of the national institutions of Canada, and the trustees have been careful to select a man of recognized scholarship and distinguished gifts to occupy the place made famous by Dr. G. M. Grant and Dr. D. M. Gordon.

SILVER STOCKS

The fixing of silver metal price at $1.00 means great prosperity for Cobalt properties. This price will remain for years to come. The purchase of 350,000,000 ounces by the United States Government cannot be completed under five years, possibly ten. Buy now before the boom starts in Silver shares.

The New York Curb is beginning to take an active interest in Silver. We have direct wire to that market.

IN THE LAND O' COMMON SENSE

Says it is suicide to cut corns, and tells how they can be lifted right out

You simply say to the drug store man, "Give me a quarter of an ounce of freezone." This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn from one's feet.

A few drops applied directly upon a tender, aching corn should relieve the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn, root and all, can be lifted out with the fingers without pain.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that while freezone is sticky it dries in a moment, and seems to simply shrivel up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

Don't let father die from infection or lockjaw from whittling at his corns, but cut this out and make him try it.

Boys Stole Sugar Parents Must Pay

Five boys, ranging from eight to twelve years, admitted to Magistrate Dumble this morning the theft of quantities of loaf sugar from a local warehouse into which they had broken by forcing the transom open, and, after it had been boarded up, by knocking the boards off with stones. Two boxes of 25 pounds each disappeared in January, two more in April, and a fifty-pound box also vanished. Detective Newhall was put to work on the case and soon found a clue that lead him to the group of youngsters who were developing their taste for a staple food the war has made scarce. The value of the 150 pounds was slightly more than $15.00. The Magistrate ordered the fathers of the five boys to pay three dollars each, and in default, four of the youngsters would be sent to the reformatory for twelve months. One of the boys at his mother's request, was given eight strokes of the corrective and deterrent "cat."

PETERBORO SOLDIERS REPORTED WOUNDED

Pte. H. J. Tanner, an Apsley member of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported wounded, his name appearing in to-day's official list from Ottawa. Pte. Tanner enlisted here in the autumn of 1915, and went overseas with Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit, being transferred to another Canadian infantry battalion in France.

Wounded Second Time.

Mrs. Perrin, 211 Rubidge street, received word this morning that her brother, Gunner George MacGregor had been wounded for the second time on April 14, and admitted to hospital in Rouen. He was previously wounded on August 21. Gunner MacGregor went overseas with the 33rd Battery.

We wish to advise our customers, that owing to the increased cost of handling ice, we are compelled to advance our rates, to meet this unavoidable expense.

As the Cash System has become the popular method of doing business, we intend to operate more closely along those lines, and wish to advise all those who have not settled their accounts, to do so at once, otherwise we will feel justified in taking the necessary steps to collect.

Peterborough "B" Men Want Another Medical Examination

"The King Will Give You Better Wages" Said Judge Huycke to John Hicks a Farm Labourer From Warsaw.

CASES HEARD TO-DAY

Kingston will receive a big deputation of B men who appear to have small faith in their former medical examination, and to whom Judge Huycke granted the privilege of another examination. About seventy-five per cent. of the men wished further medical examination, and go tonight. They will report to Judge Huycke on Monday week, with the Medical Board division.

A LEADER.

Charles Stanley Thompson, age 28, who works for the Farm and Dairy, thinks that he is unfit to go. The Judge told him that in the face of the fact he is a leader of boys it is high time he showed an example of what is required of a man. Thompson did not like to leave the firm in difficulties. M. Cowan appeared on his behalf. He will be given a chance for re-examination in Kingston.

WILL GO.

Reggies Windsor, age 25, a farm laborer, is practically the support of his mother. The father is 76 years old. Has three brothers, none at the war, one 28, married, another an E man, and another 16 years of age. Windsor will probably have to go.

Harry Newton, default.

DISTINGUISHED RELATIVES.

George R. Powell, age 34, asked exemption on business grounds. He is a cousin of Gen. Victor Odwin. Powell was given the option of a trip to Kingston.

DIDN'T WANT EXEMPTION.

Harold Hummell, age 20, a painter for Hughson Johnson, had no reason to ask for exemption, and was not looking for it. His Honor commended the boy's spirit.

OFF TO KINGSTON.

John Cronyn, age 25, Walnut street, sought exemption on physical unfitness. Was operated on July 1. Will go for further medical examination, and if he is kept in his present category he will go over the top.

TOO DELICATE.

Edward J. Rosen, age 26, a farmer thinks he is too delicate to go. Works for Michael Casey on a hundred acre farm, and did not think he should leave his employer as his leaving will leave the crop too late going in. If you don't hurry you will be too late going over, said His Honor.

Harold Buckell, salesman at J. J. Turner, is the only support of a widowed mother. He will go to Kingston for further examination.

FATHER IS DECREPIT.

James Varty, a Havelock farmer, has three brothers, one drafted, thinks his father is unable to work. Volunteered with the 93rd, and was turned down; worked for 3 months at the shell factory in Campbellford. He will also have a re-examination, with the probability he will go.

ONLY SUPPORT.

John Hicks, of Warsaw, age 20, is his mother's only support; works for Menaig on a 100-acre farm. He will probably go. Hicks has been a farm laborer, receiving $25 a month. "The King will give you better wages," said His Honor. His mother appeared on his behalf.

Walter Mahew, default.

THREE SOLDIER BROTHERS.

John B. Dyer, Chambers street, age 26, a blacksmith, asked exemption on account of being the only son at home with three brothers overseas, and a father returned from oversas. He will get sympathetic consideation.

WANTS TO GO.

Frank Neary, a moulder, age 25, wanted another examination, and is eported to be indispensable to the Locke works. Neary hoped on further examination to be put in Class A and go overseas.

ANOTHER EXAMINATION.

James L. MacDonald, age 23, is the only support of his mother and sister, is a machinist getting $5.40 a day. Works at the C.G.E. Macdonald will go to Kingston for further medical examination.

"RATHER RECKLESS."

Carmel Reddin, Havelock, a farmer of 23 years of age, works a farm of 20 acres, and has two brothers who are also on farms and live with him. Settlements of the dispensation of the farms were made last fall. "It is astonishing how many things of that kind were made last fall!" was the Judge's comment. Reddin had married in March. "Rather reckless in the face of conditions!" said His Honor. One brother will probably have to go.

TWO AT THE WAR.

Harry Taylor, age 23, accountant for W. H. Hill, has two brothers at the front; is the only child at home, and contributes towards his mother's support. Full exemption could not be given but the case will be given consideration.

Morley Shaver, default.

ANOTHER FOR KINGSTON.

Alex. Pidgeon, age 21, bookkeeper at the Heintzman Co., has one brother in the navy. He claimed that he wished re-examination, not exemption.

LOWER CATEGORY.

Harris and Lansfield ——— on re-examination, were placed in lower category, Harris in E; Lonsfield in C2.

A Birds-Eye View of the Work of the Y.M.C.A. in France

A Stupendous Proposition—is not Conducted from a Monetary Standpoint. Captain Ernie T. Best, formerly of Peterboro, is Now in Charge

The National Council of the Y.M.C.A. of Canada will raise this year $2,250,000.

There are 79 branches of the Canadian Y.M.C.A. in England. Last year there were 9 branches.

96 branches of the Canadian Y.M.C.A. in France. Last year there were 53.

Y.M.C.A. established branches in 20 Canadian Forestry Camps last season.

Dozens of Y.M.C.A. dugouts in forward trenches under fire.

Y.M.C.A. huts also at many points are nightly under fire.

Over 150 Military Secretaries represent Canadian Y.M.C.A. overseas.

Three hundred thousand letters a day are written in Y.M.C.A. overseas buildings.

Troops are furnished with athletic requirements. One single order for baseball equipment totalled $25,000. Estimates this year for athletic equipment, $133,000.

Over 100 pianos in England and France—also 300 gramaphones and 27 moving picture machines.

Splendid service to boys in Canadian camp hospitals. Regular sing-songs and inspirational addresses with distributions of magazines, fruit, chocolates, gum, books and smokes.

Attention to special personal messages.

Circulating libraries in many branches.

Y.M.C.A. spends its money in actual service for soldiers.

Sixty to seventy thousand cups of hot tea and coffee distributed free daily in France. Estimated cost of material only for this service for eight months $48,000.

One hundred and forty thousand magazines purchased and distributed free overseas every month. Cost to Y.M.C.A. for eight months $15,000.

Entertainments, Bible classes, sing-songs, good-night services and personal interviews energetically conducted. At one meeting 100 men definitely announced their decision to go into ministry or Y.M.C.A. work after the war. Estimated expenditure for concerts, lectures, etc., per month $5,000.

Y.M.C.A. conducts a Red Triangle Club in Toronto, St. John, Montreal and other cities, for returned soldiers and enlisted men. A large Y.M.C.A. branch has been opened in Paris, France, for Canadians on leave, and a large building, known as the Beaver Hut, on the Strand, London, England.

Y.M.C.A. service for soldiers extends from Vancouver to the firing line and then back to the patients in hospitals until the men are discharged. After this point the local Y.M.C.A. interests itself in the soldier.

Y.M.C.A. Secretaries accompany troop trains.

Between 400 and 500 millions of letters and cards have been written and posted in Y.M.C.A. tents, huts and dugouts since the beginning of the war.

Special attention is given hospital ships and trains.

Lighting and heating account in English "huts" is very high, so as to provide comfort and encouragement for letter writing.

The Y.M.C.A. sells many needful things to soldiers; it does not carry on trading for the sake of trading, but to meet the needs of the men. We give the soldier the best value possible, but the whole of the profits are spent for his direct benefit.

$125,000 were absorbed in the building of huts in the Corps Area in France in 1917.

The estimated nightly attendance of men at concerts, lectures, etc., is 30,000, and from 55,000 to 60,000 men are served daily in the "Y" canteens.

Peterboro Citizens will be Asked to Contribute $10,000 Next Tuesday, to Support this Splendid Work.

Toronto Objects To Sunday Ice Cream

The Trades and Labour Council are expected to send a large delegation to the regular meeting of the City Council on Monday night to protest against the sale of ice cream, drinks, etc., on Sundays by foreign confectioners.

There is a feeling in Toronto against this business, indicated by the following report from Friday's Telegram:

"At the Board of Control to-day Controller McBride again protested against foreigners dealing in ice cream, candies, lunches, etc., keeping their stores open on Sunday. "It isn't fair to Canadian dealers, who observe the Sabbath," he said.

Controller O'Neill — "They are anxious to get along. People like to go in and get a cool drink on Sunday, too." He expressed the opinion that in time many of these foreigners would become good citizens.

Controller McBride — "They work 23 hours a day and 7 days a week, and send their money home. It is unfair to the Canadian business men."

Controller O'Neill — "If you force these people out of business you will have a large number of vacant stores."

London, May 6. —Civil war activity is proceeding in Ukrainia, owing to the German exactions.

THE ALLIED AVIATORS DESTROY TWENTY THREE HUN BOATS

Enemy Supply Service is Being Effectively Harrassed By Bombing Squadrons.

AMSTERDAM, May 6.— The effective work of allied airmen in harassing the German supply service is described by the newspaper Les Nouvelles of The Hague, which says that allied aviators recently sank in one day twenty-three Belgian boats laden with grave land road material for the German front in Picardy. The vessels at the time were twelve kilometres (eight miles) from the enemy rear line. The newspaper adds:

Namur Bridge Damaged.

"Three weeks ago the Luxemberg bridge at Namur was again badly damaged by aircraft. Two arches were destroyed and one boat was sunk. Three German sentries on the bridge were killed. The movement of vessels to the front never has been so intense as since the opening of the German offensive, and the destruction and devastation wrought by allied airmen never has been so great. Roads had been cut up, so that the Germans experienced great difficulty in bringing up sufficient gravel and stones to fill the craters."

Munitions Train Blown Up.

Les Nouvelles ascertains that it was bombs dropped by allied aircraft that destroyed a railway station in the province of Hainaut, Belgium, on March 22. A munitions train of sixty-four cars was in the station and forty of the cars blew up in succession, killing and wounding many Germans. Rigorous measures were taken immediately to keep onlookers away from the scene of the disaster. A German officer estimated the loss in shells at one million marks.

REPEAT PERFORMANCE WAS GREAT SUCCESS

That the young people of Ennismore made no mistake in yielding to the many requests to repeat "A Bit of Blarney" was strongly evidenced when on Friday, April 26th St. Martin's parish hall was again filled to the utmost capacity, many being present from outside points as well as from Ennismore.

In many circles loud whisperings proclaim the high order of all the acting, but perhaps the greatest tribute to the players was the attendance of, and hearty applause given by, those who had seen the play but a few weeks previously.

During the entertainment fitting short addresses were given by Rev. Fathers McGuire and O'Brien of Peterborough, Father McAuley of Ennismore and Mr. F. D. Kerr, of Peterborough.

Between the acts was rendered the following programme, each number of which was enthusiastically encored.

Violin solo—Mr. Whitehouse.
Quartette—Messrs. Telford, Jopling, Telford and Conway.
Step dance—MacMurthy.
Duet— Mrs. Telford and Miss F. Leahy.
Solo—Sammy Killen.
Recitation—J. Joping.
Solo—Miss F. Leahy.

Kindly Millionaires.

Alfred Charles de Rothschild, of the banking family of that name, who died recently, was a great host and did not confine his hospitality to his own home or to one class. He daily sent from his kitchens the best of his cook's efforts for his many friends, especially those who were sick, and sent many supplies to the poor.

The three Rothschild brothers had certain resemblances to Dickens' Cheery brothers. They met every day, except for a month in the year and spent most of the day together having most things in common. They all died within three years.

Alfred de Rothschild was a close friend of Lord Kitchener and was also on intimate terms with King Edward who sought his advice on many occasions.

PETERBORO EXTENDS CORDIAL WELCOME TO VICE REGAL PARTY

Their Excellencies Were Met At The Station Shortly After Nine O'clock This Morning.

All Peterboro turned out this morning to welcome the Duke of Devonshire and his party on the occasion of the Governor-General's first official visit to Peterboro. Shortly after 9 o'clock the party was met by the band of the 57th Regiment and the Great War Veterans, and escorted to the Central Park, where an address was presented to Their Excellencies on behalf of Peterboro City and County.

The programme for to-day will consist of visits to the Collegiate Institute, the public schools of the city, and the new quarters of the Great War Veterans. The Ducal party will leave on the afternoon train for Toronto, where this evening the Duke of Devonshire will be present at a big meting to be held in Massey Hall in the interests of the Red Triangle Fund.

HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY OPTIONS STILL AVAILABLE

Citizens are reminded of the special advantages offered by the Horticultural Society to new members, and it should be emphasized now that those who intend to join the Society should not delay any longer. In fact this might be regarded as a last call to those who wish to take advantage of the options of shrubs, plants, seeds, and other attractive offerings that comprise this year's list. Those who have waited until planting time, should act at once. Many citizens have already joined, but there is room for more. The Horticultural Society should have a large membership. The membership fee is $1.00, for which two options are given. The list has already been published, and the response indicates the popularity and appeal of its options. In a few weeks it will be too late to obtain the best results from the planting of the articles offered.

MAKE CERTAIN OF YOUR GARDEN.

It is perhaps unnecessary to refer to the greater production campaign now under way. The appeals made to the people have been so insistent and convincing that it is taken for granted that there will be no slackers in the city. There is desirable land to spare within the four boundaries of Peterborough and in its immediate fringe. The effects of the Daylight Savings Bill are becoming more apparent and pronounced as the approaching sun gradually lengthens the days, and above all there is the growing need of food. The fall wheat crop in Ontario has been almost entirely destroyed, an unfortunate setback that should determine citizens to provide as much food for themselves as possible. The country never needed a bumper crop worse than in this fourth summer of the war, and should the harvest of grain even partly fail, citizens will have contributed a small share of service by the fruits of the gardens which they themselves plant and care for.

Reseed Lawns.

Many lawns suffered during the past winter and are showing big, patchy scars that should receive immediate treatment. The ground should be raked vigorously, and a layer of rich earth spread over it. Finally it should be thickly seeded with grass, and some gardners advise that even the lawns that have come through in good condition will be benefitted by reseeding.

VERBOTEN.

(New York Herald)

Hindenburg has had thirty days of grace added to the date he promised the German people he would be in Paris, and is practically as far from his goal to-day as he was when he gave his promise. It can be said for the ruffian of the wooden image, however, that he hasn't yet equalled the Kaiser's record for Parisian dinners missed.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

PRACTICAL DAILY GUIDE FOR VACANT LOT AND BACKYARD GARDENERS ENLISTED IN GREATER PRODUCTION CAMPAIGN.

GETTING READY.

By this time most amateur gardeners have at least made a start. Their ground has been cleaned up. All the old cans, stones, bricks, pieces of wood, broken toys and other kinds of refuse have been removed or buried so deeply that they will not be troublesome. Where this has not been done it is high time that the prospective gardeners "got busy." The basis of successful gardening is the preparation of the soil. In the case of the city lot there are many difficulties to be overcome before the soil is in really good condition. The more working that it gets the better. The soil for vegetables cannot be too well prepared. Many garden seeds are very fine and require well prepared soil to give good germination. Continued cultivation serves to destroy weeds, conserve moisture and maintain a finer physical condition of the soil. This cultivation should be repeated at intervals of a week or two weeks throughout the entire growing season and may be carried on successfully with a hoe and rake.

The soil should be dug to a depth of from 6 to 10 inches and all the lumps should be broken up with a spade or fork. The manure or fertilizer should be well worked into the ground, at least to the full depth of the top soil. The ground should then be carefully raked, as seeds must be sown in soil which has been thoroughly pulverized.

MUSKRAT SKINS WERE VERY SCARCE

Mr. T. E. Curvin, of Dublin street, states that there is a scarcity of muskrat skins this year. Owing to the unusually cold and severe winter the marshes and ponds were frozen to a great depth and consequently the rats could not get air. One farmer found seven dead rats in one house.

Mr. Curvin has bought over 8,000 skins, which he says are the finest and cleanest skins that he ever bought in all his twelve years' experience.

Mr. Curvin, in disposing of his skins, tried, besides the Peterborough market, the Montreal, Toronto and New York markets for prices, but he disposed of his entire catch to the Barrie Company. Prices now are double what they were last year, yet they are in great demand, for Hudson seal and natural muskrat coats.

Communication by Flags.

Those who have read Cooper's novel, "The Pilot," will remember how the American officer instructed his lady love to communicate with him by little flags of varied colors. Cooper, with a novelist's freedom, made his character apply a system which had already been extensively experimented with in the British and French navies. For after much experimenting combinations of flags of various shapes and colors were gradually developed into what we call a "code" today. Probably the most famous flag signal ever flown was Nelson's at Trafalgar, but it required a great number of combinations of flags (hoists, they are technically called) to spell out: "England expects that every man will do his duty."

Women in India Need Education.

At a meeting of the Woman's Indian Study association, Miss Boyd, secretary in England for the Woman's University settlement, Bombay, said that only one per cent of Indian women could read. She declared the great need was for the Indian girls to take up the profession of medicine. It had been stated by an authority that an Indian woman in child birth had less chance than a soldier on the battlefield.

THE STUDIO LUNCHEON

THE STUDIO LUNCHEON.

CHAPTER LIX.

What a treat it was to roam about Merton's fascinating studio with no one to find fault because I was too enthusiastic or because I did not stop to consider every word and action.

He showed us a lovely, breezy, out-of-doors thing that he was doing; also a portrait of a society woman.

"How do you like it," he asked as I stood before the easel on which the latter picture was placed.

"Some of it is lovely. Her skin, her dress, her hair, are exquisite," I replied. "But somehow I don't like her face. I am trying to find out why. She is rather handsome, so it isn't that. You don't mind, do you?"

"Mind! I am delighted to have a perfectly frank critic. You see people flatter the artist, usually, by flattering his work, whether they like it or not."

"I know what it is!" I exclaimed. "Her face is cold, almost hard. She looks as if she did not have any—soul. Please don't think me horrid to say such a thing." Just then Merton's man brought in the luncheon, so he did not answer for a moment. Evelyn came over and stood by me, and said laughingly:

"Helen is right. There is no soul in that picture."

THE ARTIST IS PLEASED.

"That's just my own criticism, mesdames," Merton said, joining us while the table was being arranged. "And when I paint her with a visible soul, it isn't she. You see she is so cold, so—if you call it that—so souless, that in attempting to depict her as having one, all resemblance to the subject is gone. Her very personality is in the lack of what you call soul. She has been such a stickler for form, so afraid to show any emotion that would look like interest, or line her face, that she is more like a society automaton than anything else. But I see Henry is getting impatient. He is afraid his creamed chicken will be cold!"

"Creamed chicken! How I love it! This is delicious," Evelyn enthused.

It was delicious, as was the crisp celery, the thin, delicately browned toast, the fruit salad, and the coffee, with the thin wafers. A luncheon, I thought, of which even Mrs. Sexton would approve.

"Aren't you cozy here in these lovely rooms, with such a man to wait upon you?" Evelyn remarked. "I do not wonder you remain a bachelor. If all men were situated as you are there would be no chance for the poor girls."

"Why should a man marry for a home, any more than does a girl?" Merton asked. "You sort of condemn a girl who admits that she marries for a home and someone to support her. Why not feel the same toward a man who marries for a housekeeper?"

"Then you believe"—

"I believe that neither men nor women should marry, when they marry young, without a love that will make anything that comes to them easy to bear because they are together," he interrupted Evelyn, speaking very seriously. "And when they marry when older, a respect for each other, a feeling of companionship, which in a way, makes up for the exuberance of youth."

"My, how serious!" Evelyn laughed, but I said nothing. I was thinking over what he had said.

"Now, that Henry hasn't anything more for us, would you like to see my bachelor diggings?" Merton asked as we finished our coffee.

"Surely! We are having a wonderful time, aren't we, Helen?" Evelyn queried, looking as contented as possible.

"Indeed we are," I replied, as we rose and followed our host.

He showed us first his kitchen, the daintiest, cleanest place possible. Henry was tidying up, himself as spotless as the kitchen.

"I have had the idea that artists were careless, both in their appearance and in their household arrangements," I said, "but I shall never think so again."

"I could not be untidy if I wanted to; Henry wouldn't allow it."

The bedroom was as immaculate as the kitchen. A man's room in every particular. Severe with no useless trifles scattered about. But the room was big and had three large windows. A comfortable room which I thought was someway more restful than our elaborately furnished sleeping rooms.

The little room where we had lunched was his "breakfast room," he told told us. He nearly always dined out. Then the big studio with its finished and unfinished pictures, its quaint bric-a-brac and bronzes picked up on his travels, which interested me the most of all.

To-morrow: New thoughts and new ideas.

Don't Diet Yourself TO CURE DYSPEPSIA IT ISN'T NECESSARY

The sufferer from dyspepsia and indigestion who has to pick and choose his food, is the most miserable of all mankind.

Even the little he does eat causes such torture, and is digested so imperfectly that it does him little good.

What dyspeptics need is not dieting, or artificial digestants, but something that will put their stomach right so it will manufacture its own digestive ferments.

For forty years now Burdock Blood Bitters has been making weak stomachs strong, and curing severe cases of dyspepsia and indigestion that other remedies were powerless to reach.

It restores the stomach to a normal healthy condition so that the food no longer causes distress, but is thoroughly digested and assimilated, and goes on its way making rich, red blood.

Mrs. Henry Shaw, Campbellton, N.B., writes: "I was for five years troubled with a weak stomach, and could not eat any food that would agree with me. I tried different medicines, but could not get cured. A friend advised me to take Burdock Blood Bitters. I took four bottles, and now I am in perfect health."

FEW FOLKS HAVE GRAY HAIR NOW

Druggist Says Ladies Are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur

Hair that loses its colour and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even colour, that beautiful dark shade of hair, which is so attractive, use only this old time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture improved by the addition of other ingredients by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite to impart colour and a youthful appearance to the hair. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

ETERNAL VIGILANCE.

(New York Herald.)

Undoubtedly unrest among the Slav peoples within the borders of the dual monarchy is approaching the stage of revolt. Unquestionably the conviction is now growing among the people of Germany that the great drive for the Channel ports is doomed to failure and that all the Kaiser and his war lords have to show for a few miles of territory gained is a frightful toll of German dead.

While popular discontent may be one factor in the promotion of the peace offensive now being launched by Austria-Hungary in Italy and by German agents in Switzerland, it is a factor of secondary importance.

Another desperate effort to drive for a German peace is the neutral and the expected consequence of the military drive on the western front. Failure to achieve its ends on the battlefield prompts Prussianism to another desperate effort to achieve them by chicanery.

Had there been no Brest-Litovsk to bring "utter disillusionment" there might be a possibility of the government of the United States being caught in this new Prussian trap. Happily that danger has been removed. Any official consideration of peace proposals from the truculent enemies of civilization short of their unconditional surrender is impossible.

It is important, however, that all Americans be on their guard against the insidious German propaganda which is bound to be active in this country in the guise of pacifism, or what the French called "defeatism." The danger of this form of pro-Germanism as revealed in Italy last year was disclosed in the treason of Bolo Pasha, is in evidence in the affair of the Bonnet Rouge, now under investigation at Paris.

This country has its Bolos. German money has been planted here in large quantities. Now that Prussianism has decreed a new peace offensive that money will be expected to bring results.

It is the duty of every loyal American to co-operate with the government in running to earth every form of defeatism and the persons participating in it. Watch the pacifist, watch the whisperers, watch those publications which show themselves engaged in the same game as that of the Bonnet Rouge.

"The condition upon which God hath given liberty to man is eternal vigilance."

THE MAKING OF A FAMOUS MEDICINE

How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Is Prepared For Woman's Use.

A visit to the laboratory where this successful remedy is made impresses even the casual looker-on with the reliability, accuracy, skill and cleanliness which attends the making of this great medicine for woman's ills.

Over 350,000 pounds of various herbs are used anually and all have to be gathered at the season of the year when their natural juices and medicinal substances are at their best.

The most successful solvents are used to extract the medicinal properties from these herbs.

Every utensil and tank that comes in contact with the medicine is sterilized and as a final precaution in cleanliness the medicine is pasteurized and sealed in sterile bottles.

It is the wonderful combination of roots and herbs, together with the skill and care used in its preparation which has made this famous medicine so successful in the treatment of female ills.

The letters from women who have been restored to health by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound which we are continually publishing attest to its virtue.

THOUGHT WILL RULE WORLD

Scientist Asserts Ships at Sea Will Be Controlled From Shore and Gasoline Will Be Grown Like Corn.

In the lobby of a big Fifth avenue club one evening recently, a group of scientific men were discussing the idea as being the necessity that will bring about some startling inventions, notes a New York correspondent. In the sprinkling of intellectuals present were not stamped by nothing is impossible that an ordinary bystander would have tapped his forehead knowingly.

One of them was telling about an eminent who is already telephoning to airplanes without wires. Another quoted a famous inventor who said that it would only be a short while until all telephone wires would be abolished as unessential.

"The fact is," he said, "that telephone wires do not in reality carry our messages. Every scientist knows that. Back of it all is the great process of thought, which we are only beginning feebly to understand.

"The more we delve into this process of thought—whatever it is—the more we come to the conclusion that the material phenomena is the projection of thought. We know that every material thing comes from a thought or an idea.

"We are arriving at the conclusion that even space is thought, for we are annihilating space every day through a thinking process. It will not be many generations before every ship at sea is controlled by thought from shore. Our trains are going to be run without fuel, and we are going to grow gasoline just like we raise corn."

BUTCHER CITES BIG PROFITS

Meat Dealer Points Out Pills, Mineral Water and False Teeth as Producers of Immense Margins.

"Talk about food profiteers!" growled the butcher, as he charged up a two-pound rump steak at 60 cents a pound. "Why I know people whose profit has been from time immemorial 6,000 per cent and more. Yet you don't jump on them. Why, then, jump on me?

"Take Junck's liver pill, for instance. I know Otto Junck's bookkeeper, and the man tells me that this Junck pill sells wholesale at exactly 6,000 per cent profit.

"Take mineral water—plain soda. You can make and sell plain soda at a profit of 40,000 per cent. And, mind you, no kicks.

"Take false teeth. They used to make false teeth out of ivory, and in those days it was right to charge $100 a set for them. But now false teeth are made of porcelain. They cost 10 cents apiece. Dentist's profit, 76,000 per cent.

"So I could go on. And you ask me if my conscience isn't sore about this 60-cent rump steak. Oh!"

Offensive Breath Caused Usually By Catarrh

A Simple Remedy Discovered That Cures Without Drugs.

The American people suffer more from Catarrh than from any other disease. It undermines more constitutions and creates more sickness than all other diseases combined. It is, therefore, very dangerous.

You can't successfully treat Catarrh by internal dosing—you must in some way send a purifying, healing agent through the breathing organs, so that the germs can be reached. This you do every time you inhale Catarrhozone. Its rich essences and healing balsams are breathed all through the nose, throat and lungs, and effectively destroy every trace of Catarrh. This is a proven fact.

I endorse Catarrhozone because I know of six bad cases of Catarrh, including my own, that it has cured. It is a sensible remedy because it is capable of going where the disease is. I believe it cures quicker than other remedy because it gets sooner to the source of the disease than anything else I know of. I had headaches, bad breath, and much stomach trouble associated with my Catarrh, but they have disappeared since using Catarrhozone, which keeps me free from colds, headaches, catarrh and all winter ills." OTTO E. KRAMER, Belleville, Ont.

Catarrhozone is needed in every home. Large size lasts 2 months, price $1.00; small size, 50c.; trial size, 25c. At all storekeepers and druggists or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

A Woman Detective

By ETHEL HOLMES

We hear little of the work of woman detectives, but for my part I don't see why women should not excel in this field. A detective needs the faculty of noticing small things, as indicatory of large things, and that is just what women possess.

For this reason I, a woman, chose the detective field by which to make a living, and succeeded. My first case gave me a standing that another might have been years in acquiring. But I will admit there was an element of luck in it.

A family of some means living in a not very attractive portion of the city had the misfortune to lose a little girl seven years of age. They felt sure the child had been kidnaped for ransom, though there was not the slightest evidence to support the theory. The mother had left the little girl on her doorsteps while she went to the next door neighbor for a chat. She said that she was away only a few minutes but her statements proved that the time of her absence was nearly an hour. At any rate, when she returned to her own house her daughter was not on the steps nor in the house.

The next day the mother gave the case to the detective agency where I had just been employed. I would not have been assigned to the work had not every other detective in the employ of the office been busy. As it was, the chief turned to me to use my wits, not of insepctions which were intended to make up for my inexperience.

As soon as I left him I went to work in my own way. After an interview with the mother I made up my mind that the child had been kidnaped, and I thought it likely that the kidnaper inhabited the region not far away which was filled with foreigners of a very low type. I put an advertisement in several foreign language newspapers that circulated in the region, stating that if the kidnapers of the child—giving the street and number—would leave a statement of the ransom required under the front door, the case could be settled without recourse to the police.

Within two or three days Mrs. Smitzburger, the mother, came to me with a note that had been thrust under the front door. I examined it closely before opening it, but found no clue. It had been written by an uneducated person, evidently a foreigner, since several words in it seemed to have been supplied from some foreign language. I took it to my former perceptor at the Normal school, who knew something of every language spoken on the face of the earth, and after a careful study of it he told me that it had been dictated by an Irishman, but the writer was an Italian.

Much surprised at this report, I asked him how he knew this, and he said that certain English words were spelled as an Irishman would pronounce them, and there were certain words that were distinctly Irish. One of these was the word between, which was spelled betune. The professor pointed out a number of these instances, and I was convinced that his theory was correct. Either an Irishman or an Italian was the culprit, and probably both were interested in the ransom demanded, which was $2,000.

I dictated a response to the mother of the child, stating that the ransom demanded would be paid and asking where it could be left. When the response was handed to me I examined it critically, as I had the first letter before opening it, but I found only a dirty envelope. I was sitting before a table made of light wood. After reading the letter, I noticed on the light surface a black hair about an inch long. I felt sure that it had not been there before I had opened the letter, and surmised that it had fallen from the envelope. I took up the hair and examined it closely. It was a glossy black, with a tinge of grease, except on the larger end, where there was possibly a sixteenth of an inch of red.

I reasoned that I had a very low class, considered intellectually, to deal with, and bethought myself how I could make the kidnapers believe that I knew them. After a good deal of thinking, I concluded to resort again to communication through the newspaper. I put a personal in the papers I had already used as follows:

"The kidnapers of the little girl (of such a street and number) are known to me. If you will return the child unharmed, you will not be prosecuted. If you do not you will be sent to state prison. The mother prefers this course to arresting and punishing you. To convince you that you are known I will say that one of the two parties interested in the matter is an Italian; the other is an Irishman with red hair which he dyes black. If the child is not returned to her home within four days the parties will be dealt with as criminals.

"Private Detective."

I put in the ad with misgivings, though there was good reason to hope the scheme would be successful. On the morning of the fourth day of grace, when I had given up hoping, soon after daylight a child's cry was heard on Mrs. Smitherger's doorsteps. The woman ran down, and found her little daughter.

My success surprised my detective associates, and I was at once entered for regular work beside old hands at the business. It is needless to say that the mother of the child was exceptionally happy.

Montreal a Busy Port

Who would think of finding a busy seaport one thousand miles from the sea? Canada, that land of marvelous development, has one—it is Montreal, its metropolis— Built on the Island of Montreal that lifts Mount Royal where the waters of the great St. Lawrence and Ottawa Rivers mingle, its site is admirable. This marks the head of ocean navigation and here the great ocean-crossing ships meet the lake and river boats. The cargoes brought from the west by boat and rail are transferred to ocean carriers and start on their way to faraway ports by an initial voyage down the mighty St. Lawrence, thirty feet deep at this point.

During 1917 Montreal witnessed the sailing away from her wharves of more than sixty-five million bushels of grain. Over two-thirds of this grain came into Montreal by rail, chiefly on the tracks of the Canadian Pacific Railway and was handled with little or no congestion. This was accomplished through a co-operative arrangement. The representatives of all transportation lines met in conference with Montreal's Harbour Commission and after discussion decided that 650 cars of export freight should be delivered daily by the lines, the Commissioners undertaking to handle that amount without congestion. This they have done successfully.

Because of secrecy entailed by the war, little has been heard concerning movements of vessels and it will surprise many to learn that 647 ocean vessels came into Montreal harbour during 1917. Naturally passenger travel has been greatly curtailed. The war demands nearly all available ship space for the transport of supplies. These have been going forward in immense quantities and landed on the other side with comparatively few losses — thanks to the efficient convoy system maintained by England. In addition to the great grain shipments, other products of the fruitful Prairie Provinces—meats, fresh and cured, butter and cheese—are going forward in a steady stream to feed the hungry millions of Europe and our armies overseas.

This volume of shipping means unceasing activity in the elevators, warehouses and along Montreal's waterfront. It has given an added stimulus to shipbuilding, the 1917 output of one firm being 9 steel trawler hulls, and installed supplied boilers and machinery; 8 steel trawler hulls complete with boilers and machinery; 26 wooden drifter hulls; installed machinery and boilers in 16 drifters; built and launched one 7,000-ton cargo boat; docked and repaired 30 vessels—a creditable showing. There are many more yards and they have all been correspondingly busy. Recently a new departure in shipbuilding was initiated when a concrete vessel was launched. If developments justify the use of this sort of craft, Montreal shipyards are ready to embark in the new industry. Such an event would call for more laborers and the installation of new machinery, all adding to Montreal's prosperity. There have been no labor troubles and work goes on week days, holidays and Sundays, without interruption. Not one of the 214 days—May to November, inclusive—was an idle day in the shipyards. These busy, well-paid workers spell good business for Montreal's merchants.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

An Adroit Match Maker

By ELINOR MARSH

Mrs. Crawford was a wealthy widow with no children. Tom Erkine, her nephew, was the most likely person to inherit her property, but he had never received any intimation that she would leave it to him. He did not live with her, nor had she ever especially favored him. Still he was her only near living relative, so it was inferred that he would be substantially remembered in her will.

One evening, on going to his bachelor room before dinner, he found a package there with a note from his aunt. The note read:

"Dear Tom: I saw this smoking jacket at the woman's exchange today and it occurred to me that it would fit you. I hope you will enjoy many an after-dinner smoke in it.

"Your affectionate
"Aunt Eliza."

What under the sun had induced his aunt to give him a smoking jacket Tom could not understand. His room was simply a sleeping place for him, and, with no one there but himself, he would never have thought of remaining in it for any other purpose.

When Tom came from his club that evening, before going to bed he thought he would have a smoke. So he lighted a pipe, and putting on the smoking jacket, after looking at himself in a mirror, he sat down to enjoy his final day's whiff. Naturally his hands found their way into the side pockets and in one of them was a crumpled bit of paper. Taking it out he saw writing on it, which he read, as follows:

"If this jacket falls into the hands of a bachelor, I can give him something to think about. It was made by a girl twenty years old, who is forced to earn her living with her hands. That is all I have to say about myself. Your imagination may do the rest if you are disposed to pursue it."

"That's a pretty plain bid for a husband," said Tom to himself. "She knows that all I have to do is to go to the Woman's Exchange with the jacket, ask who made it, enter upon a correspondence with her and, presto! we are changed from two lonely persons to one happy couple. But not for Tom; he has all he can do to provide for himself, without furnishing a living for a family."

But his curiosity had been kindled. He wondered what sort of a looking girl she was. Blonde or brunette? Tall or short? What harm could come from a mild flirtation with her? There is always a pleasant anticipation in an expected meeting of this kind. At the end of a week Tom took his jacket to the Woman's Exchange and asked the manager—a business-like woman—who made it.

"We never give the names of those who deposit goods with us for sale," was the reply.

Tom saw at once that he was balked. He could think of no possible way of learning the name of the maker of his jacket. He gave the matter up reluctantly. One day he said to his aunt:

"Aunt Eliza, I found in the pocket of that smoking jacket you gave me a note from the girl who made it."

Tom gave the good lady as nearly as he could remember the reading of the note, and told her that he had been refused her name at the Woman's Exchange.

Mrs. Crawford explained to her nephew that goods were left for sale at the Woman's Exchange by persons who had been brought up in comfort, and some of the depositors were received in the best society. Many of these did not care to have it known, that they made money in this way, though there was no disgrace in what they did. "I think they will tell me at the exchange," added Mrs. Crawford, "the name you wish to know. I will get it for you and introduce you to the girl, but you must promise me to keep to yourself the fact of your knowing her secret."

Not long after this Tom was invited to dine with his aunt, and on reaching the house found there a young lady. He asked Mrs. Crawford if she was the girl who made the smoking jacket, and was informed that she was.

The girl was evidently a lady. She was plainly dressed, but in excellent taste; and when Mrs. Crawford remarked that she made all their own clothes, was not too proud to acknowledge the fact.

Well, to make a long story short, a few months later Mrs. Crawford, finding these two in love with each other, made a settlement on Tom which enabled him to marry.

Immediately after the wedding, while surrounded by his and his wife's relatives, he took from his pocket the note he had found in his smoking jacket and handed it to his wife.

"What's this?" she asked.

"The note you wrote to catch a husband."

"I know nothing about it. I never saw it before."

"What?"

Then Mrs. Crawford stepped in and confessed that she had written the note herself and had slipped it into the pocket of the jacket before sending it to Tom.

"I have known your wife," she added, "ever since she was a little girl. I set about making a match between you two and have succeeded. Together you will inherit what I possess."

In Herschel Island.

In Herschel Island, where the sun shines continuously for eight weeks in summer, the Eskimos had a sundance, not always clothed in the garments of propriety. They had an idea that when the sun came back its movements were directed by an invisible power, but they had no tangible conception of a God. They had no belief in a future life, either of reward or punishment. To-day they are religious, truthful, kind to their children and to the aged. They are ambitious to learn, they are practical, extremely industrious, sanitary in their habits, well clothed and well housed. Insanity is unknown, but tuberculosis is quite common.

They whale in summer and trap in winter. They are clever in trading, good workers on land, water and ice, and take excellent care of their household effects. Tools broken are neatly repaired. When at Herschel Island or Fort McPherson they eat the white man's food with great relish. In summer they eat their fish and blubber raw and in winter frozen. They like food cooked, but it is a matter of indifference to them. They will barter for the white man's food, eat a hearty meal of it, and then go out and eat blubber and raw fish as dessert. The contents of a deer's stomach they consider a great delicacy.

The Eskimos have no fear of death; if told that death is approaching they will respond with a complacent smile. They are even more stoical than the Mongolian. Trouble does not affect them at all. They are a very happy people. Their natures are childlike, and they do not continue in the same frame of mind for two minutes at a time. They are good-natured and humorous and very inquisitive. Their emotions are sudden and short-lived — uproariously happy one moment and almost crying the next. Their faces are now wreathed in smiles, now a picture of woe.

A College Peddler

By ALAN HINSDALE

Billy Waterman had gone to college with a rich father behind him, and had gotten away with three thousand dollars of his father's money, spending a thousand a year on himself, when Mr. Waterman's business went to smash and there was not a thousand cents for Billy's senior year.

Billy had good grit and made up his mind that he would make the money needed for his senior year. Seeing an ad for canvassers for a new kind of cooking utensil, he answered it. He was invited to call on the advertiser. He did so, and an arrangement was made by which he was to sell, on commission, the wares for the concern manufacturing the articles.

Billy's social position had been at the top round of the ladder. He had not climbed to it; he was born on it. He had the energy necessary to carry out his plan, but to go forth as a solicitor was the great ogre that he had to combat. He shrank from soliciting from his acquaintances, confining himself to strangers. He had a good article to sell and was well fitted to demonstrate it. Nevertheless, in the beginning he met with little success.

One morning he mounted the steps of a stone-front dwelling and was about to ring the bell when the door was opened by a young lady in walking costume. Billy had his samples hanging to his arm, peddler-like. The young lady looked at him in a way that made him feel a desire to vanish, but he stood his ground, saying:

"I have some valuable implements for cooking which I would like to show the lady of the house."

"The lady of the house is not in," was the reply, "but I will look at your wares."

She invited Billy in and listened attentively to his demonstration. When he had finished, without asking the price of the articles, she said she would take them. Billy told her that those he had with him were samples and took her order in a book he carried for the purpose, mentioning that the goods would be sent from the factory. He also stated the price, which did not seem to interest the young lady. Then he took his departure, congratulating himself on the ease with which he had made the sale, and at the same time relieved at having escaped from acting the drummer to a young lady with whom it would seem more fitting that he should dance the cotillion.

A few days later, on going to the office of the firm, he was handed a letter written in a delicate hand, his own name being written on the envelope. The writer stated that the culinary articles he had sold her had been so satisfactory that she had recommended them to a number of her friends. Then followed half a dozen names of persons to whom he was requested to send the articles.

Billy was puzzled to know how the young lady had learned his name. He had not left a card, nor had he spoken his name to her. He asked the person who had shipped the goods if his name had been brought into the shipment in any way. The man could not remember, but he did not see why the mention of Billy's name should have been necessary.

During the vacation period Billy succeeded in making commissions enough to put him through his senior year at college. He was puzzled by the fact that while he had very poor success in making sales directly, he had excellent success in making them indirectly. Orders were continually sent in to be credited to him from persons he had no remembrance of having solicited. He often left his business card with persons who said they would "think it over," but he did not often succeed in connecting the names of those who sent in orders with these persons.

Billy's standing for his senior year was far better than any other year. He had worked for what he was getting and therefore appreciated it. He was given an appointment to speak on commencement day, and while delivering his oration, his eye lighted on a familiar face in the audience. It was the girl to whom he so easily sold a set of kitchen utensils. She was looking up at him with great interest.

Billy came very near being thrown off the thread of his discourse by thus suddenly seeing the girl whom he had supposed only knew him as a peddler of kitchen utensils. He stopped and stammered for a while, but righted himself and proceeded.

That evening the graduating class gave a dance and again Billy's eye lighted on the girl whom he had met as a peddler. She was dancing with one of his classmates. Billy "cut in"—that is, he touched the man with whom she was dancing on the shoulder, signifying that he desired to dance with his partner. The girl, in turning to Billy, smiled merrily.

After a brief spin the two moved away from the throng and Billy asked how she had learned his name. She told him that she had danced with him in her halcyon days. She knew of the cutting off of his support and, admiring his pluck, had interested herself in securing customers for him. Indeed, most of them had come through her.

Billy is making a success in life and it is rumored that he will marry the girl who helped him through his senior year in college.

HIGH COST IN WASHINGTON

Houses and Apartments Rent at Fabulous Prices—One Woman Promises Ordinary Wear and Tear.

Two women sat at a local theater the other night. They were dressed "fit to kill," in the good old Hoosier idiom, and wore diamonds galore, writes Charles E. Tracewell in Washington Star.

They were talking about the subject of rents, a topic of absorbing interest in Washington just now, when a house or apartment of any kind is difficult to obtain for love or money.

It has been a matter of gossip that many wealthy people have come to Washington recently, and that many of these have rented furnished houses and apartments at fabulous rates.

The two women at the theater were discussing this very thing. What was more, one of them was one of those wealthy ones in question, judging from what she said.

"You know, my dear," she was saying to the other, "I won't say I'm going to use an ax, but"—she smiled significantly—"when my lease is over"—and she smiled again—"well, there is going to be some ordinary wear and tear, my dear, there is going to be some ordinary wear and tear."

The Judge, He Knows.

"What, you here again?" exclaimed a New York police magistrate when his eyes fell upon a familiar face before the bar. "Why, you're only out of the workhouse," said the magistrate to the man, who was arraigned for striking his wife. "Well, you see, judge," began the prisoner, "we have mice in the house—you know how it is, judge—and my wife set a trap for them. I was going around the room in my bare feet—you know how it is, judge—not thinking of the trap. I stepped on the bait and my big toe caught in the sharp wire noose—you know how it is, judge." "What's that got to do with striking your wife?" "I threw the trap at her—you know how it is, judge—and she didn't dodge it." "No, I don't know how it is. You had been drinking last night." "I had one drink—you know how it is, judge." "Two months in the workhouse—you know how it is," said the magistrate.

Palpaitation of the Heart and Nerve Troubles
WERE CURED BY
Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills

When the heart begins to beat irregularly or intermittently, palpitate and throb, skip beats, beat fast for a time, then so slow as to seem almost to stop, it causes great anxiety and alarm and the least excitement or exertion seems to affect it.

Many people are kept in a state of morbid fear of death, become weak, worn and miserable through this unnatural action of the heart.

To all sufferers from heart troubles we would advise the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, which by their action in strengthening the heart and regulating the beat remove all the distressing conditions, and impart vigor and vitality to the system.

Mrs. Thomas Davidson, Mount Brydges, Ont., writes: "I have been a great sufferer in the past with nerve troubles and palpitation of the heart. I tried several remedies, but without any good results. My son came in one day and advised me to take Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. After using one and a half boxes, I am fully recovered, and am in a perfect state of health, thanks to your valuable medicine."

Gulls in the Hencoop.

A curious custom of the Newfoundland fishermen is that of keeping seagulls of a large species as domestic fowls. They capture the young while they are nestlings, and rear them on fish, confining them in pens. Their eggs are eaten, and, for lack of a turkey or goose for Christmas, the fisherman is satisfied with a selection from his coop of fattened gulls.

BOARD HOLDS NO MEETINGS

President Decides All Questions for Members, but Never Calls Them in for a Conference.

There is no more familiar title among government departments than the board of trade. It seems to be responsible for all kinds of things and all sorts of undertakings and happenings. It will find you a chairwoman or negotiate a commercial treaty. It consists of a president and a large number of members among whom are reckoned the Archbishop of Canterbury and the speaker of the house of commons, a writer in London Tit-Bits states.

By law these members have a right to be called to discuss questions of trade and to help the president to shape his policy, yet the fact remains no meetings are ever held! The president never dreams of calling his committee together. He does much as he likes, comes to his own decisions, and then announces that "the board thinks so and so."

One wonders what would happen if the archbishop or some other member were to insist upon being consulted, this this surprising method of doing business should cease.

The board of trade does not stand alone. Every school-teacher in the land knows that "my lords" say this and "my lords" rule that. Their full title is "the lords of the committee of the privy council of education;" but they never meet, and the vice president would probably be puzzled to name a half-dozen of them. Mr. Fisher and his predecessors rule without "my lords," but in their name. Thus do they get credit for the good they do and are a refuge in the day of storm.

Fight For Honor.

Think well about great things; and know that thought is the only reality in this world. Lift up nature to thine own stature; and let the whole universe be for thee no more than the reflection of thine own heroic soul. Combat for honor's sake; that alone is worthy of a man. And if it should fall to thee to receive wounds, shed thy blood as a beneficent dew, and smile.—Cervantes.

His Headquarters.

A small feather pillow which nestled in a glass case in the historical museum created especial interest among the visitors. "I don't see anything unusual about that pillow," remarked a girl, turning to the guide. "It's a very valuable pillow," replied the guide. "That is Washington's original headquarters."

Referred to Boy Scouts.

When war broke out a young man who was every kind of rogue suddenly acquired a brand-new conscience, and worked it overtime, says London Tit-Bits. When he came before the tribunal he had got his conscientious objections all cut and dried. The chairman listened gravely for a little while, until the bogus C. O., warming to his subject, began to get flowery.

"Yes," he cried, lifting his eyes to heaven, "in 1905 I was born again!"

"In that case," broke in the chairman, quietly, "have you any objection to joining the boy scouts?"

Had Headaches Was Always Tired

Sleep or Rest Was Impossible, For Nervous System Was Greatly Exhausted and Irritated

Jordan, Ont., March 15. — As the result of Mrs. Thwaites' happy experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, many people in this district have put this great food cure to the test and proven its exceptional restorative powers.

This was an extreme case of nervous exhaustion and the cure effected was so thorough and radical that there could be no doubt of the value of this treatment. This is how Mrs. Thwaites describes her cure, and her statement is certified to by her pastor.

Mrs. Stephen G. Thwaites, Box 205, Jordan, Ont., writes: "For about a year I was troubled with nervousness, and took doctors' medicine, but it did not seem to relieve me. I could not sleep nor content myself to do anything. I had severe headaches, was tired all the time, and afraid to stay alone. I also tried several nerve medicines until almost discouraged. At last I discovered Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and found relief in this. I had only taken one box when I began to feel better. I continued using this treatment until my nerves were restored to perfect health. I think the Nerve Food splendid for nervous troubles of any kind, and cannot recommend it too highly."

Rev. S. F. Coffman, Vineland, Ont., states: "This is to certify that I know Mrs. Thwaites, and her statements are correct."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

PHILOSOPHY OF MAIN CHANCE

Lonely Bachelor Realizes Mistake in Not Welcoming Both Joy and Sorrow Into His Life.

I read a story in a current magazine today. And after I read a certain part of it I laid the magazine down, and I too, looked far away. But I looked past the printed page into a damp, dimly lighted trolley car—and into the heart of my friend who feared to grasp a vision, Margaret E. Sangster writes in the Christian Herald.

In the story a wealthy old bachelor was telling his reason for never having married.

"I began to wonder," he said, "whether there was any advantage in marrying at all. I saw a lot of people who were wretchedly unhappy together, and even more wretched after they had dissolved their matrimonial ties. I discovered that marriage usually meant children, anxiety, sickness and death. I took counsel of my fears. Why fall in love and marry if by doing so I was going to expose myself to the arrows of outrageous fortune? My parents were both dead. Sorrow couldn't touch me. Why invite unhappiness? If I had no family I should have only myself to look out for—to worry about—and when I died nobody would suffer agonies of bereavement on my account. So I shut myself up in my shell and built an iron wall around my affections to keep out sorrow.

"I was a fool! What wouldn't I give now to have had sorrow! Many's the time I've envied my friend with a dead child. Pain and joy go hand in hand. Deaden your capacity for one and you lose the other. Today I'd rather have had a year or so with a woman I had loved and have lost her than to be what I am—a lonely, childless, wifeless, friendless old man."

I read the paragraph over. And then I took it to a man I know—I call him sometimes, to myself, the philosopher.

"I think," he told me, "that the reasoning is quite right!

"There's an old proverb that covers the whole thing. I think. 'Tis better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all!' The word 'love' isn't the only one that will fit into that proverb. You can put 'live' in place of love, or 'known' or 'felt!'

"I think," I said, "that you're right. 'Tis better," I mused, "to have lived, to have known, to have loved—and lost—"

"You know," said the philosopher, "that every chance isn't a losing chance. Some people live and know and feel and love without losing!"

CHILDREN MUST BE PROTECTED

The children must be safeguarded, for, if they do survive the frequent coughs and colds, it is often with the lungs so weakened that they become chronic sufferers from bronchitis or consumption. Being composed of simple ingredients of undoubted value, Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is admirably suited as a treatment for children. It is pleasant to taste. So much so that children delight to take it on this account as well as because of the quick relief it affords them.

POPE PLAYS JOKE ON ARTIST

Quotes Bible Verse to Verify Genuineness of Potrait of Himself Executed by an American Painter.

Pope Benedict is known to have a keen sense of humor. It has lately been expended upon an American resident in Rome who thinks himself a portrait painter, says a Rome correspondent.

This gentleman, with the best intentions, asked the pope for permission to paint his portrait, which would later grace the walls of the Vatican, alongside of the masterpieces of the universe.

The pope granted the request, but stipulated that he should give only one sitting, and that the portrait should be finished by help of photographs.

The portrait was finished recently. The artist found it so good that he longed to have it shown first in America, lest his fellow citizens should reproach him for hiding such a work of art in Italy, without giving them a chance of admiring his genius. To this the pope graciously agreed. But the artist went further.

As there are so many spurious portraits of the pope, would his holiness write a few lines to prove to skeptical Americans that the artist had really painted the masterpiece? The pope promised a few words in a few days.

They arrived. To the painter's astonishment—and chagrin—they proved to be from the Gospel of St. Matthew, chapter 14:27. They ran: "It is I; be not afraid."

Tractor Has Feet and Legs.

A tractor without wheels designed especially for dragging cultivators in cornfields, is described by Popular Mechanics Magazine. Instead of wheels it has four legs with ski-shaped feet, these legs having hip, knee and ankle joints and they take steps like those of an animal.

The legs are driven by a gasoline motor. They are steered around corners by making those on one side take longer steps than those on the other and reversing is accomplished by transferring the knee-caps from the front to the back of the joints.

The machine can straddle a row of six-foot corn without touching the stalks.

Convenient Hearing

By OSCAR COX

After the conclusion of the war between the states there were a number of old negroes who had lived all their lives on the plantation on which they were born, under a kind master, who preferred to remain under the same conditions as before. Many of them were devotedly attached to the family that had held them in bondage.

Colonel Archibald, the owner of a plantation in Tennessee, came out of the Confederate army minus an arm. He called his former slaves before him, most of whom had remained on the plantation, and told them they were free. Those who wished to leave him were at liberty to do so, and those who wished to remain would be paid what the crops afforded. Nearly all elected to remain.

The property adjoining the Archibald plantation was bought by Anthony Grub, a Northern man, who had gone south shortly before the outbreak of the war and joined the Confederate army of contractors, making a pile of money which in some way he managed to convert into United States bonds at a very low figure. It was to make himself solid with the Southern people that he espoused the Southern cause. He befriended Colonel Archibald, lending him money with which to begin anew to work his plantation for a different purpose.

When Grub got Colonel Archibald sufficiently indebted to him he began to squeeze him with a view to acquiring his plantation through foreclosure of mortgage. One morning he visited his debtor, with a demand for a payment which the Colonel was unable to meet. High words passed between them and Grub was ejected from the house. Grub sued the Colonel for assault.

The only person who was nearby the disputants at the time of the fracas was an old negro named George Washington. When the trial came off the plaintiff's attorney called on George for testimony.

"George Washington," said the lawyer, "if you are proud of the honored name you bear you will tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. Do you know the nature of an oath?"

"Yes, sah. An oath is what George Washington's fadder said when young Geo'ge chopped down de cherry tree."

The attorney was stalled. Those present smiled. The lawyer concluded not to try to beat into the negro's skull what an oath was, but to proceed with the examination.

"Where were you," he asked, "when this trouble between Colonel Archibald and Mr. Grub took place?"

"I war on de po'ch."

"Did you see this gentleman," pointing to Grub, "enter the Colonel's office?"

"No, sah. I didn' see no gen'leman go into Colonel Archibald's office. I sor dat man setten dar what sold rotten aigs to de army go into Colonel Archibald's office."

Checked again, the lawyer cast about for some other method of attacking the witness.

"George," he said presently, "Did you hear hard words between Colonel Archibald and Mr. Grub?"

"Dunno, sah. I'ze mighty hard o' hearin'."

"Tell the jury what you did hear spoken by Colonel Archibald."

"I didn't hear notten Colonel Archibald said. Mars' Colonel war speakin' berry soft. Ma hearen wa'n't good enough fo' dat."

"What did you hear Mr. Grub say?"

"I hearn dat man dar what sold de army boots with paper soles say 'Cunnel Archibald, 'f yo' don' pay me de money yo' owe me you'll hab to turn ober to me de plantation and eberything on it; and Mars' Archibald, he said sof'ly, berry sof'ly, 'Mr. Grub, I'll pay you when I get de money fo' de crop.'"

"Didn't you say your hearing was not good enough to enable you to hear what Colonel Archibald said when he spoke softly?"

"Dat was when ma right ear was turned dat way. Ma right ear mighty poh at hearen. When I heard Mars' Archibald say dat I turned ma lef' ear dat way."

"H'm, I expect you have ears for what you want to hear. Tell the jury what you saw of this trouble."

"Well, sah, I sor dis pusson what sold wooden hams to de army comen out ob de doo' mighty quick."

"He was pushed by Colonel Archibald, was he not?"

"No, sah. De arm wha' Colonel Archibald would hab to push him wid was lef' on de battlefield."

"Did you see anything to indicate that the plaintiff was forced out of the house."

"Yes, sah."

"What did you see?"

"I sor a boot de toe bein' bout ten inches below de back coat buttons of dis man what sold pounded stone fo' medicine to de a'my."

"Ah-ha," I thought we should get the truth at last. "To whom did this boot belong?"

"Dunno, sah."

"Why don't you know?"

"Cos de gen'leman what owned de boot was inside de house and dis fel-lah what sold——"

"That'll do. Judge, I think I have proved by inference——"

"There is no such thing as inference in law," interrupted the judge. "Case dismissed."

METAL PRODUCRS CO'S PLANT DESTROYED

Former Peterborough Firm Burned to the Ground.

Word was received in the city to-day that the Metal Products Company, which recently removed from Peterborough to Montreal, had been burned to the ground on Saturday evening. A number of Peterborough men were employed in the Montreal plant. One of these men come home to spend the week-end and was notified by wire not to return as the plant had been destroyed. Until a few months ago the company occupied the premises of the old Peterborough Cordage plant on Aylmer street.

Pessimism Springs Up Within The Central Empire Because Of Cessation Of The Bloody Offensive

(United Press Service.)
(By J. W. T. Mason.)

NEW YORK, May 6.—A period of pessimism has begun within the Central Empire because of the cessation of Von Hindenburg's bloody offensive and a realization that the extravagant promises of the Kaiser's militarists have not been met.

Henceforth increasingly serious conditions will be reported as existing in Germany and Austria-Hungary. The Kaiser's incorrigibly dramatic temperament made this reaction loubly inevitable by ordering last March the announcement in such grandiloquent terms of Von Hindenburg's spring slaughter.

AUSTRALIANS ADVANCE

(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

Two O'clock Despatch:

With the British Armies in France, May 6.—The British troops have advanced 1200 yards on a front of more than a mile between the Ancre and the Somme.

North of the Somme the Australians advanced 700 yards on a 1500 yard front, and early to-day they added another 500 yards on a 200 yard front.

The first Australian advance was made in the darkness of early Sunday morning. Suddenly and silently they swept forward surprising the thin German garrison in the front line, just north of the Somme, and taking some prisoners.

Similarly in the pitchy darkness early to-day they pushed on despite a strong opposition. There were many German dead, but the Austrian casualties were not heavy.

DISCUSSION ON TITLES MAY NOT MATERIALIZE

It is the Intention of the House to Prorogue About the Middle of The Month.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 6.—It is the intention of the government to bring about the prorogation of the House on the 16th or 17th of the month. Though Parliament will have to travel at high pressure to do it. By no possibility can the budget debate be brought to a conclusion before to-morrow night and after that a very considerable amount of time will be spent in committee on the various resolutions and the details thereof. There is at present a waiting list of twenty members on the opposition side alone, all of whom desire to be heard in the debate before it concludes. Sir Wilfrid Laurier will not speak until the budget proposals get into the committee stage. There is little probability of the Consolidated Railway Act being pushed through this session. It is the intention of the Acting Minister of Finance, however, that the new Civil Service Act shall be made law before prorogation.

Further Extremely Heavy Fighting Is Possible at Any Time—Germans Blocked in Flanders.

WHAT PRISONERS SAY

(United Press.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

(10 O'clock Despatch.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, May 6.— For six days the Germans have been blocked in Flanders. For thirty-five days they have been held in check at Amiens. What is their next move, and where?

Enemy prisoners are betraying symptoms of apathy. Captured letters intended for German people at home add to this impression. The Boches certainly are less cocksure than at the start of their offensive and apparently are suffering from a fit of the Teutonic blues, which is typical when anything goes wrong.

The German troops write despondently of the still distant peace, which they had been led to believe was near. The whole tone of the prisoners' plaints is that the troops have again been misled and, instead of peace, there will be more static warfare.

Heavy Fighting.

Although they are down in the mouth they will continue to do Hindenburg's bidding certainly for some time to come. Further extremely heavy fighting is possible at any time.

Tommies and Poilus. Elsewhere I observed Americans, each of their faces stamped with a curious expression of mixed cheeriness and grimness that spoke volumes.

Anticipatory of the next fighting, both the French and British are optimistic. They whistle, sing and exchange banter as they move into the line, swapping jokes with their comrades coming out. All know the heavy nip and tuck battles that are yet in store for them, but they are serenely confident of the outcome.

THE GERMANS ARE SUFFERING

Germany's Allies Are Suffering Severe Wants.

(Special to The Examiner.)

WASHINGTON, May 6. — Germany's Allies are suffering severe wants in some lines, largely through the German bleeding of them to keep the west front supplied. On the other hand, England, France and Italy, while having their own troubles in the matter of supply, have the bright prospect of bumper crops.

Coal Shortage.

These two significant facts were carried in official despatches to-day. The Teuton difficulties centre largely around coal shortages, induced by the demands of the western offensive, linked with the coal supply question is that of labour, leather, and medical supplies.

German war lords are diverting Bavarian coal to Rheinish munition districts, leaving this section of Austria without adequate fuel., Bakeries unable to get sufficient coal to fire their ovens, are consolidating.

RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT

This Is The Remedy Suggested for Irish Situation by Sir Horace Plunket—"A Grave Crisis"

MEETINGS YESTERDAY

Canadian Press:

DUBLIN, May 6.— Declaring that the Government's conscription home rule policy is disastrous, Sir Horace Plunkett, chairman of the recent Irish convention in a letter to the press suggests the immediate establishment of responsible government in Ireland as the way out of the difficulty. At the gravest crisis with which the Empire has ever been faced, says the letter, the Government had staked their existence on a two-fold Irish policy of conscription and home rule. They cannot achieve both except at a cost of much bloodshed and lasting hate. They might achieve the first, and by it make the second impossible. In my opinion they would fail in the attempt and have to go on leaving both undone. Their successors then would have to find a way out of the worst Irish situation in my memory which goes back to the Fenian days fifty years ago.

Meetings Yesterday.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, May 6.—Anti-conscription speeches were made from the same platform by John Dillon, Nationalist leader and Professor Edward De Valera, head of the Sinn Fein party yesterday at Ballaghadreen, in Dillon's constituency of East Mayo. Good humour and enthusiasm characterized the demonstration which was attended by fifteen thousand persons. Mr. Dillon said that if the Irish kept united and determined for another two weeks they would defeat conscription.

Principal Speakers.

Special to The Examiner:

DUBLIN, May 6.—The joint Nationalist and Sinn Fein anti-conscriptionist meeting at Ballaghadereen was the biggest yet held, 12,000 attending. Dillon and Devalera were the principal speakers.

The Nationalist leader declared he was convinced that it would take an army such as England could ill spare to carry out successfully conscription in Ireland. He was also convinced that the government would split on the Irish rock, and instead of destroying the Irish nation, the Irish would destroy them. Professor Devalera said his followers would unite with those of Mr. Dillon to defeat conscription. With reference to the issue raised in East Cavan, he said there was only one arbitrator to whom the Sinn Fein would submit, namely, the free choice of the electors.

Peterboro Tendered Governor-General A Royal Reception

Address Presented by City and Country to the Governor-General

TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE DUKE OF DEVONSHIRE, K.G., G.C.M.G., GOVERNOR-GENERAL OF CANADA, etc.,

May it Please Your Excellency:—

The Councils and the citizens of the City and County of Peterborough are greatly pleased to have this opportunity of giving Your Excellency and the Duchess of Devonshire a hearty welcome, and wish to thank you for the honour and pleasure which you have conferred upon this community by your visit. We appreciate the interest and thoughtfulness which have prompted you to make yourself acquainted with the different parts of the Dominion early in your term as Governor-General, for we know that your considerate action in thus familiarizing yourself with the beauties, resources, opportunities and needs of the country will be of great benefit to Canada as a whole.

We are glad to welcome you as the representative of our beloved King, for whose person and throne, we in common with all Canadians, entertain the strongest feelings of loyalty and devotion. At this time, when the nation is passing through a trial unparalleled in history, we desire to affirm that in no part of His Majesty's possessions is there a more earnest determination that the British Empire and its Allies shall be victorious, and that the great principles of freedom, liberty and safety of national life shall triumph, than in this the foremost of the Dominions beyond the Seas. We look, under the guidance and blessing of Divine Providence, for an early ending of the war, and the establishment of a permanent peace which will enable mankind to rise to the highest development of Christian civilization.

We are pleased that the revered uncle of our gracious King has had as his successor in the office of Governor-General a nobleman and statesman of Your Excellency's eminence, ability, and experience, and that Canada is to have your valuable assistance during the continuance of the war, and, we hope, in the period of reconstruction after peace has been secured. We have unbounded confidence in a prosperous future for this country of ours, as its resources are further developed, and we have confidence, too, that no part of this Dominion will benefit by that development more than our own City. It is a little less than a hundred years since the first settler located upon what is now part of the site of Peterborough, and from that time the growth of the City has been steady, but more rapid during recent years, and we expect our full share in the coming industrial and commercial expansion of the Dominion.

It is with great pleasure that we welcome Her Grace the Duchess of Devonshire as we recall with gratitude and pride the services of her illustrious father to Canada when he was Governor-General, and to the Empire in the eminent positions he has held since then in its councils.

We hope that your term of office as His Majesty's representative in Canada will be pleasant as well as useful, and that among the places in our Dominion that you will recall with happy recollections will be the City of Peterborough.

We have the honour to be,
Your Excellency's Obedient Servants,
MAYOR G. H. DUNCAN,
WARDEN W. A. ANDERSON.

Won By His Complaisance And Affability And By The Charm Of The Duchess Of Devonshire, The Citizens Loyally And Cordially Greeted The Viceregal Visitors.

Incidents of the Morning

Peterborough opened its heart in a loyal and affectionate welcome to His Excellency the Governor-General the Duke of Devonshire in his official visit to this city to-day as the representative of His Majesty the King. It was not only a splendid expression of the people's devotion to the Crown, through his Viceroy, but it served admirably to introduce to the citizens the new Governor-General, his gracious wife, the Duchess of Devonshire, and their charming daughter, Lady Blanche Cavendish. The personal and vicarious aspects of the Viceregal presence were at once recognized and appreciated, and while the people poured out in thousands to greet the representative of the King, they quickly responded to the affably open qualities of the Duke of Devonshire. From the outset his easy and genial manner was communicated to the civic reception committee, setting the note to the brief visit that was apparently as reciprocally pleasant as it will be memorable.

Every incident of the programme arranged by Ald. Worth's committee fitted into its allotted place without a hitch, but His Excellency's enquiry from Mayor Duncan for the latest war news, while they passed along the corner at the Queen Mary School was a request that had not been anticipated. It was quickly met, however, by Assistant City Clerk Ingram 'phoning from a near-by residence to the Examiner Office, and when the automobile drive was continued, a synopsis of the early cables were handed to His Excellency, who at luncheon received the later despatches in full. This was a significant and unobtrusive incident that revealed a interest in the progress of the [illegible] that voiced itself even in the round of the morning's simple but attractive entertainment. Perhaps it was the patriotic choruses at the school that urged the solicitous question.

Easily Entertained.

His Excellency, in announcing to the Council to-day's visit, had expressed a wish particularly to see the schools, hospitals, and Red Cross quarters, but the Aldermen had not fully reckoned with the intentions of their guest. Because of the limited time at the reception committee's disposal, only two schools and the Collegiate Institute were set down for visits. But at the first school on the route, the Sacred Heart School on Lake Street, instead of reducing speed in progress, His Excellency ordered his chauffeur to stop in recognition of the chorus of children assembled on the front lawn. They sang the National Anthem, waving their flags, and immediately the Excellencies entered the grounds and spoke with the nun who is principal of the school. At the King Edward School the occurrence was repeated, but later in the drive the Governor-General evidently realized that the drive had been prepared on time basis, and merely raised his hat and smiled to the assembled children.

Little touches like this in the morning's progress discloses the fact that the Governor-General was not merely formally interested in the city and its people, but that he desired to reciprocate the warm sentiments he must have sensed from the very moment he stepped from his car at the C.P.R. station. There he was met by Mayor Duncan and Mrs. Duncan, Ald. Worth and Miss Worth, Col. Mills, Mr. J. H. Burnham, and others. Followed an inspection of the war veterans, who, in uniform were under the command of Mr. J. Staunton, president of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association. While the 57th Regimental Band played patriotic selections, the Governor-General passed up and down the ranks, accompanied by his secretary, Lt.-Col. the Hon. H. G. Henderson; Capt. Clarke, his Aide-de-Camp, who recently returned from overseas, where he has served with the Grenadier Guards, also by Col. Mills and Mr. Staunton. Again, there was nothing perfunctory in His Excellency's inspection. He recognized the long service and other special decorations worn by some of the men, and spoke for a few minutes, as he passed them, with Sergt.-Major Whatley, secretary of the War Veterans, Ser

Germans Secure Russian Fleet

Germans Troops Occupying Sebastopol Found in the Harbour Most of the Russian Black Sea Fleet.

SULTAN SELIM ARRIVES

Special to The Examiner:

CONSTANTINOPLE, Via London, May 6. — German troops, occupying Sebastopol (in the Crimean Peninsula) found in the harbour most of the Russian Black Sea fleet, including cruisers, destroyers, torpedo boats, submarines and merchant ships, it was officially announced here to-day. The Sultan Selim and the Hamidish have arrived there.

The dispatch would indicate that at least a large portion of the Russian Black Sea fleet had been captured by the Germans. This fleet is said to have played an important role in the recapture of Odessa by the Russians and it was expected to be the chief aid of the Russians in their fight to retain control of the Black Sea.

The Russian Fleet.

According to available official lists, the Russian fleet includes the battleships, Joann Zlatoust and Svistoi Evstafs, both of 13,000 tons; the battleships Potemkin Tavritcheski, of 12,340 tons; the Battleship Rostislav, of 9,020 tons; the Battleship Tri Sviatitella of 13,530 tons; the Battleship Georgi Pobiedonoseiz of 11,210 tons; the protected cruisers Otchakoff and Pamiat Merkuria of 6,750 tons each, the protected cruiser, Prut, formerly the Turkish Medjidich, of 3,000 tons, which was salved after being mined; the gunboats Teretz and Donetz, of 1,200 ton each: nine transports, ranging from 430 to 10,250 tons, two armed yachts, two mine layers, two mine sweepers, a training vessel, 21 destroyers, seven torpedo boats, and five submarines.

Under Construction.

The fact that the Constantinople report omitted any mention of "battleships" may mean that only a small and comparatively unimportant portion of the fleet was captured. Three huge dreadnoughts of 22,000 to 27,000 tons were also reported under construction in 1914 and 1915 as well as four modern cruisers, but it is doubtful if these were ever finished. One of these dreadnoughts was being built at Sebastopol, which, with the others and the cruisers under construction, at Nikolaieff were claimed both by the Russians and the Germans.

The Sultan Selim, formerly was the German battle cruiser Goeben, of 23,000 tons, which has variously been reported sunk or irreparable, damaged by allied shell fire, aerial bombs and torpedoes. The Hamidies is a Turkish protected cruiser of 20,000 tons, formerly the Abdul Hamid.

Germans Are Destroying Amiens

One Hundred and Fifty Shells Hurled Into The City Over The Week-end—City has Been Evacuated

HEAVY DAMAGE

(United Press Service.)
(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, May 6.—The Germans, Saturday and Sunday, began the systematic destruction of Amiens, the same as they annihilated Rheims. They hurled more than 150 shells and 60 aerial torpedoes into the city, causing heavy property damage, killing some civilians and endangering the Cathedral, the Palace of Justice and the Museum. The latter contains the famous Puvis De Chavnnes Murals.

Amiens was evacuated by a large proportion of the civilian population some time ago. Recent despatches declared that Rheims practically had been razed, and stated the famous cathedral there was so badly wrecked its collapse was imminent.

OUR INDIAN FIGHTERS.

Lance Corporal J. Paudash, of Hiawatha, a member of the 21st Eastern Ontario Battalion, has the distinction of being the first Indian from Peterboro district to receive a war decoration. Despatches announce that he has been awarded the Military Medal for gallantry in action. Few Indians in this section of the country are better known than Johnston Paudash, and the news that his bravery has been officially recognized will be appreciated by the many people in the city who have made the acquaintance of the Hiawatha sniper. Lance Corporal Paudash has been at the front ever since the 21st Battalion entered the trenches in the autumn of 1915, and his skill as a rifleman has been responsible for many absentees at the roll calls of the German battalions stationed opposite the Eastern Ontario unit. Many months ago, when his photograph appeared in the London Daily Mirror, Lance Corporal Paudash had no fewer than eighteen notches on his rifle-butt—testimony of his skill as a sniper, and since that time the Indian marksman has no doubt accumulated many more. Peterboro men back from the front say that Johnston's hair has turned almost snow white, but he is still carrying on.

The awarding of a military medal to this gallant Indian emphasizes the services that the Indians of this district have done for the Empire. There were several in the 21st Battalion, including Corporal George Paudash, who was known as one of the best machine gunners with the Canadian forces, and Pte. Hanlan Howard, the well known runner, who gave a good account of himself. In Peterboro's own battalion, the 93rd, there were many Indians who proved steady, reliable soldiers in training, and valiant fighters at the front. Some of have died in Flanders, far away from the "bright lands and smiling waters" of the Kawarthas, where the canoe and the trap line will know them no longer. Others are still there, waiting for the German assault on the Vimy Ridge positions.

The Indians have had no voice in governing the country that was once theirs, but they have shown that they have stout hearts and a spirit that has lead them to volunteer with their white brethren, and go over "the great water" to fight for "the great white father."

The least that could be done to recognize their gallantry and self-sacrifice is to extend to them the franchise.

THE Y.M.C.A. CAMPAIGN.

Those who heard Capt. T. F. Best at the Opera House last night undoubtedly left the auditorium convinced, if they had any previous doubt, of the wonderful nature of the work carried on by the Y.M.C.A. in France. They no doubt will be ready to respond to the call to-morrow when the campaign for $20,000 begins, but for the benefit of the many who could not hear Capt. Best the following tribute by Dr. Shields, of the Jarvis street Baptist church, Toronto, who studied the Y.M.C.A. methods at first hand in France, is reproduced.

"To appreciate properly the value of such services as the Y.M.C.A. is rendering our men overseas," says Dr. Shields, "it must be borne in mind that the soldier, for his country's sake, is subject to conditions of life wholly abnormal. He is under military discipline, which circumstance requires him to be a mere human machine during the hours of duty. In his free hours in camp or when on leave there must be a reaction, when the will, so long in subjection, reasserts itself. A moment's reflection should be sufficient to convince any thoughtful mind that it is absolutely necessary, at such a time to provide our soldiers with wholesome surroundings. They are away from home. They are for the most part deprived of the restraining influences of home and of the society of good women except when people hospitably open their homes to them.

"Military life, in the very nature of things intensifies the ordinary temptations of life a hundredfold. I have seen enough in my experience in the camps of England, and in my contact with and observations of the men in London and other centres, to convince me that the military work of the Y.M.C.A. is one of the greatest philanthropies and one of the greatest Christian missionary enterprises in the world to-day.

"It is doing much to supply thousands of lonely and homesick men with the best possible substitute for the comforts and restraining and uplifting influences of home. If it were not for the Y.M.C.A. huts, the camps, for men off duty, would be dreary indeed.

"The Y.M.C.A. has made a contribution of inestimable value to the military efficiency of our overseas force. In saying this I intend no reflection upon the moral stamina of our men. I know the solid character of many hundreds of them personally, and I say that even those who have no enthusiasm for religious organizations ought to support the work of the Y. M.C.A. on military grounds alone. The morals and morale of an army are as essential to the military effectiveness as are perfect discipline and abundant munitions. In conversation with Gen. Sir Richard Turner in London, General Turner told me that he regarded the moral health of the army as being quite as important as its physical fitness; and I put the Y.M.C.A. in the first place among the agencies ministering to the moral well-being of our men in the army. To assist in keeping men morally clean and measurably contented and cheerful is to make a mighty contribution towards winning the war."

WILHELM'S PEACE EFFORTS.

(New York Evening Post)

Give the Kaiser his due. Sometimes he tells the truth. On the battlefield near Cambrai, for instance: "His majesty's silence was broken once, when he remarked, 'What have I not done to preserve the world from these horrors?'" The facts are on Wilhelm's side. He asked Serbia to commit suicide; Serbia refused, and compelled him to kill off half the Serbian nation. He asked Belgium to stand aside and see what would happen to her after he got through with France, and Belgium thrust the torch and dagger into his hands. He asked England to wait a few years until he had cleaned up France and Russia. He asked France to hand over Verdun, Toul and Belfort and live in peace. He asked America to retire from the sea. He asked the Armenians not to worry the Turks. The world has much to answer for the things it has compelled the Emperor to do.

A Singular Vindication

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Nearly a hundred years ago, when New York city was what would now be considered a small town, a young man stood on a dock in the East river waiting for the arrival of a sailship that was coming up the bay. When the ship arrived, was docked and the dozen passengers that had come from England on her began to descend the gangplank the young man mentioned, scrutinizing each person, finally pointed to a woman with a patch over her left eye and called upon a constable standing beside him to arrest her. She was taken to the headquarters of the watch, where she proved to be a man. Then a young woman who stood by threw her arms about the man who had caused the arrest and silently wept tears of relief, with her head on his shoulder.

Ten years before, at seventeen, she had married Abel Williams, two years her senior, a clerk in the counting room of Edward Hooper, a china merchant. They were very happy, and a little girl was born to them. One evening when the young husband was playing with his little daughter several men entered and arrested him on a charge of embezzling money from his employer.

For some time Williams was at a loss to understand why he, conscious of being perfectly innocent, had been charged with crime. Then, remembering certain suspicious circumstances connected with a fellow clerk named Skinner, he came to the conclusion that Skinner was the defaulter and had laid his peculations at Williams' door. Abel's books were brought into court at his trial and showed conclusively that some one had been covering up a loss of about $20,000. He was not an expert accountant and floundered hopelessly in his defense. He was convicted and sentenced to five years' imprisonment.

During his incarceration his wife stood by him, and when he stepped from prison she took him home, and the two began to plan for his vindication. Unfortunately an investigation would cost money. Besides, there was no clew, nor were there in those days detectives, as there are now. After considering the matter for some time they gave up hope of removing the stigma. Abel, having been a criminal, could not secure a position and was obliged to make a living by working at home. He was very handy with a knife and carved out trinkets that his wife sold for him.

One difficulty in the way of his vindication was that Skinner had left New York, and no one knew where he had gone. His disappearance confirmed Abel's suspicion that he was the real criminal and had covered up his own defalcation through the books kept by Abel. A criminal in one case is likely to be a criminal in other cases, and had Skinner remained in New York possibly he might have got into trouble that would have explained Abel's ruin. But Abel was not sure that Skinner was guilty.

While in prison one of the inmates whose cell was directly over Abel's appealed to him to assist him in making an escape. The man cut a hole in the floor and let himself down into Abel's cell. Abel permitted him to hide under his cot. Abel, who was employed on the prison books and accorded special privileges, also consented that the man should take advantage of them. He thus escaped, and Abel lost his job on the books and was relegated to a cell.

One day when Abel was at work making a toy ship a man walked in and stood looking at him.

"You don't remember me," he said. "I'm the man you helped to escape from prison. I've come to pay you for what you did and suffered for me. I don't know whether you are a bad un or a good un and don't care. I only know that I'm bad. A pal of mine who has got some valuable jewels that he and I took together on the other side of the big water is goin' to beat me out o' my share. I can fix it so that he'll have to divide with you."

Abel told the man that he would not receive stolen goods.

"Well, then," continued the jailbird, "I can fix it this way: There's a big reward offered for the property. You're welcome to it."

Abel readily assented to this, and the man informed him that the party was bringing the jewels from Paris, where they had been stolen, to dispose of them in America. He was a one eyed man and readily identified. He would arrive on a certain day and Abel could turn him over to the authorities and secure the reward.

To return to the party who had just discovered that the person arrested was a man. Mrs. Williams recognized Skinner. He was much changed from what he had been and had lost an eye. The fact that Abel was or would be vindicated by the arrest was a relief to the poor woman which caused a complete relaxation. For a few moments she wept on her husband's shoulder, then, turning to the prisoner, said:

"Skinner."

The jewels were found concealed in a wig worn by the criminal, and Abel received a reward of $10,000. He at once employed an expert accountant to go over the books he was accused of tampering with, and it was found that the shortage had been dexterously transferred from the books kept by Skinner to those of Abel. The firm that had prosecuted him did everything in its power to atone for its action.

BOWLING

The lawn bowling club has been at work for some time putting their grounds into good shape for the coming season. This week the grounds are ready to be played on.

The season's tickets have been fixed at $5 per season. Tickets may be obtained from Mr. Walton, agent London Life office, on Simcoe street, next to Hamilton's grocery, or from any of the members.

There will be a meeting of the executive at the office of Dr. Hammond at 8.30 on Tuesday evening (to-morrow.)

SPORTING COMMENT

Joe Bush has made a fine start with the Red Sox and should win more games than in any season since he first became a star with the Mackmen.

The Giants are having an easy time in their league, but the other 1917 champions, the White Sox, are finding it anyhting but easy to get away well.

TRAIN WRECKS ON THE GRAND TRUNK

Two train wrecks lent a little variety to the Grand Trunk activities over the week-end.

On Saturday afternoon at 4:30 a freight running ahead of mail train No. -95, derailed about three miles west of Millbrook, overturning two cars of coal and one of brick. The crew of the "Moonlight" from Peterborough went out to Millbrook and transferred the passengers around the wreck. Passengers and baggage of 94 leaving Peterborough at 9:19 p.m. were also transferred around the wreck. The smash-up was cleared up by the auxiliary from Lindsay by midnight.

Keene Wreck.

Between 6 and 7 o'clock yesterday (Sunday) morning, the line suffered a rear-end pitch-on at the Keene station. A double-header standing at the station in the fog was rammed in the rear by another double-headed freight train. A caboose and car of grain on the fore train immediately caught fire and were burnt to cinders. The two engines on the rear were injured. While the monetary damage was considerable there were no casualties or injuries. The track was cleared by 3 p.m. by an auxiliary from Lindsay and the traffic resumed.

ALLIES CANNOT ACCEPT TERMS

(Canadian Press.)

The Hague, May 6. — Jonkheer Colyn, the former Dutch minister of war, who was credited with being on a mission to England, to suggest a basis of peace terms, has returned here, and it is stated has reported no possible acceptance of Germany's terms by the allies.

Foreign Secretay Balfour told the House of Commons to-day that no peace terms had been made recently by the enemy. H addd:

"There is no representative of a neutral nation in this country who has made tentative or informal suggestions of peace negotiations."

Number of Exemption Claims Dealt With By Judge Huycke

Young Men Who Are Granted Exemption Must Speed Up Production Or Exemption Will Be Cancelled.

CASES THIS MORNING

His Honour Judge Huycke in giving decision on exemption cases this morning, advised the young men that any exemption granted is only given so long as results are shown. Should a farmer receive exemption and his production slacken down his exemption may be cancelled at any moment and he may be called up.

Most of the "B" men who came up this morning will go down to Kingston to-night.

THOSE CALLED.

EMPLOYERS OF LABOR CLAIM THAT CONSCRIPTION WILL PARALYZE INDUSTRY

The Government Is Going Ahead Without Deviating From The Provisions of the Act.

THE TEMPERMENTAL FOX

OTTAWA, May 6.—Speaking of the Eastern Ontario Farmers' delegation which gathered at Ottawa on Thursday last, General Mewburn stated that judging by the protests which he had received, regarding the new man-power regulations, farms would be idle, mines would close down, railways would become streaks of rust, fishing boats would rot on the beach, and industry would be entirely paralyzed, or words to that effect, should the Government persist in its intentions to carry the regulations out.

Variety of Complaints.

Apart entirely from the protests from the agricultural communities which have perhaps been most manifest, the Government has received a wide variety of complaints which apparently bear out the statement of the Minister of Militia.

Losses of Men.

From coal miners of Maritime Provinces comes a protest to the effect that, while an increased output of coal is expected during coming season, it will be difficult even to keep up the present output, if the young men are to be taken. It is stated by the Dominion iron and steel estimates that it will lose five hundred employees through the first peremptory draft. This company has in contemplation the increasing of its man-power in order to carry out its programme of rolling ship plates. Other steel and coal companies claim that their losses of men will be in proportion. The fishermen down by the sea claim that if the young men are taken, they might just as well haul up their boats on the beach and let them lie there for the rest of the season. They claim that it takes three men to handle a boat, and that to take fishermen's sons is to take their livelihood and to eliminate him as a factor in increased production.

The Temperamental Fox.

But probably the most unique complaint comes from farmers of Prince Edward Island. These men represent that the black fox is a temperamental animal, especially in the season when the young are coming. They state that during the spring strangers are not allowed to go near the farms since the presence of strangers cause the mother fox to eat her offspring. They claim that to take away the men who have habitually looked after the farms, and to substitute strangers is tantamount to the encouragement of wholesale canibalism among the foxes.

Meanwhile the Government is going ahead without deviating from the provisions of the orders passed by the Government.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE TO SEE MANUFACTURERS

All Will Be Given The Opportunity To Contribute To-morrow

In connection with the Red Triangle campaign to-morrow for funds for the Y.M.C.A. military organization, Messrs. W. G. Morrow and T. F. Matthews are a special committee who will visit all the manufacturing concerns in the city. The different companies, it is expected, will receive the committee as graciously as on previous occasions in connection with other campaigns.

ARTILLERY BOYS GRATEFUL TO WAR VETERANS

The Peterborough boys in the artillery units at Kingston wish to express their thanks to the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association for their invitation to take part in to-day's reception to the Duke of Devonshire, and for making it possible for them to secure leave to come home for the occasion. The Veterans communicated with General Hemming, G.O.C. of No. 3 Military District, and secured permission for the local boys to get week-end leave.

Cotton is King Especially These Days

But we only buy reliable brands and you can RELY UPON OUR QUALITY EVERY TIME.

DO YOU KNOW

A 12-inch gun disposes of a bale of cotton with every shot fired. A machine gun in operation will use up a bale of cotton in three minutes.

In a naval battle like the one of Jutland from five to six thousand pounds a minute are consumed by each warship.

It takes more than 20,000 bales a year to provide absorbent cotton to staunch and bind the wounds of the injured.

One change of apparel for all the troops engaged in the war represents more than 1,000,000 bales.

100,000 bales will be required to equip the proposed aeroplane fleet, if cotton as may be necessary surplants linen for the wings.

The United States alone is now turning over a 1,000,000 bales into explosives only.

In the face of all these facts — The wonder is—Not that prices are a little higher—but that we are able to supply our wants at any price.

Is Praising It To All Of His Friends

"If any of the Boys Here Haven't Heard of Tanlac Its Not my Fault," Says Smith.

"If any of the boys here haven't heard all about Tanlac yet, it is not my fault, for ever since this wonderful medicine fixed me up so fine I've been praising it to everybody I know," recently said Victor E. Smith, a well-known switchman in the yards of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and who lives at 445 Pacific Ave., Toronto.

"I suffered terribly from stomach trouble," he continued, "that had worried me constantly for the past six or seven years. My appetite was poor and soon after eating anything I would have indigestion so bad that I could hardly breathe. Bitter, acid water would rise up in my throat, and my stomach would burn like I had swallowed coals of fire. Vegetable or any sort of acid food would upset me and I would have a heavy feeling like a lump of lead right in the pit of my stomach that distressed me for hours. Often I'd have such severe attacks that I would have to stop working until I could get that sour fluid off my stomach. I got so I couldn't even chew tobacco without having trouble, and my life was made miserable from one day to another.

"I had tried all kinds of medicine but nothing helped me. One day a friend told me how much Tanlac had benefitted him, so I decided to try it. I have taken only two bottles so far, but they have entirely relieved my stomach trouble. I can eat anything now and never have a touch of indigestion in any form. That awful burning and the heavy feeling in my stomach are gone, and even tobacco don't hurt me now at all. Tanlac is the only medicine that ever gave me any relief and I can't say too much in its praise."

SELL YOUR WHEAT.

(Prairie Farmer)

The wheat situation is extremely serious, and it is only with the utmost difficulty that we will be able to get through until harvest. No farmer who is a patriot will hold his wheat now in the hope of higher prices. If we can get higher prices for this year's crop, they will be welcome. In holding back old wheat however we are holding back material that is as important as shells and soldiers, and putting ourselves in the same class with shipyard strikers.

CAPT. T. F. BEST

terboro Tendered Governor-General A Royal Reception

Visited the Schools.

he automobile drive lead from the ion up George Street to Char-e, south to Lake, where the first was made, then to the King ard School, where the Principal, M. N. Clarke, was introduced to Excellency by Public School In-ctor Mowat. The children sang d Save the King" and gave three ers for His Excellency.

t the South Central School the ldren cheered as the motors slow-down, but did not stop, and the r visit, as planned, was made at Queen Mary School.

he entire party was met by the rd of Education, Mr. Vincent twood, as chairman, receiving welcoming them. Several of rooms were visited, the pupils of third and fourth books, assembled one of the corridors, sang two ruses in a manner that reflects greatest credit upon themselves their instructor, Miss Flossie wart. "Oh Dearest Island Far ay" and "A Wet Sheet and a wing Sea" were the songs, and ir presentation was excellent. The ces showed a wealth of vocal terial that was finely balanced, l under complete control. This one of the numerous little sodes of the day that plainly pleas-Their Excellencies.

Addressed the Children.

Afterwards, the entire school was wn up in files on the lawn by Mr. J. Voaden, the Principal, and were dressed from a terrace by the Gov-nor-General. He touched upon the iousness of the war, reminded the ldren that their fathers or elder thers had fought for them, suffer-g the greatest discomforts and en wounds and death. It was erefore the children's duty to per-m whatever little tasks they could help the men overseas. Every rt counted. His Excellency re-rred to the great cause for which Allied soldiers were fighting, and pressed the confidence that the ldren of to-day would always ap-reciate their confidence. In con-usion, he said he would like to cognize the warmth of the chil-en's welcome, but the only thing could think of was to ask Mr. Eastwood to declare a holiday for the remainder of the day. Mr. Eastwood responded by according with the suggestion of the Governor-General, who departed with an ovation of cheering from the children.

The pupils of St. Mary's Convent were assembled on the steps and approach of St. Peter's Cathedral, the facade of which was decorated with many flags, and sang the National Anhem as the motors passed. Likewise the boys of St. Peter's School waved their flags in a colourful greeting and sang, His Excellency doffing his hat in response. Among the decorations in the south-end was noticed the Church of the Sacred Heart the front of which presented a silent salute of flags to Viceroyalty.

The De Laval's Greeting.

At every window of the De Laval Company's office flags were waved by the girls of the staff in a greeting that was as lively as it was unexpected. His Excellency raised his hat and bowed to the young ladies as the big car slowly passed the factory.

Visited Hospital.

After leaving the corner of Hunter and George Streets, the party drove to the Normal School. His Excellency entered the school through the lines of the pupils, and was shown through the splendid building.

In the Assembly Hall, Principal Walker welcomed the Duke as the representative of the King. In replying, His Excellency said Canada had a great share of the resources of the world, but these great resources were of no value unless turned to good account. "The teaching profession is a noble profession, and I trust you will take advantage of your privileges to the utmost." After leaving the Normal School the party went to Nicholls Hospital, where they were introduced to the medical staff. His Excellency spoke sympathizingly with patients in the different parts of the buildings. Leaving the Normal School, they passed Queen Alexandra School, where the children and staff were waving flags to bid welcome to the representative of the King. They went east over Smith Street bridge and through the Nicholls Oval, back down to George Street, and thence to the Empress Hotel for luncheon.

Reply to City's Address.

Replying to the address from the city and county, read by Mayor Duncan, Mr. E. M. Elliott representing the county, His Excellency said: "As the representative of His Majesty the King, may I thank you for the cordial and generous sentiments you have addressed to me, and for the expression of loyalty and affection for His Majesty's Throne and person. It will be a privilege to convey them to His Majesty. Such expressions of loyalty and respect are a great help and encouragement. May I also thank you for your kind references to the Duchess, and thank you for the reception you have given us."

The Governor-General hoped that the city would continue to flourish, and he assured the citizens that he would retain a pleasant memory of his visit. He spoke of the sacrifices the people had made in the war, of the sorrow that had been brought to many homes in Peterborough as through the rest of the Empire.

"We must supplement the efforts of the men at the front, and this can be best secured by unity, concentration and determination of purpose. There is no reason for panic, but we must be all prepared, every man, woman and child, to give every assistance in this supreme effort."

Following the address, which was inscribed by Mr. T. O. Quartermaine, and enclosed in a walnut case made by Ald. Dobbin, both beautiful works, Miss Marion Duncan presented a bouquet of red roses to Her Excellency the Duchess of Devonshire, and little Miss Blanche Worth, niece of Ald. Worth, presented to Lady Blanche Cavendish a bouquet of lovely Ophelia roses.

Welcomed by the Women.

Representing the Local Council of Women, of which she is president, Mrs. Robert Harstone welcomed, on behalf of its women, the Duchess, who is the Honorary President of the National Council, and takes an active interest in its work. Her Excellency replied briefly, referring to the importance of the work of the Women's Council, and thanking the local branch for their thoughtful expression of welcome.

The Red Cross Workers.

Leaving the park, the party visited the Red Cross quarters in the Public Library. They were received by Mrs. T. F. Matthews, who introduced the other officers of the society, and welcomed the Viceregal visitors. The Governor-General is patron of the Canadian Red Cross. He and the Duchess spoke of the unceasing work of the women during the long years of the war, making articles of clothing and nursing appliances that were essential needs. They congratulated the local Red Cross workers whose machines were running, and other industry speeding as busily as on any ordinary day. The visitors intermingled with them, observing the work, and spent a pleasant quarter of an hour, a recognition that was as gracious as it was deserved.

At the G.W.V.A. Rooms.

After the gathering in Central Park the Veterans, headed by the 57th Band, marched to the new club-rooms of the G.W.V.A. on George Street, where the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary had already gathered. The Governor-General and party arrived in a few minutes, and were received with the National Anthem, heartily sung by the Veterans and ladies present. After being presented to the officers of the Ladies' Auxiliary, His Excellency proceeded to formally declare the new club-rooms open.

In doing so, he expressed his pleasure that his visit to Peterborough had coincided with the opening of new quarters for the men who had served overseas. His Excellency regarded the rooms, made possible by the efforts of the Ladies' Auxiliary, as a testimony of the gratitude and respect of the citizens generally to the Veterans. He was sure that the courage and fortitude they had shown ovdrseas was appreciated. Many of them had been through a large part of the campaign, and knew what the war meant. They had been fighting, not for territorial aggrandizement, but for a principal, the principal of liberty and an equal chance for all. Through the efforts of the men before him, and of their comrades who were still overseas, the world was being relieved of a menace—how great a menace, probably few people realized.

His Excellency hoped that the rooms would be of the greatest benefit to the Veterans, and that they would make the fullest possible use of them.

"I have great pleasure," he said, in conclusion, "in formally declaring these rooms open, and in wishing the Veterans every success.

An interesting ceremony followed, when Major J. C. Davidson, chaplain of the 57th Regiment, and also of the 93rd Battalion, was called to the front and presented by His Excellency with the Colonial Auxiliary Forces Officers' Decoration symbolic of twenty years' continuous service. The presentation was loudly applauded.

The Governor-General's party then inspected the rooms, and after a photograph had been taken, took their departure, amid a round of cheers from the Veterans.

An interesting feature of the visit to the Veterans' rooms was the presentation of bouquets to the Duchess of Devonshire and Lady Blanche Cavendish, the former being presented by little Miss Louise Hall and the latter by Aileen Brady.

"God Help Us To Do Our Bit" Said Captain Best At The Grand Last Evening

Enthusiastic Meeting Was Held in The Interest of the Red Triangle Fund—Peterboro's Objective Raised from $10,000 to $20,000

CAMPAIGN OPENS TO-MORROW

The outstanding feature of the meeting held in the Grand Opera House last night was the proposal to raise the objective of the Y.M.C.A. fund from $10,000 to $20,000 in a one-day campaign. Tuesday was the day selected by the business men of the city to raise this sum. Mr. W. R. Breyfogle, who moved this motion, said that if only 50c, was given by every citizen the original objective would be obtained, but they intended to double this amount. Mr. W. G. Morrow seconded the motion, which was endorsed by tthe large audience present.

On the platform were Rev. J. R. Webb, Rev. R. Pogue, Mr. G. H. Roper Mr. W. R. Breyfogle, Mr. W. G. Morrow and the chairman, Mr. Joseph Wearing.

The Salvation Army band played several selections and Mr. D. Carlyle contributed a solo.

A Trip to the Front.

"There are many advantages in such a trip," said the Captain. "It doesn't cost much and besides it is a very safe way to travel. Did you ever notice how fast you can travel on these trips. On this trip I will be your guide and take you across and show you No Man's Land. We will board the fastest ship at Halifax, that city which was laid in ruins. But we must hurry; we cannot stop to see all the wonders on the way. We put on life belts as soon as we get aboard and we wouldn't want to part with them. We walk, eat and sleep in these belts. Up the Mersey we go and tie up at the docks at Liverpool. We would like to stay here for awhile to see the wonders of this city, which has such massive structures and so many of them that you would think that it would sink the right little, tight little island. But we must hurry. We must get on the fastest train for Folkestone. A lady conductor is at the gate and punches our ticket. We are thinking of a big mogul with a line of luxurious coaches behind it. But instead we see a little tiny engine with little box cars behind it. All of a sudden little doors open, people jump out, line up in fours and march promptly off the platform. But where are the people who were going to get on the train? They are already inside the train, the guard has slammed the door and toot-toot, off she scoots a mile a minute and say she can go. You would think she would run off the little island.

An Armed Camp.

When you ride through England these days you come to the conclusion that England is an armed camp, and so she is, camp after camp, until you get sick of looking at them. Then the train slows up, stops, and we are in the village of ..... London. Next train for Folkestone, and again we are on the way. We see great piles of debris and we come to the conclusion that the Zeppelins have visited here. We Canadians read, "No material damage done," but the English know what it means. England is in black darkness at night. We see thousands of searchlights in the skies at night, many of them many miles apart. But gradually we see them focus on one place, and if we look carefully we will see a writhing, wriggling Zeppelin; then boom boom go the guns and shells burst all around. Then suddenly they stop, and if we look we see the little aeroplanes circling around the Zeppelinn. Then the Zeppelin breaks into a great sheet of flame and comes to the earth. On to Folkestone, we must not linger. Here at Folkestone we would like to stay and promenade along the water front. We board a fast transport for France. We are amazed at the long lines of ships crossing and recrossing the channel. And we at once ask ourselves where is the menace of the German submarines but up there to the north we see a great British cruiser, "camouflaged" with great brown and gray stripes going criss-cross all over the hull. This is the guardian of our ship. Just think of it. Not a transport of our Canadian soldiers coming from Canada to England, thence across the channel, has been sunk. (Cheers.) And this is the fourth year of the war. Then all of a sudden we bump on the wharf at Boulogne and take one of those little French trains, very much like the English, only more so, for the trenches. All along the way we see huge hospitals, tremendous hospitals, the like of which has never been seen before. Then we hear noises, then boom, boom, bang, bang, a general crash. We would like to get out and walk, but we are only on an imaginary trip. We see in the Canadian area great divisional rest camps all over the camp the Red Triangle, which is the military branch of the Y.M.C.A. Then we pass the divisional camps, brigade camps, old shell holes, and come to a place which had once been a village. But where are the men? They are in the cellars of the buildings which once stood there. The Red Triangle is also there, always cheering and helping the men on. But we won't stop here, we are going to the front line trenches.

In the Trenches.

We crawl down the communication trenches and lo, we are in the front lines. Don't step on the fire step and put your head above the trenches, the air isn't healthy there. Look through this periscope out into No Man's Land, a land of wire entanglements, shell holes, and the whole place is churned with thousands of "iron rations." Then again we see the Red Triangle in the front trenches. It has done wonderful things. I wish I had a gramaphone to transmit some of the prayers of those boys who had never prayed before. The Red Triangle is now incorporated in the army. The Generals say we cannot get along without you. There are three great organizations for our Canadian boys, the Chaplainn Service, the Red Cross, the Y.M.C.A. In contributing to these organizations you are contributing to the comfort of the soldiers in a very real sense to the morale of the army. We have got to pray to God to end the war successfully if it takes our last dollar and our last drop of blood. This is not time for pessimism, this is the time for action. The men at the front say: Tell the people at home to back us up and we will see this war through to a successful finish. Send the boys lots of letters. In summing it up we come to the conclusion that nothing else matters but winning the war. France and England are pooling everything to win the war. Canada must wake up and get into the war game.

God help us to do our bit.

During the day Captain Best addressed several meetings in the city churches including Murray street Baptist church and St. Paul's Presbyterian church. Last night's meeting was a fitting climax to the initial opening of the Red Triangle campaign, which will culminate this week in the raising of a fund of twenty thousand dollars for the work of the Y.M.C.A. on the firing line.

LARGE AUDIENCE ATTENDED THE CLOSING SESSION OF THE BIBLE CONFERENCE

ive World Events Foretold in Scripture--Bible Conference Concludes With Most Successful Meeting of Series

THE COMMERCIAL SIGN

So deep was the interest taken in he concluding address of the Bible onference that is been in progress St. Paul's urch this week, which as delivered Friday evening on the ubject, "The Two-fold Promise and he Signs of the Times," the large udience waited until after 10 o'clock with scarcely a movement until the eeting closed. Dr. Chafer referred to ve world events that are attracting uch attention to these by all classs of people and emphasized the point hat these have all been foretold in rophecy and were given as signs of he end of the age and the near comng of the Lord for the church, which ccording to prophecy is to be followd by many other happenings.

Two Classes.

In opening, Dr. Chafer emphasized he point that while the coming of the ord may not take place for 500 years, et prophecy does not indicate any vent unfulfilled that is to precede his oming and therefore his coming may ake place at any moment. People ometimes express the belief that hristians are not supposed to know when to expect the Lord's advent. Dealing with the opening passages in the fifth chapter of I Thessalonians, Dr. Chafer showed that two classes are there apparent, those who would be declaring peace and safety had arrived and who would find sudden destruction coming upon them and another class, the children of light upon whom that day will not come unawares. Emphasis was laid on the words, "Inasmuch as ye see the day approaching," and "Brethren, ye are not in darkness that the day should overtake you as a thief in the night." The distinction was made between the coming of the Lord for his body, which is the church as described in 1 Thess. 4:13-18 and "the great day of the Lord," when he is to come to the world in power and great glory. This last is Israel's day and the day of the world's transformation. It is the day that ends the great tribulation on the earth. But before this there is "the day of Christ," about which there are no signs or indications. This is the translation of living saints and the resurrection of the bodies of sleeping saints. It is the time when the church ends her pilgrim pathway here on the earth and goes to be forever with the Lord. The signs of the times anticipate the later day and if that is found to be near, the earlier day is even nearer. These days are doubtless separated by about seven years as indicated in Daniel 9. There are five major signs proposed in the Bible.

Gentile Governments.

Gentile governments. The great image of Daniel 2 is most clearly a preview of the whole Gentile government, or "times of the Gentiles," from the captivity of Babylon until Christ returns. The world-wide kingdoms are indicated from a study of all the Scripture; Babylon, Media-Persia, Greece and Rome. Daniel was not given to see beyond the "cutting off of Messiah," which included the time of Rome and there has been no world dominion since. The last form of government, at the very end of this Gentile period, is to be democracy. All Bible students agree that the "clay mingled with the iron" indicates the popular government principle. This sign is ripe to-day with the nations moving with an irresistible force toward democracy.

The material sign. This is the evident meaning of the age of invention. In the kingdom the earth will be developed with all her latent resources. It is evident that God is doing something to-day in the very material world. It can not be explained otherwise than that the way is being prepared for a great glory in the material earth.

The Jewish Signs.

The Jewish sign. Israel will always be the indication of God's plan and purpose in the earth. They are the "fig tree" and when they put forth the buds of a new life we are to recognize that "summer is nigh, even at the door." Everything is moving on for Israel's restoration to their land and the nation is feeling the throb of life and arising to the place of influence that has not been known in 24 centuries.

The Religious sign. The "last days" are to be days of apostacy in the church. 1 Tim. 4:1-3; 2 Tim. 3:15; 2 Peter 3:3-4. The church will tend to mere form with a denial of the power of the blood and the cross in salvation, and there will be "doctrines of demons." We have a new theology which proposes to save men by character rather than by the blood of Christ. It came from Germany and there are some men who are perfectly loyal to their flag as against Germany, who are nevertheless willing to be echo voices of the rationalism of Germany. This is now in many churches and educational institutions. "The world by its wisdom knew not God." There are also new doctrines and religious systems and they are all clearly not of God, regardless of their name, when they deny the power of the saving value of the blood of Christ, as they all do.

The Commercial Sign.

The Commercial sign. James 5:1-3 gives us a picture of the last days and that the rich will grow richer and the poor grow poorer. No one can doubt the fulfillment of this sign. One man in New York has four hundred million dollars more than Adam would have had, had he lived the six thousand years and received one hundred thousand a year and kept it all without interest. Adam would have had six hundred million. This New York citizen has one billion. One generation ago a million dollars was enough to give a man an international reputation. This passage closes with the words, "Be patient brethren, the coming of the Lord draweth nigh."

All the foregoing signs were dealt with in detail by Dr. Chafer, whose address lasted for almost an hour and a half. A deep impression was made on those present. At the close of the meeting several expressed their appreciation of the helpful message that had been delivered during the conference.

The Victorious Life.

The last address in the series on the Victorious Christian Life was given Friday afternoon and was followed with the deepest interest by those present. Having described the first two conditions upon which victory over indwelling sin may be achieved, these being contained in the injunctions, "Quench not the Holy Spirit" and "Grieve not the Holy Spirit," Dr. Chafer proceeded yesterday to define the third condition. It is stated in Gal. V-16, "This I say then, walk in the Spirit, and ye shall not fulfill the lusts of the flesh." This passage means simply that we are to be consciously depending on the Spirit to make every moment full of His power and blessing. The Christians must depend on the Spirit for at least three reasons.

First, the standard placed before us in the portion of Scripture which directs our life is heavenly in character. The law addressed itself to the natural man; but grace addresses itself to the supernatural man. Israel were citizens here and all that is given them to do is according to earthly responsibilities. The Christian is heavenly. He is now a citizen of heaven and God has placed before him the very standard of heaven. This is clear from very much Scripture. The law never proposed that men should "not grieve the Spirit," or that they should show forth the virtues of Him who called them out of darkness into His marvellous light. The Christian has a thousand times harder life to live than that stated by the law; but he has the enabling power and presence of the Spirit, which the law never provided.

Second. We who are saved, face a world-ruling foe. Satan is an enmity toward God and not toward humanity. He gets a thrust at God in the one who has partaken of the divine nature. Even Michael the archangel did not try to battle with Satan, but said, "The Lord rebuke thee Satan." This is the faith principle, rather than a works principle. "Greater is he that is in you than he that is in the world." The Spirit who indwells us is there to give victory over Satan.

Adamic Nature.

Third. We still have the old Adamic nature, even after we have received the new nature. A Christian possesses the new life and nature from God and this never sins. That which is begotten of God cannot sin. This does not mean that the Christian cannot sin. The same Epistle states that "If we should say that we have no sin (nature) or "That we have not sinned," it is untrue. There is conflict between the old and the new. The flesh lusteth against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh." This, too, is the conflict of Rom. vii. Christians do sin; but it is not out of the new life from God. There is blessed deliverance. It is by the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus making us free from the law (or power) of sin and death. The Spirit proposes to keep us delivered moment by moment. He can do this freely "through Jesus Christ." Because of the fact that Christ died unto our sin nature, God's judgments have been made against the old nature and in grace He can enter our life and control the flesh. In the death of Christ God provideth that our "old man" should be crucified, dead, buried and raised again to walk upon a new life principle. This is not an experience; it is a judgment of God accomplished centuries ago and by it, it is possible for Him to give deliverance which He could not give had He not first perfectly judged the old nature. He can save a sinner and give him eternal life only because His righteous judgments against sin have been accomplished in the cross. He can, in the same way, deliver a Christian because the old nature was also "crucified, dead and buried" in the death of Christ.

The Spirit of God does not set our being aside. He uses our mind, will and feelings. We act within the limits of our own personality; but He is working in us both to will and to do of his good pleasure" when we learn to walk by faith in trusting Him to do what we cannot do.

At the meetings during the week, Mrs. Chafer assisted most acceptably in the service of song, singing both alone and with Dr. Chafer. After Friday evening's service many expressed the desire that the meetings could have lasted for another week as it was realized that the interest in them has been growing steadily. Dr. and Mrs. Chafer left to-day to conduct a series of meetings in Buffalo. For five weeks Dr. Chafer will be continuously engaged in conference work across the border

Reorganization In Russia

Understanding Expected With Officials af Czar's Regime

Special to The Examiner:

STOCKHOLM, May 6.—Nikolai Lenine and Leon Trotsky are reported to have effected an understanding with a number of officials of the Czar's regime and with other extreme Czar partisans.

There is little definite news from Moscow, but travellers say Lenine is preparing a counter revolution, in connivance with the Czarists, hoping to subdue the mounting power of parties responsible for the initial revolution and the first Soviet.

Subjects For Sermons Fill Rev. R. B. Taylor with Amazement

Principal of Queen's University Preached In St. Andrews Church Yesterday—Patriotism That Bears Interest At The Rate of Four and a Half Per Cent.

A SERMON FOR OLD PEOPLE

"When I look down the columns of the newspapers on Saturday I am filled with amazement at the inventiveness of some of the subjects that are offered as the basis for sermons," said the Rev. R. Bruce Taylor, D.D., principal of Queen's University, who yesterday officiated at the anniversary services held in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. In a tone of condemnation the speaker intimated that the present day tenecy was to create a subject that yould attract attention. "There were sermons for the young men, and sometimes for your women." "Who cut your hair?" might form the theme of another discourse. Not being in the regular ministry the work has an added interest for me," said Dr. Taylor. Like other men on Saturday I find myself looking down the columns of the Saturday press to see what the churches have to offer in the way of spiritual thought.

Sermon For Old People.

Turning to the subject of his sermon at the Sunday evening service, which was taken from Acts 20:24, "So that I might finish my course with joy," Dr. Taylor said thta such a subject would appeal to people of mature years. "It is an arresting phrase," said the speaker. I have seen more people grow sad in their old age than joyful, so that when the apostle says "finish my course with joy," it is an arresting phrase. What is it that makes so much sadness in old age?" It is largely because people grow more lonely. A man of sixty years of age seldom picks up the paper but he will find recorded the death of a friend or an associate. Then it is you begin to think that the world is becoming a very lonely place. Friends pass away and there are no new ones to take their place. As Charles Lamb once said in regard to the passing of an old friend: "He called me Charley and now no one is left to call me Charley."

The Liberty Loan.

There is also the fact that the ideals for which we may long striven are no longer possible. We feel that so many of our aims have miscarried. To offset this condition we must cultivate the habit of gratitude and thankfulness. That is one of the greatest of all the virtues. or some days past the people of the United States have been engrossed with the work of bringing to a successful conclusion the Liberty Loan. I have been telling Americans with whom I have come in contact that 'all you can give is not in any way comparable with what the men in the trenches are doing and when you get four and a half per cent. for lending your money you are pretty well paid.'

Life is Real.

"I am going to finish my course with joy. I am going to do it by pitching into the work as hard as I can. We are all thinking that the other fellow has a pretty good job, but let me tell you all work has its discomforts. Happiness lies in doing the work we have got to do with all our hearts. Let to-morrow long after itself. Gd will look after to-morrow. Don't imagine trouble that may come to-morrow. What is ahead of us none of us know. Men talk about the cross of Jesus Christ who spend more money in tobacco than they do for Christ. Women in many cases spend more money for ribbons than they do for Christ. Life is not a game of skittles. It is real and earnest. Happiness in life comes with true knowledge of work well done."

Baron Shaughnessy on the C.P.R.

A Fascinating, Historical and Political Record

Lord Shaughnessy's report to shareholders at the annual meeting of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, embodied a review of the salient features of the company's financial policy and progress leading up to its present stable position. It is shown that under the terms of the contract dated October 21st, 1880, between the Government and the C.P.R. the Government undertook to give, by way of subsidy, to assist in the completion of certain western sections of the system then in process of construction under government auspices, $25,000,000 in cash and 25,000,000 acres of land suitable for settlement. Subsequently the cash subsidy was increased by $10,000,000 and as an offset the land subsidy was decreased by 6,700,000 acres.

In view of the present high credit of the railway it is interesting to note that the company's desire in the early days to finance with capital stock instead of bonds, was demonstrated to be an impossibility, and as a consequence Parliament authorized the issue of $35,000,000, 5 p.c. bonds and $65,000,000 common stock.

Unfriendly influences at home and abroad so prejudiced the international money markets that the original $65,000,000 stock only yielded an average of less than 46 p.c. of its face value. The unwillingness of investors to pay a higher figure for the stock in those days need not be considered extraordinary, however, when it is known that as late as 1895, when the railway had been in operation for over nine years, the stock was offered in the market as low as 33 p.c. with but few takers. In 1885 Baring Bros. of London were induced to find purchasers for the $35,000,000 first mortgage bonds, and by this means the company was enabled to repay the loans from the Government, and to meet its floating debt.

The review goes on to describe the linking up of eastern Canada with the company's system which served thousands of miles of territory that was practically uninhababited. The eastern connection was imperative if the unremunerative territory was to be successfully developed.

The history of capital expenditure is an interesting chapter, not only in the history of the C.P.R. but also in that of the Dominion itself. After 1899, so rapid was the traffic development, it was necessary to provide substantial additions to traffic facilities of every description. From 1902 to 1914 inclusive, the records shew expenditures for second tracks, reduction of gradients, terminals, work-shops, etc., of $206,300,000; and for cars, locomotives, and other equipment $130,000,000. To meet this expenditure of $336,300,000 the directors appealed, successfully, to the ordinary shareholders of the company. In the thirteen years mentioned, the shareholders were offered and accepted $195,000,000 par value of common stock for which they paid the company no less a sum than $262,100,000. Out of this $33,750,000 of bonds were paid off and retired, and $26,300,000 was used to pay the cost of railway lines acquired or constructed, and of additional steamships, on which no bonds or debentures were sold. The remaining sum of $202,150,000 was supplemented by the sale of preferred stock and equipment notes bringing in $56,500,000 and making a total of $258,650,000 to apply against expenditures of $336,500,000. The difference of $77,850,000 was provided from the surplus revenue of the company being a further contribution by the shareholders of that amount from surplus or "undivided profits."

This remarkable financing, made possible only by the faith and courage of shareholders, put the company in a position efficiently and economically to deal with a large and ever-increasing volume of traffic, at the same time enabling the directors substantially to reduce the bonded debt. Notwithstanding the low price at which the original $65,000,000 common stock was sold ($46.00 a share) the entire $260,000,000 of this common stock now outstanding has yielded to the Company's Treasury in cash an average of $112 for each $100 of stock, and if the sums provided for capital out of surplus earnings are considered (a quite proper calculation, as those earnings were at all times applicable for dividends) the shareholders paid an average of $143 for each $100 of stock that they hold.

The explanation of the company's extraordinary success in face of the above record, is to be found in the company's policy of keeping down the annual fixed charges, while extending its rails into new productive territory as opportunity offered; also in the economies attending the long haul of traffic over one huge system, eliminating heavy tolls for switching and other kindred services between connecting companies.

A brief reference to the Ocean and Coastal Steamship branches is to the effect that this property is secured by a comparatively small demand on capital account, and has a present market value in excess of $65,000,000. Other properties and assets of the company were purchased or developed by the surplus income held in trust for the shareholders.

Something About the Land Grant.

The company's Land Grant, "which is a source of serious anxiety to financial doctrinaires who have only half studied the subject," is treated at considerable length in the review. As late as 1888, when the railway had been in operation for some time, the Dominion Government consented, as a consideration for some concessions under the Charter to guarantee the interest on $15,000,000 Land Grant Bonds, but would in no circumstances guarantee the payment of the principal which would have given the security increased market value, although the bonds had fifty years to run and only represented a value equal to 75c. per acre. This did not reflect much confidence on the part of the Government towards Land Grant values, and there is no doubt that at that time the Government could have recovered the whole Land subsidy at the price per acre just mentioned, i.e., 75c. For many years this Land Grant was a drag on the Company's development. Interest had to be met on the Land Grant bonds, whose proceeds had been devoted to the purposes of the railway, and although considerable sums were spent on immigration propaganda, land sales were disappointing and unsatisfactory, the prices yielding the company only from $1.50 to $2.50 per acre, after selling expenses had been paid. It was not until 1898 that agricultural lands in Western Canada attracted buyers in any numbers, and even in that year when 348,000 acres were sold, and in the three subsequent years, the net return was only $2.50 per acre.

Shortly after the C.P.R. contract was made, the Federal Parliament commenced to vote grants of land in very large areas by way of subsidy for the construction of railway lines in western Canada, to many companies incorporated for that purpose. Most of these companies never materialized, though much good land was bespoken by them, thus necessitating the C.P.R. going further afield to satisfy the last 3,000,000 acres of its Grant. The company was compelled to accept lands along the line west of Medicine Hat, in the "semi-arid" district, where there was little or no water, which made the lands practically valueless. To recover this tract it was decided to adopt a plan of irrigation, and an expenditure of $15,000,000 was made in the construction of works and ditches comprising an area of 2,240,000 acres. Of this area, not previously worth five cents an acre for practical purposes, portions now served by the ditches command high prices.

The company has expended approximately $17,000,000 in the encouragement of immigration, and to forward the sale of such lands as it had received. Branch lines of railway were also constructed to open up the territory for prospective settlers.

Of the original Land Grant 14,000,000 acres have been sold to date, yielding approximately $34,000,000, or an average of $6.72 per acre, from which, however, must be deducted the expenditures during thirty years for immigration propaganda, agencies, commissions, etc., together with irrigation costs, making the net return less than $5.00 per acre. On the 14,000,000 acres thus far sold, taxes to the amount of $20,000,000 have been paid into the Public Treasury.

The "Ten Per Cent Clause."

In regard to the much discussed "Ten per cent clause," the review states that the suggestion made in some quarters that the spirit and intent of this Clause was to limit the company's dividend to ten per cent is entirely out of harmony with the clear, unquestionable language of the instrument. The Clause had no more relation, direct or indirect, to the C.P.R. dividends than it had to the dividends of any other railway company, or of any commercial or industrial corporation. Seventeen per cent instead of ten per cent per annum might properly have been distributed from the average earnings of the railway had the directors not been convinced that a prudent and conservative policy was in the best interest of the property.

The total capital of the C.P.R. is $623,000,000 which contrasts with the actual cost of the company of $687,000,000 exclusive of $31,000,000 of railway constructed by the Government and handed over to the Company. It is also exclusive of $121,000,000 provided from surplus earnings, land sales, etc., expended on the property and written off without being capitalized, so that based upon cost, the transportation system represents an outlay of $818,000,000 or about $61,000 per mile.

The conservative financial policy of the directors cannot be better illustrated than by the fact that the net earnings per mile required to meet annual interest charges on the G. T. R., C. N. R., G. T. P., and the N. T. R. would suffice to cover the annual interest charges, dividends on the preference stock, and seven per cent dividend on the common stock of the C.P.R.

Extraneous investments, including steamship lines, railway companies outside Canada, Government securities and loans, money set aside for investment, unsold lands, amounts payable on lands already sold, coal mining and other properties, are appraised at $268,000,000 which is substantially below the market value. Many of these properties and resources had little or no value when they came into possession of the company, but were developed and safe-guarded until they became profitable.

Fire Destroys Dummer Home

Mr. Hugh Dodd Had to Climb Through a Bedroom Window—Hair Burned Off His Head.

At noon on Sunday fire destroyed the home of Mr. Hugh Dodd, who resides near Hall's Glen, Dummer Township. Mr. Dodd, who is eighty-three years of age, was alone at the time, his son and daughter-in-law having left about half an hour previous to visit friends in another part of the country. Upon returning from a trip to the barn Mr. Dodd discovered the ceiling of the house on fire at a point where the stove-pipe enters. He threw water on the flames and apparently succeeded in extinguishing them. He then went upstairs to see how things were and when he returned the entire lower part of the house was in flames. He went to go into a bedroom and barely escaped with his life by breaking the window and climbing through minus a portion of his clothing, and the hair on his head which was partly burned off. Mr. William Batten was among the first of the neighbours to arrive on the scene, but by that time the fire was beyond control. Everything in the house was destroyed and Mr. Dodd had a narrow escape from personal injury.

Wood Supply Lost.

A whole year's supply of firewood stacked near the house was also destroyed. Fences and stumps a quarter of a mile away were set on fire through burning embers carried by the wind, which fortunately blew the flames away from the barns and prevented the fire extending in that direction.

EMPEROR CHARLES IS ON SCENE; FORCES FROM OTHER FRONTS ARE RUSHED TO TYROL AND TRENTINO

High German Officers Also on Way to Line and Increased Artillery Fire Indicates Long Heralded Monster Offensive Along Piave and in Northern Trentino Region Will Be Launched in Few Days—Allied Forces Make Ready

VIENNA DEPENDS ON VICTORY TO QUELL UNREST THAT THREATENS REVOLT AT HOME

LONDON May 7. —Over the battle lines along the Piave River and in the mountainous region in Northern Italy, where the Allies' forces have been holding their positions since last November after the great Italian retreat from the Isonzo, there is increased tension, and the long threatened blow at this front may be launched by the Teutonic allies within a few days.

Emperor Charles, of Austria, accompanied by his chief of staff and high German and Austrian army officers, is reported on his way to the Italian front, and the great movement of troops in Tyrol and Trentino would seem to indicate vast bodies of men are being taken from other fronts to be hurled at the Italian positions.

The decision to launch an offensive of grand proportions in Italy doubtless was forced by political and economic conditions prevailing in Austria. An offensive campaign that yields gains of ground might serve to still the elements which are seething throughout the Dual Empire and would postpone the day of reckoning for the rulers of Austria.

In the meantime the situation on the front in France and Flanders has remained fairly quiet. There have been local attacks by the Germans here and there along the line, but nothing approaching a general battle has been reported. The Allies are improving their lines and are waiting for the enemy to make the next move.

No Signs of Panic.

As the evidence develops that the Germans are unlikely to gain a decision in the face of the maintenance of such splendid British resistance public opinion in the Old Land, which though anxious, has never been unduly depressed, is now bracing itself into a strong determination to acquiesce to whatever measures that are necessary to meet an admittedly critical situation. All contention has been silenced.

There was a flicker of labor restlessness in Manchester recently when unofficial representatives of the engineers threatened to strike against the man-power proposals, but this was promptly extinguished by an outburst of popular indignation wherein even the pacifists joined and the meetings of the district branches of Amalgamated Engineers repudiated the Manchester decision wherein the executive had no part.

Everywhere unshaken confidence is expressed that the undaunted front presented by the British troops will baffle the enemy who, with troops four or five times the British strength, only scored very moderate success and endured colossal losses.

That the enemy's offensive has been a political object, has been corroborated in an article written by a prominent Londoner, Ernest Pyke, who was released from Ruhlben after three and a half years. He frequently visited Berlin as a camp kitchen inspector.

Pyke says that the present desperate move is undoubtedly dictated by the fear of the mob, as the German people are suffering from unspeakable privations and are asking for peace food. This estimate is confirmed by the reiterated assurances of the enemy communiques recently that peace is near at hand. British opinion is confident that the allied reserve power is rallying to the determination to endure, if necessary, the most protracted conflict.

He is a most democratic type of man; and fond of introducing newly made acquaintances to his varied activities as shopkeeper, legislator, and landed proprietor. TAKE BITRO-PHOSPHATE TO INCREASE STRENGTH, VIGOR AND NERVE FORCE

Says Editor of "Physicians' "Who's Who"

Women Need it to Bring Back Pink Glow of Health to Pale Cheeks and Forestall Tell-Tale Lines of Age. Men Need It to Make Strong, Vigorous Bodies and Steady Nerves.

People who are irritable restless, nervous; those who tire easily or lack vim and energy; men and women who have faulty memory, sleepless nights, fits of depression or the "blues" should take Bitro-Phosphate three times daily after meals.

Frederick Kolle, M. D., Editor-in-Chief of "Physicians' Who's Who," New York, says: "Bitro-Phosphate should be prescribed by every doctor and used in every hospital to increase strength and nerve force and to enrich the blood."

Good, sound advice this; moreover the genuine, standard Bitro-Phosphate is inexpensive and is sold by McDermid & Jury and most all good druggists under a binding guarantee of satisfaction or money back. Test your strength by seeing how far you can walk without tiring before beginning to take it and then after two weeks or so see for yourself how your strength has increased. Note, too, if you do not feel more buoyant, have better colour, a better appetite, stronger nerves and increased vigour and energy.

LAST SURVIVOR DIES.

Rev. A. S. W. Young Climbed Mount Blanc Without Guide.

Rev. A. S. W. Young, who has just died at his home on the Thames, was the last survivor of three brothers who won the attention of the world in 1866 by making the first ascent of Mont Blanc without a guide. On their return journey they fell 2,000 feet over a precipice, one of them being killed, but the two others escaping practically unhurt.

The three brothers Young, athletes and experienced mountaineers, announced their intention of climbing Mont Blanc at the most dangerous season of the year. All endeavors to dissuade them failed, and in view of the great danger of the enterprise the main streets of Chamonix were thronged with spectators and telescopes were much in demand.

Toward 11 o'clock the three brothers were discerned looking like pygmies far up on the loftiest terrace of the Grand Plateau, climbing with remarkable vigor. They disappeared in the "Corridor" and were lost to view for an hour, when they reappeared and were seen standing together on the extreme summit of Mount Blanc. They remained there for a few minutes and then commenced the descent.

Suddenly all three vanished and an instant later they appeared 2,000 feet below. One of the trio had slipped on the edge of a precipice, and the brothers, being roped together, were shot down an almost perpendicular slope of ice to a point where it joined the border of the upper glacier. Horror-stricken, the watchers below presently saw two of the men rise to their feet, and for two and a half hours they bent over the prostrate form of the third, who seemed inert.

Then the two, one walking with great difficulty, began the laborious descent, leaving the lifeless body of their brother. It was dark before they reached the "Corridor," and they did not reach a safe stopping place until about three o'clock in the morning. A rescue party from Chamonix afterward recovered the body of the brother, whose neck had been broken by his fall.

Austria Is In State of Alarm Over Food Famine

Serious Condition Makes It Imperative to Close Austrian Parliament

SITUATION GROWING DESPERATE

AMSTERDAM, May 7.—A statement published in Vienna indicates that the closure of Parliament is due to the seriousness of the food situation. The statement says:

"The Government will devote its entire strength to the economic problem and will try to create conditions required to enable the population to hold out."

A Vienna despatch says that the Austrian Premier, Dr. Von Seydler, speaking at a conference of party leaders declared that the serious economic and food conditions made it imperative for the present Government to be spared Parliamentary criticism. He therefore demanded that the proposed sittings of Parliament be postponed, adding that unless the party leaders took this step the Government would prevent the sessions forcibly.

Apparently this conference, the date of which is not given was held before the Emperor acted.

Austria has been deep in difficulties both political and economic, for more than a year and it has been an open secret that Emperor Charles was desirous of bringing about peace, his efforts in this direction having occasionally aroused criticism in Berlin.

In the last few months there have been insistent reports that the food situation in Austria was growing desperate. It has been represented that except for the favoured classes, the people were receiving barely more than enough food to avert actual starvation. Owing to the lack of direct information, however it has been impossible to form any estimate as to the gravity of the food crisis.

The political situation also has grown disturbing in the last few months. There have been riots in various parts of the country, and among the southern Serbs a revolutionary movement has been in progress recently.

Create Southern Slav State.

Premier Von Seydler admits the existence of many problems which must receive consideration, especially the agitation for the creation of a southern Slav State.

"However, discussion of this problem is impossible for the present," he said, "because it concerns not only Austria, but also Hungary and Bosnia. But one thing is certain. If such a State were created, it could be only under the sceptre of His Majesty, as a component part of the monarchy. It could not include those parts of Austrian territory which border on the Adriatic and are closely connected with districts where the German language is spoken. But national aspirations exist also in these districts and it is only natural that the national wishes of the south Slavs be duly considered."

MOTHER! YOUR CHILD IS CROSS, FEVERISH, FROM CONSTIPATION

If Tongue is Coated, Breath Bad, Stomach Sour, Clean Liver and Bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once—a teaspoonful to-day often saves a sick child to-morrow.

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of its little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless "fruit laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

THE FIRST BIG GUN.

Was Used by Mahomet II. to Batter Walls of Constantinople.

The first great gun in history was cast for Mahomet II. for use at the siege of Constantinople by Urban, a Dane or Hungarian who, having been almost starved in the Greek service, deserted to the Moslems, Mahomet, according to Gibbon, "studied with peculiar care the recent and stupendous discovery of the Latins; and his artillery surpassed whatever yet had appeared in the world." He asked Urban if he could construct a cannon large enough to batter the walls of the city, and received a satisfactory reply. To quote Gibbon:

"On this assurance, a foundry was established at Hadriamople; the metal was prepared, and, at the end of three months, Urban produced a piece of brass ordnance of stupendous and almost incredible magnitude; a measure of twelve palms is assigned to the bore, and the stone bullet weighed above six hundred pounds. A vacant place before the new palace was chosen for the first experiment, but, to prevent the sudden and mischievous effects of astonishment and fear, a proclamation was issued to the effect that the cannon would be discharged the ensuing day. The explosion was felt or heard in the circuit of 100 furlongs, the ball, by the force of gun-powder, was driven above a mile, and on the spot where it fell it buried itself a fathom deep in the ground. For the conveyance of this destructive engine, a frame or carriage of thirty waggons linked together and drawn along by a team of sixty oxen; two hundred men on both sides were stationed to poise and support the rolling weight; two hundred and fifty workmen marched before to smooth the way and repair the bridges, and near two months were employed in a laborious journey of one hundred and fifty miles. A likely philosopher derides on this occasion the credulity of the Greeks, and observes with much reason that we should always distrust the exaggerations of a vanquished people. He calculates that a ball even of one hundred pounds, would require a charge of one hundred and fifty pounds of powder, and that the stroke would be feeble and impotent, since not a fifteenth part of the mass could be inflamed at the same moment. A stranger as I am to the art of destruction, I can discern that the modern improvements of artillery prefer the number of pieces to the weight of metal, the quickness of fire to the sound, or even the consequences of a single explosion. Yet I dare not reject the positive and unanimous evidence of contemporary writers, nor can it seem improbable that the first artists, in their rude and ambitious efforts, should have transgressed the standard of moderation. A Turkish cannon, more enormouse than that of Mahomet, still guards the entrance to the Dardanelles, and if the use be inconvenient, it has been found on a late trial that the effect was far from contemptible. A stone bullet of eleven hundred pounds weight was once discharged with three hundred and thirty pounds of powder at a distance of three hundred yards; it shivered into three rocky fragments, traversed the strait and, leaving the waters in foam, again rose and bounded against the opposite hill."

Students of history will not need to be told that the lively philosopher referred to by Gibbon was Voltaire, who said, in his "History of Charles XII.," "history is a mass of fable previously agreed upon."

The siege of Constantinople began on April 6, 1453, and five days later the bombardment began. Says Gibbons:

"The great cannon of Mahomet has been separately noticed; an important and visible object in the history of the times; but that enormous engine was flanked by two fellows of almost equal magnitude. Under a master who counted the moments, the great cannon could be loaded and fired no more than seven times in one day. The heated metal unfortunately burst; several workmen were destroyed, and the skill of the artist was admired who bethought himself of preventing the danger and the accident by pouring oil after each explosion into the mouth of the cannon. A circumstance that distinguishes the siege of Constantinople is the reunion of ancient and modern artillery. The cannon were intermingled with the mechanical engines for casting stones and darts, the bullet and the battering ram were directed against the same walls, nor had the discovery of gunpowder superseded the use of the liquid and inextinguishable fire."

Didn't Know Him.

The day after the draft quota had reached Exhibition Camp a rookie strolled in to camp after dark. As he was going past a sentry he was challenged.

"Who goes there?"

"Machine Gun 361," answered the rookie.

"Advance to be recognized."

The Woman Who Changed

NEW THOUGHTS AND NEW IDEAS

NEW THOUGHTS AND IDEAS.
CHAPTER LX.

"What a good time we had!"

Evelyn breathed a happy little sigh as she said it. We were hurrying back to the dressmaker's, having overstayed our time by half an hour.

"Didn't we! And Evelyn, what a lot he gave us to think about. I don't know that I want to become such a highly polished specimen of a society woman as to look as soulless as the woman in the picture. I should hate to look as cold, as impassive as that, even to please George."

"No danger of your ever becoming like that. You are too temperamental."

"I don't know. I feel hard already at times. I try to repress my feelings so much that perhaps I will end by having none.

"Nonsense!"

I knew someway that it wasn't nonsense. Of course as intimate as we were, as much as I thought of Evelyn, I could not tell her of the times when because I had pleased George, and he had been kind to me I had to repress all natural impulses, how I had to say "Thank you" coldly, when I wanted to put my arms around his neck and tell him he was a darling and lots of other foolish things. Kurts was so different, so demonstrative, she would not understand, even if my pride would let me talk of such things to her.

NO WONDER HE IS A BACHELOR.

"What a wonderful servant that 'Henry' of his is!" Evelyn rattled on, her tongue keeping pace with our feet. "I felt like offering him more wages to come with me. If only my cook could see that kitchen. Sometimes I just have to shut my eyes so I wouldn't see things. She is terribly disorderly."

"And hasn't he funny ideas of marrying," I returned. "I never thought of it, but why isn't it just as bad for a man to marry without love as it is for a woman? Of course he does the asking, and that presupposes love

I guess with the most of us. We think that because they want to marry us, they must love us."

"I guess that is about it," Evelyn responded as we reached the dressmaker's.

For another two hours I tried on and selected evening dresses and delicate wraps suitable for the fashionable places that we were to visit. The dainty materials, the exquisite colorings, were fascinating to both of us, and it was late in the afternoon when the last order was finally given, and Madame stood before me reading off the list she had in her hand to be sure nothing had been forgotten.

"When in the world will you wear all those lovely things?" Evelyn fairly gasped, as madame finished. "It will take dozens of trunks to hold them."

"Oh, no!" Madame laughed. "I shall be very much surprised if Madame Howard does not send to have her wardrobe replenished before the summer is over. One doesn't wear one gown too often in the places she is to spend the summer."

AT HOME WITH GEORGE.

I had telephoned for the car as I was too tired to walk home. It isn't easy to stand and try on clothes by the hour. I dropped Evelyn at her home after making her promise to spend all the time she could with me until I left on the coming Saturday for home. Then I leaned back in the car and with closed eyes I thought over all that Merton Gray had said; I visualized the dainty kitchen, the comfortable sleeping room, and the little breakfast room. "No wonder he is a bachelor," I said again.

George was at home. He returned my kiss very coldly, and as I started to tell him of the day, he stopped me by saying severely:

"Why are you so late?"

"Madame wouldn't let me off, unless I promised to come again before I left for home. I thought that I had better stay than to have to give up any more time to her. am almost dead, though," and I sank into a chair.

"Celeste" came in response to his ring.

"Take Mrs. Howard's wraps, please." Then he waited until she had gone.

"Now, I'm ready."

"Ready—ready for what?" I said, puzzled by his manner. "Oh, I know—you want to hear about the clothes——" and I launched off into a minute description of the dozens of the things I had ordered. "I shall be very gay, and very elegant, this summer, George. If you aren't proud of me you will be of my clothes."

"Where did you lunch?"

"Oh, I must tell you! Such a lovely time. Evelyn Reeve has been with me all the day. We started to go somewhere to luncheon and ran into Merton Gray. He invited us to his studio and——"

"So I heard."

To-morrow: An unexpected Disagreement.

"Home, Sweet Home."

"Home, Sweet Home" is sung in the four corners of the world, wherever English is spoken. The song which the people of the Old Country love best has sprung from the inspiration of the two great branches of the Anglo-Saxon race. Its words are those of an American, John Howard Payne, and its melody is English, the composition of Sir Henry Bishop. How near it lies to the American heart Adelina Patti well knew, as the little note which Motley has left of her singing in Vienna, years ago, shows. She was the furore at the time, and he says: "She is a dear, unsophisticated little thing. She considers herself an American, and sang 'Home, Sweet Home,' after dinner the other day, because she said she was sure we should like to hear it, and she sang it most delightfully." The love of that song, by all Anglo-Saxons, shows the identity of feeling which springs from an identity of source.

Cigarette Papers.

Of the great army of cigarette smokers there is probably not more than one in a hundred who knows that ricepaper, in which the tobacco is wrapped, has nothing to do with rice, but is made from the membranes of the breadfruit tree, or more commonly of the new trimmings of flax and hemp. So light is this paper that five hundred of the tiny sheets go to make an ounce.

Pains Followed The Nerves

From the Feet to the Top of the Head — Could Not Attend to Business For Five Months—Gaining Strength Every Day.

Bowmanville, Ont., Feb. 16. — A great number of people in this district have been trying out Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with splendid results and none are more enthusiastic than Mr. Allen.

His nervous system had become so completely run down that he had to give up his usual occupation and he suffered keenly from neuralgic pains which would dart along the nerves, causing keen distress.

But he found a cure and does not hesitate to recommend it to others. This is his letter.

Mr. Samuel Allen, Coleman Street, Bowmanville, Ont., writes:

"Last summer I suffered from a severe attack of nervousness. I was laid up, unable to attend to my business, for five months. I would be taken with pains which commenced in my feet and ran right up to the top of my head. I had frequent dizzy spells, sometimes so bad that I would fall over from dizziness. At last I commenced a treatment of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and they proved of such benefit to me that before long I was able to return to work. I am still using the Nerve Food and gaining strength every day. I can heartily recommend them to any one suffering from nervous trouble of any kind."

This letter is endorsed by Mr. John Lyle, J.P.

Children Had Whooping Cough

Whooping cough, although specially a disease of childhood, is by no means confined to that period, but may occur at any time of life. It is one of the most dangerous diseases of infancy, and yearly causes more deaths than scarlet fever, typhoid or diphtheria, and is more common in female than male children.

Whooping cough starts with sneezing, watering of the eyes, irritation of the throat, feverishness and cough. The coughing attacks occur frequently, but are generally more severe at night.

On the first sign of a "whoop" Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup should be administered, as it helps to clear the bronchial tubes of the collected mucous and phlegm.

Mrs. George Cooper, Bloomfield, Ont., writes: "It is with pleasure I can write and tell you that there never was a better cough medicine made than Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Our children had whooping cough last winter, and that is the only thing that seemed to help them. It loosens up the phlegm so that they could raise it easily. I will never be without it."

"Dr. Wood's" is 25c. and 50c. a bottle, put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; manufactured by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Poor Stupid Russians Have Protested in Vain Against Cruel Massacres

THE Russian protest to Germany against the massacre of the Transcaucasus region comes late in the course of the negotiations that gave this territory to Germany and her Turkish ally. They have already been in occupation of the land for about two months, which is a much longer time than in the past has been necessary to secure the results that are stated in the Russian protest:

"Following upon the withdrawal of the Russian troops, Turkish troops have already invaded the undefended country, and are not only killing every Turkish Armenian, but also every Russian in Armenia."

When the Russians surrendered this region they could scarcely have expected that anything else than such a wholesale slaughter would result. They must have known that the Turks were determined to exterminate the Armenians and all other Christian races, to possess their land, their stocks and valuables, and to destory their churches. They had every evidence of this intention in the fact that up to that time the Turks had slain at least 500,000 Armenians, and that they were threatening to wipe out every Christian village in Eastern Asia Minor. There is no indication, though, that the Bolshevik delegates made the least effort to provide for the protection of this land. They merely quit, turning the defenceless inhabitants over to the savagery of a merciless enemy already bent on their destruction.

In their protest they state that the peace treaty of Brest-Litovsk left "the determination of the future destiny of the people of Ardahan, Kars and Batum to themselves." Enver Pasha and his able assistant Talaat Bey especially approved this most excellent provision and began immediately to put it into execution. As the Turkish army of occupation advanced it put to death the Armenian residents of every village through which it passed. "The offensive of the Turkish troops and detachments on the Caucasus front has been followed by the murder of the whole Armenian population." Even the report of the German Consul at Trebizond upholds this statement of the Armenian National Council. Enver Pasha is thus assured of the result of his generous plan of self-determination in so much of the "ceded" territory as his army occupies.

The Russians declare that "the responsibility for all these horrors" lies with the German Government, and they call for "an immediate and energetic intervention on the part of Germany in the Caucasus." Civilization called for such action at the time of the massacres in 1915. An investigation showed, however, that Germany made no effort to restrain her ally, and that she had sanctioned and actually assisted in the deportation of the Armenian people. If she had any desire to stop the butchery in the Transcaucasus region she could have done so months ago. Protest or no protest from Russia, she is evidently determined to give her "glorious ally" a free hand in its newly-acquired territory.

Easy.

The story is told of two travelling salesmen, detained in a little village hotel in the West. They were introduced to a crazy little billiard table and a set of balls which were of a uniform dirty-gray color.

"But how do you tell the red from the white?" asked one of the drummers.

"That's easy," said the landlord. "You soon get to know 'em by their shape."

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends the Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble, Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion.

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidences of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead, get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation, and there is no soreness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder Troubles You

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kindeys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

An Abuse of the Telephone

By F. A. MITCHELL

(Copyright, 1917, Western Newspaper Union.)

"I'll call you up about nine o'clock and let you know the result."

"You can't call me up because I have no telephone in my house."

"No telephone? Why, I supposed every house had a telephone nowadays."

"Mine hasn't. It had one and I had it taken out."

"Why so?"

"Well, there's a little story about it. If you care to hear it, I'll tell it to you. You know, I live out at Hilton, an hour's ride from the city. When I was first married, my wife was alone all day, I being in town at business, so we concluded to put in a telephone so that she could call me up once in a while to break her loneliness, or if anything unusual occurred.

"Well, the first thing to be communicated was, 'I caught the mouse I set the trap for; what shall I do with it?' The next thing to be communicated was, 'Someone is ill in the house opposite; the doctor's conveyance is standing before the door.' Then she called me up to ask me to bring her a spool of thread when I came out in the evening. I must walk six blocks to a store where I could buy the kind she wanted, and she could get it by walking two blocks, or send for it by telephone. I told her to do this and she said she didn't like to ask the storekeeper to send so small a package costing only two cents. It was the same with an yeast cake.

But all this was nothing to what happened one night when I stayed in town taking an account of stock. At ten o'clock I was rung up and my wife said: 'I'm going to bed, dear. It's awful to think that you won't be at home till tomorrow evening?' I tried to cheer her by promising to go home early the next evening, and after telephoning half a dozen kisses I hung up the receiver and continued my work. Ten minutes later I was called again:

"'Reginal! Oh Reginald!'

"'What is it, dear?'

"'I hear sounds below. Someone is trying to break into the house.'

"What could I do? I couldn't ask my wife to go down and face a robber. I asked her what the sounds were like and she said they were like those made by someone boring.

"I now really became frightened myself. I was not so much afraid of burglars attacking my wife; for I knew that she had her bedroom door locked and furniture heaped against it. What I feared was that she would be frightened to death. However, I must plan for her.

"I called a council of those working with me in stock taking, stating that my wife was locked in her room at home while burglars were below boring in the door, doubtless intending to make a hole to put in an arm to remove the chain and open the door. All voted it a complicated case. It was suggested that I telephone the police at Hilton to go at once to my house, surround it and capture the burglar. I wondered that I had not thought of this plan myself, for it was very simple, and a telephone message from me from the city would be as effective as from my wife in Hilton.

"I called up the police in Hilton and told them to go at once to my house, where they would find someone trying to bore his way in. The man at the desk said that burglars didn't really effect entrance in that way, but he would send some men right over.

"While awaiting the result my wife telephoned me that she had located the boring. It was at the door of a storm shed which was held closed by an iron hook. I thought that any burglar who planned to effect an entrance to my house there was a fool. After unhooking the storm door he would have to open the door within, which was protected by an excellent lock.

"It was not long before I received word from the police at Hilton. 'We got him. He is now in a cell.'

"I at once telephoned my wife that the danger was past. But realizing that she had suffered a shock, I said that I would go home on the one o'clock train.

"I reached the house about two o'clock and found several of the neighbors attempting to soothe my wife, whose nerves had been terribly strained. While sympathizing with her I received a telephone message from the police that their prisoner claimed to be my wife's brother and desired that I come immediately and identify him.

"'Great heavens! could this be so?'

"I answered the summons immediately and on reaching the station, there waiting for me sat Jim Chambers, my brother-in-law, true enough.

"'What in thunder—' he began.

"'What the dickens were you trying to break in—?'

"'I had a key to the side door and I was trying to cut away a bit of wood in order to lift the hook on the storm door.'

"'You've scared Mollie out of her senses. Why didn't you ring?'

"'I thought I could get in without waking her.'

"That's the end of the story and the end of a telephone in my house. If the things could be used only for legitimate purposes they would be a great convenience, but they won't do for nervous wives to say sweet things to their absent husbands."

IRON HADES IN SOUTH WALES

Molten Metal Rolling Down Side of Invisible Wall Turns Heavens Into Great Blaze.

The first night spent by a visitor in South Wales, in the center of the great iron country, is marked by a wonderful impression, says the London Daily Mail.

In the daytime the iron works seem only an ugly cluster of tall chimneys and uneven roofs seen through gray smoke. More insistent are the shrill voices of ragged children and the huddling cottages of the workmen, at whose doors stand careworn women with anxious eyes. And the dim mountains, sometimes half hidden by sweeping rainstorms and sometimes a clear greenish color, every lonely tree on their bare sides silhouetted in a darker hue, force themselves upon the eye with the tragedy of their impotence against the defiling hand of man. When one stands right beneath the tips they stand out against the sky like monstrous caricatures of Swiss peaks. There is something about this place desolate and infinitely depressing.

But at night when all is dark the sky is suddenly lit with a red glare. From the window the stranger sees a ruddy light touching the billowing clouds and glimmering away to blackness between them. He sees roofs and chimneys standing out in startling solidity against the flaming background; the furnaces are opened, and it is as though the lid of hell were lifted. Then, on top of one of the tips, but appearing as though isolated in the sky, comes a stream of brilliant gold rolling down the side of the invisible wall in molten fire.

LAUGH AND GROW FAT.

"Laugh and grow fat," is an old saying laden with value for nervous people in particular. Drop the worry habit and use Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and you will soon get the nervous system restored to good condition. Digestion will improve, appetite will return, and you will find such symptoms as headache and sleeplessness fast disappearing.

VERSES TO NURSES.

How Tommy, In the Hospital, Writes Poetry.

Robert Service has given us "The Rhymes of a Red Cross Man," but no one seems to have had time to compile an anthology of "The Rhymes of the Red Cross Patient." This is unfortunate for the merriment of the public, since, so soon as the "boys" adopt hospital blues, just as certainly do the majority of them for some unknown reason adopt the poetic mood and burst into verse. Whereat, as one cynic remarked, the others long to burst into tears, though quite often they burst into laughter — and continue to chuckle.

For the very gaucherie of the doggerel is amusing, the witticisms are usually pungent, while the high lights that are turned on to sentimental matters are at times the essence of unconscious drollery.

The verses are purely topical or highly sentimental. Any nursing member possessing a name which easily rhymes is a godsend to the verse-making "boys." And emphatically do they rise up and call her blessed—or, at any rate, the Tommy Atkins equivalent. One attempt says:

I came, I saw, and in I strode,
To E 3 Ward to Sister Rhode,
She is the best round here by far,
I'd like to stay, but there y'are,
Blighty calleth me.

The literary equivalent of a shrug of the shoulders which "there y'are" conveys is truly inimitable.

Another laudatory poem destined to bring a blush to the most hardened cheek closes with these two verses:

And when I'm out on patrol one night,
Crawling along, knees shaking with fright,
Just doing a trip along Fritzy's wire,
Bombs in pocket and covered in mire.

I'll think of the good old times I've had
"Swinging the lead" (they think I'm bad)
And I'll just carry on with my job serene
With thoughts of C 4 and Sister Green.

The only Limerick that has come my way gave immense pleasure to its author. Here it is:

There once was a patient named Scotty,
The others all thought he was dotty
But they all got a shock
When the Major said "Stop,"
He sails to-night at five-thirty.

The erudite may cavil and maintain that "thirty" and "dotty" do not constitute a true rhyme, but as "Scotty's" pronunciation of "thirty" was "thortty," poetic requirements were satisfied, he was pleased, and it was hugely delighted; so the Limerick "did its bit."

Of course no apology for using this item of the boys' phraseology—as is a hospital patient is going to exercise the art universally. Hence the following:

Our night-sister by mistake
Gave Pat poison for an ache,
"Dear, dear," she said, "that's pretty rough.
"For poison's such expensive stuff."

The naughtiness of the jibe is only equalled by the naive airiness with which "our night-sister" gives poison—no less!—by mistake!

The opening lines of the following Scotch contribution recall the diction and phraseology of Chaucer, though the critical may lament the falling-off in style and the lapse into 20th century vernacular:

When ah was in T— in France,
N. Y. General I did entrance.
And fa' o' frien's I did it find,
Some o' them o' the very best kind.
One of them was Sister Brent,
And ah reckon noo she is weel kent.

She can aye gie a cheery smile
Tae only patient that's got the bile.
Her latest patient was me, I think,
But noon ah can tell ye ah am in the pink,
And if a Jock gets in her ward
He never will feel tired or bored.

The gift of a poem of this kind to a nursing member is accepted with becoming appreciation and the assurance that such flattery is very pernicious for her character and is turning her head. Whereat the patient smiles broadly.

But the little rhyme serves its purpose. It has amused the rhymester in the making, and—who shall say?—perhaps it may bring a smile to us nurses in the years to come, when of these crowded living days we have nothing but faded, elusive memories.

Bohemia's Struggle.

Bohemia went through some of the most barbarous of the German religious wars in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. Between 1617 and 1637 the Bohemian population was reduced from 3,000,000 to 780,000 by the ravages of execution and exile. The Czech language was banished from the Bohemian schoolroom in favor of the German by the otherwise liberal Maria Theresa just two years before the American Declaration of Independence. Czech rioting signalized the upheavals in 1848 that drove Metternich and his fellow reactionaries to the timely seclusion. Yet the Ausgleich or Austro-Hungarian compromise of 1867 found Bohemia still refused the national recognition it demanded. — Richard Wilmer Rowanft in World's Work.

BEES IN THE SPRINGTIME

Fine Weather Necessary When They Are Taken From Cellar.

PAINFUL DISEASE CURED

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE arrival of spring brings up the question, "When and how shall I set my bees out of the Cellar?" to the minds of all farmer beekeepers. The answer calls for judgment on the part of each beekeeper. The factors which must take a part in forming correct judgment are (1) the cellar, (2) the bees, and (3) the season.

The ideal cellar will permit the beekeeper to keep his bees confined much longer than will an unfavorable cellar. This is desirable. A fairly dry, dark, easily regulated and ventilated cellar when the temperature can be maintained at 45 degrees Fahr. is ideal. Very few Ontario farm cellars will meet these requirements, however, so that the weather conditions play a more prominent part in the farmer-beekeeper's decision.

As a rule, the farmer-beekeeper will do well to carefully select opportune weather and to give the colony some protection after setting out. Watch the weather forecasts closely and when the wind gets around to the south and east, with a prospect for rain on the morrow, start in the evening and move out all if possible. Contract all entrances to suit size of colony, giving strong colonies approximately ⅞ in. by 2 in. and arrange a cushion of chaff (6 to 8 inches thick at least) over the brood chamber. It pays to pack the sides as well, especially in the northern sections of Ontario. Special packing cases of ⅞ in. material are made for this purpose, giving 3 to 4 inches packing room. The shock to brood rearing is very much reduced by packing and colonies therefore build up more rapidly.—W. A. Weir, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Ontario.

To Treat Inflamed Udder of Cows.

Mammitis or inflammation of the udder is a common disease in cows. It is caused by irregular milking, exposure to cold and dampness, wounds, bruises, rough or careless handling during milking, etc., and in many cases appears without well marked cause.

Symptoms.—One or more quarters of the udder become swollen, hard and tender. The patient becomes dull, appetite lessened and temperature increased. The quality of the milk is more or less altered. In most cases curdled milk and a thin fluid resembling whey appears when the teats are drawn. In some cases a portion of curdled milk becomes lodged in the milk duct and is somewhat hard to remove. In some cases clotted blood also appears.

Constitutional treatment consists in keeping the patient as comfortable as possible, preferably in a roomy, well-bedded box stall. A brisk purgative of 1 to 2 lbs. epsom salt, ½ to 1 dram of gambage and 1 to 2 oz. ginger (according to size of patient) dissolved in a quart of warm water should be given, and followed up with 4 to 6 drams of nitrate of potassium twice daily for three days. The patient should be fed food not particularly inclined to cause milk production until the inflammation is allayed.

Local treatment consists in applying heat to the udder, either by keeping hot poultices to it or by long continued and frequently repeated bathing with hot water. Poultices can be applied by using a piece of cloth or canvas, with hole cut for the protrusion of the teats and fastening it by strings or straps over the hips and loins. The application of poultices of the proprietory preparation known as "antiphlogistine" gives good results. The fluid should be drawn from each quarter 4 or 5 times daily and after each milking the udder should be well massaged and rubbed with camphorated oil. Where this oil cannot be readily obtained its substitution by goose-grease gives good results.—J. H. R., Ontario Agricultural College.

Plant the Cultivated Crops.

To ensure good crops of carrots, mangles, sugar beets, potatoes and corn, the land should be well prepared and seed should be secured of the highest quality. Under average conditions the Irish Cobbler variety (early potatoes) and the Green Mountain (late potatoes) are recommended for Ontario. To secure best results with the potato crop, it is always better to plant them not later than the 15th of May. This year plant half your seed ten days earlier than you have been accustomed to, and plant the other half at the usual time. The experiment will prove to your satisfaction the value of early planting. If the potato planter and sprayer have not already been overhauled, a rainy day may be very profitably employed in this work.

Live Stock Reminders.

A regular and ample supply of salt will always be found helpful in promoting the thrift of live stock.

When pasture is provided for pigs much less concentrated food is required. In view of the present labor shortage pasture will be particularly valuable this year.

Mares worked previous to foaling will perform a good deal of work and the result will be stronger foals than with idle mares.

If pasture is allowed to get a good start it will carry more stock than if eaten bare from the start.—Ontario Agricultural College Notes.

Few drops on corn or callus stops pain, then they lift off.

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on your feet, but why care now?

This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A genius in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Small bottles of freezone can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Never limp or twist your face in pain again, but get a bottle of freezone and apply a few drops on your tender, aching corns or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shrivelled and loose that you lift it off with fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses, without suffering one particle, without the slightest irritation of the surrounding skin. Just a touch of freezone on a sore corn gives instant relief.

SEVERAL HUNORED TITLES HANG IN THE BALANCE

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 7.—It is stated to-day that in spite of the desire of the Government to bring the session to a close as speedily as possible, the House will not prorogue until the promised field day on titles has been held, and the motion of W. F. Nickle, with its accompanying amendment, have been disposed of. Mr. Nickle stated to-day that he has been promised that the adjourned debate on the subject would be resumed. Mr. Nickle's motion was aimed against hereditary and reflected titles. The amendment of Richardson, of Springfield, was aimed at the abolition of all titles whatsoever, and had the amendments been put on the evening of the debate it would have carried. But Sir Robert Borden intervened to point out that in its existing form it would include not only military but civil honours. It is now the intention of the mover of the amendment to exclude military decorations of various kinds from his motion. In the meantime it may be noted that several hundred titles recommended under the new Imperial Order have been held up.

Council Was Tired At Regular Meeting Held Last Night

The Council was in no mood to daily over the routine of city business last night. It had been a strenuous and a somewhat trying day, and the aldermen were fatigued and drowsy. They had covered a long route from early morning and had passed through at least the penumbra of the white light that beats upon the throne. The public eye had been focused upon them, as they performed their duties as deputies of the dear people. And the daylight saving measure prolonged the day. The aldermanic heads were a trifle heavy from the need of sleep and rest, and perhaps from the burden of the tall black tiles that added a formal note to the reception.

Ald. Dobbin arrived a little late, and Ald. Worth's chair was as vacant throughout the evening as Ald. Langford's.

A communication from the 57th Band asked the Council whether they would accept an offer or set a price on the 93rd band instruments. It was referred to the Property committee, who have a new agreement with the War Veterans under contemplation.

Mr. G. W. Mulligan's presence was a certain sign that summer is here. He was, as a matter of form, given authority to use Central Park on Sunday nights for open air services.

The Hydro-Electric Commission announced that they could not at present reduce the light rates.

Mr. W. W. Yale informed the Council that there is now an egress of labourers from the city and that they might be kept here to build the sewer on Princess street.

Mr. J. C. Shook of the Dickson Company, objected to the inclusion in the fire limits of the property north of London street and east of Harvey street.

J. H. BURNHAM PAYS COMPLIMENT TO THE POLICE DEPARTMENT

Complimenting Chief Thompson and the Police Department on the appearance and conduct of the force yesterday, Mr. J. H. Burnham said this morning that it would be a great pity if there should be any measure to decrease the force in numbers and efficiency. "I always found the best advertisement of a town, in the eyes of strangers, in a well set up, well disciplined and likely looking police force. Strangers in other places always seem to get the idea that they can judge of a town, as of a person, very largely by the smartness and general get up of the police."

This commendation was well deserved by the police department yesterday. Chief Thompson performed something of a miracle. At many corners there were policemen, sergeants and constables, their frequent appearance conveying the impression that Peterborough must be well supplied in this department. Their first evidence was at the C.P.R. station, where the chief was in charge with Sergt. Blade and P. C. McIntosh, mounted on the fine team of saddle horses from the Jones livery. There were policemen at the corner of Charlotte and George streets, also at Charlotte and Aylmer, and two at the corner of Charlotte and Park streets. There must have been quick moving of the bluecoat scenery to present such a complete stage as that. The nearest approach to the movement was Public School Inspector Mowat's performance. He met the Governor-General at the King Edward school, and when the party arrived at the South Central he was assisting the teachers as if he had been there all morning. Again he was at the Queen Mary school, and had the satisfaction of seeing everywhere little receptions that merged into a splendid whole.

READY TO FIGHT

Canadian Press:

BERNE, Switzerland, via Reuter's, May 7.—Labour and Socialist organizations in Austria threaten a revolt against the Government action in suspending Parliament. Swiss newspapers print a telegram from Vienna, quoting the Sozial Demokratische Korrespondez to the effect that a committee of the Socialist party and a committee of the German Socialist Deputies Club have decided to issue a manifesto to the working class in regard to the Government action, in which the following declaration will be made:

"If absolutism is re-established out of regard for Pan-Germanism, which is prolonging the war, the working classes will be forced to fight for their rights."

The manifesto concludes by exhorting the workers to hold themselves to be ready to fight if necessary.

PEANUT IN BABY'S LUNG CAUSED DEATH

Half a peanut breathed into his lung, was a contributory cause in the death last night of little Jack Blewett the baby son of Mr. and Mrs. William Blewett, 345 Rubidge street. He was just one year and ten months old, a bright, healthy boy who had rarely been sick. Yesterday morning, in charge of two girls, he was taken down town to see the soldiers, the band and the other big features of the Governor-General's reception. The girls had some salted peanuts, and gave the baby one of them to eat. Half of it caught in the boy's windpipe, and was carried into a lung. The baby was later taken to the Nicholls Hospital. Everything was done to save his life, but he died at 10.30 p.m. of suffocation.

Mr. and Mrs. Blewett will receive general sympathy in their loss of their only child. The funeral will be held on Wednesday from the family residence to Lakefield cemetery.

Gas Attack On American Front

Americans Retaliated--The Guns Roared All Night—A Sample of Enemy Treachery

INFANTRY NERVOUS

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS IN PICARDY, May 7.—The rear German organizations have been bathed in gas, in retaliation for their gassing of the American areas. The guns roared all night.

The Boches threw over more than 15,000 "Yperite" mustard gas shells gassing one village and all roads in the vicinity. Subsequently there was a three hour bombardment with high explosives, the Americans keeping under cover in their newly constructed dugouts. The concentrated German gas attack was like a rain of gigantic bad eggs.

German Prisoners.

The American patrols are bringing in German prisoners every night. They also are developing the deepest hatred for treachery of the Boche. One entered the front line alone, yelling "Kamerad." The Americans' suspicions were aroused and they surrounded him quickly. They found that he was loaded down with hand grenades. He tried to escape but was overpowered.

The German infantry is displaying signs of nervousness, increasing its fire and sending up numerous rockets at night.

Y.M.C.A. CAMPAIGN MEETS WITH SUCCESS

The Red Triangle Campaign opened to-day and late reports received this afternoon indicate that the campaign is meeting with a large measure of success. The various teams went over the top early this morning, and judging by the ready response the objective will be exceeded. It is not the intention of the campaign committee to make a house to house canvass. Any one desiring to contribute to this worthy cause may leave their donations at the Royal Bank.

THE EARN AND GIVE CAMPAIGN.

The boys' "Earn and Give campaign" got off to a good start last night when the local director, Mr. Hughson Johnstone, got the "teen age" boys lined up on two sides, one being the Army and the other the Navy.

The Army will be led temporarily by General Bill Parsons, and the Navy by Admiral Norman Foote. In all likelihood these officers will be reduced in rank unless they are able to show their superiority in obtaining results.

The line-up is—

Navy: George Street, All Saints, St George's, Murray Street, Grace, Bethany Tabernacle, St. Paul's, St. Andrew's.

Army: Trinity, St. John's, St. Luke's, Park Street, Knox, Mark St., St. James, Salvation Army.

All "teen age" boys at all interested in this noble work of helping the fellows at the front should be at the Y.M.C.A. at 7 p.m., sharp, on Wednesday evening, whether you have been approached or not; come and learn something about it, and get a button.

Since going to press a large number of pledges have been signed up. Watch to-morrow's papers and see who is ahead.

STRANGE QUIET CONTINUES ON THE WESTERN FRONT

WEATHER CONDITIONS

(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, May 7.—(10 o'clock Bulletin)—The strange quiet reigning on the west front daily furnishes fresh proof of the disorganization of the German armies. The assaults on the Somme and in Flanders have resulted in the necessity of a complete patching up before attempting to go on.

Of the total of 206 divisions (2,472,000 men) in the west, more than 104 have been used in battle without achieving any of the definite results promised the German people. But one cannot insist too after that these divisions have not been completely wiped out. Some have been badly cut up, but others only slightly, so a short rest and a few recruits will make them as good as ever.

Nearly Complete.

For instance, in the 1917 Franco-British west front campaigns, the Germans used the equivalent of 306 divisions (3,672,000 men), exactly one hundred more than are now on the entire west front, showing that many divisions are able to appear several times in different parts of the line, by a process of rotation and reorganization.

Hindenburg has been hit hard, but by now his reorganization should about be complete. When the weather and other conditions are favourable there can be no doubt but that he will hit again and hard, though not necessarily on the Somme or the Lys.

AMERICAN TROOPS CONTINUE TO ARRIVE ON WESTERN FRONT

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, May 7.—"American troops continue to pour in," the Echo De Paris said to-day.

"Completion of the Entente Bloc, including the United States, militarily as well as economically, throughout and after the war, cannot be prevented by the belated, though desperate, offensive of the German militarists."

America Has Large Reserves

Class One Will Provide Over a Million Men For The Army — The Fighting Strength.

DEFERRED CLASSES

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 7.—President Wilson's great army expansion plan is backed up by a reservoir of approximately 1,150,000 physically fit men of Class one, officials of Provost Marshal General Crowder's office declared to-day.

This represents the actual fighting strength of the class, with a deduction for the call of Saturday for 233,000 men included. To this will be added about 700,000 additional fit fighters by the registration of the twenty-one year-olds next month, increasing the reserves to nearly 2,500,000 men.

This figure assures that the deferred classes need not be invaded to supply all the increases now planned under the expansion programme, officials said.

Montreal Man Robbed of $12,000

Canadian Press:

MONTREAL, May 7.— Having sold the Balmoral Hotel for $35,000 cash, Michael McDonald was on his way home last night, and was way-laid by a man and woman, who relieved him of twelve thousand dollars. The woman was arrested but the money has not been recovered.

The Red Triangle War Work Campaign

If You Have Not Been Canvassed Send in Your Contribution

In a single day's campaign, even with a number of canvassers, it is just possible that you have not been seen. You may have been out when called on, or busy at the time, or accidently forgotten. The fund is such an important one for the boys at the front that every dollar is needed.

If you have not as yet contributed, will you kindly do so?

Any sum you may care to send will be appreciated. Just address your envelope with enclosure to the Red Triangle Fund, Prudential Office, Peterborough.

FIVE HUNDRED MACHINE GUNS MADE EACH DAY

Special to the Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Five hundred machine guns of all kinds are being ground out of America's factories per day for the army overseas. This record will grow steadily, according to the ordnance experts, and, while a maximum of 1,500 per day will probably not be reached before November first, there will be very considerable constant production increases in the next two or three months.

Peterboro Ladies Are Riding Bicycles More Than Ever

One Local Dealer Reports The Sale Of An Unusually Large Number Of Ladies' Wheels.

Few people know that more than 600,000 new wheels and many thousands of used wheels are sold annually. Last year there were more than 4,000,000 bicycle riders in the United States alone.

As an indication of the increasing popularity of the wheel, Mr. C. R. Banks, a local dealer, reports that he has sold more ladies' wheels already this year than he sold the whole of last year.

In England, France, Italy and all the older countries the bicycle is used, in proportion to population, even more extensively than in this country. During the forthcoming National Bicycle Week, there will be many track and road races and sociability runs for everything. There are also scattered throughout the country a large number of Bicycle Clubs, composed for the most part of young men, and wherever such organizations are active, they will take charge of the sociability end of National Bicycle Week. Where track or road races are held, these active wheeling bodies will also conduct them, under the standard rules for amateur sporting events.

In England the bicycle has gone hand-in-hand with all patriotic work. Women in England and France are riding bicycles by the hundreds of thousands, everywhere, in the cities and the country.

A Fine Set Of Posters

Liberty Bond Posters on Exhibition in Richard Hall & Son's Store

When Mr. J. G. Camparsie, of The De Laval Company, was attending the Salesmen's Convention in Detroit recently, he was so struck with the series of advertising matter gotten out for the Liberty Bond campaign that he secured a complete set, and they are very fine productions of the lithographers' presses.

They are on exhibition in the window of Richard Hall & Son, and show the very earnest way in which the States have entered into the war.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

TUESDAY, MAY 7TH, 1918.

A SIGNIFICANT PROCESSION.

The procession of khaki-clad men which marched to the C.P.R. station to welcome His Excellency the Governor-General and party yesterday was significant one inasmuch as it comprised not only those men of the Canadian expeditionary forces who have done their duty overseas, but also the men of the new army called into uniform by the Military Service Act, and whose service is still before them. The fact that the two were interminged, with no distinction between them as far as positions in the ranks were concerned, was a graceful public acknowledgment by the Veterans that Canada's new soldiers are comrades who will soon be facing the common enemy in Flanders. The presence of the latest additions to Canada's army was made possible by the G.W.V.A. who obtained the necessary leave from General Hemming, commanding No. 3 Military District and the men who voluntarily went overseas and faced the perils and hardships of the firing line, have by their action of yesterday administered a public rebuke to the thoughtless people who have been inclined to say unkind things about the men of the new army. It was a very pleasing incident, one that was appreciated by the new soldiers, and should have a lasting impression on the public mind.

"WE ARE ALL RIGHT."

That is the confident message which Premier Lloyd George brings back from a visit to Britain's army at the front, and its cheerful tone emphasizes the decided improvement in the war situation during the past few days. The peril has not passed, the enemy will probably strike again soon and strike hard, but the allies have shown that the line will not break, and meanwhile their forces are steadily increasing by the arrival of American troops. "Many more will pour in steadily during the coming month," Lloyd George tells us.

With the exception of the seizure of the Russian Black Sea fleet by the Teuton allies, the news generally is encouraging. Germany's peace offensive is a sign that all is not going as the Junkers' general staff intended, the troubles in Austria-Hungary are multiplying, food conditions are growing steadily worse. Such conquests as Germany has recently made can hardly be considered assets. The enemy is wasting his strength in fruitless attempts to roll up the allied armies. His resources have been drained, his reserves are being used up, and he knows that thousands of American soldiers will shortly be arrayed against him. The ground that he has gained has been won at an enormous price, and Lloyd George points out that the cost for the Germans is increasing. The United States' third Liberty Loan has been enormously over-subscribed, and the general outlook is brighter than since the German offensive began.

MAJOR J. C. DAVIDSON.

One of the many interesting features of the visit of His Excellency the Governor-General to Peterborough yesterday was the presentation to Major J. C. Davidson, of the Colonial Auxiliary Forces Decoration, emblematic of twenty years' service in the Canadian Army. It was indeed fitting that the symbolic value of the decoration should be enhanced by the fact that it was presented by the King's representative. Major Davidson's many friends will congratulate him upon the completion of twenty years' faithful service as chaplain to His Majesty's forces. For many years Major Davidson has been administering to the spiritual welfare of the 57th Regiment. Before the war he took the deepest interest in the men of the Rangers and in doing everything in his power for the unit to which he was attached. When war's tocsin was sounded, Major Davidson, although well advanced in years, and not the possessor of a very robust constitution, was determined to have a share in the glorious work of the Canadian army overseas. As chaplain of Peterborough's battalion, the 93rd, he laboured unceasingly to promote the welfare of the officers and men of Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit. Afterwards appointed to the Ontario Military Hospital at Orpington, England, he did very useful work and finally, to his supreme delight he was permitted to realize his ambition of going to France where he did excellent service as chaplain to a Canadian hospital. By his service overseas and his many years of labour on behalf of the 57th Regiment, he has richly earned the honour with which he was presented yesterday, and which, by a happy coincidence, came almost simultaneously with his return to take charge of his duties as rector of St. John's church.

LETTING GEORGE DO IT.

All through life some of us are passing on duty and responsibility to others. "Let George do it," is the popular attitude, and the shifty motto of those who take it is "never do what you can get somebody else to do."

A man's hat blew off on the crowded street the other day. "Aren't you going after it?" asked his companion, as the "lid" gyrated down the centre of the road. "Not me!" was the reply. "Some fool will chase it up and bring it back;" and sure enough up rushed a fat red faced party, puffing and blowing with the hat in his hand.

We do not always put our sentiments in as bald and cold blooded a way as the owner of the hat, but it is to be feared that many of us are guilty of the same kind of "altruism" with regard to the obligations, and especially those that have been thrust upon us by the war. There are those reading these lines who have heard the call to conservation, and conomy in food stuffs, and which is quite as important and essential as the call to the trenches; and yet they have never missed a meal or dropped any item from the bill of fare that has been suggested as a necessity for the men at the front. "Let George do it" is their reply, as they go on absorbing their three meals a day and stuff themselves after they come home from a patriotic meeting at night.

"Let George do it," is the practical response that these same "patriots" made to the invitation to purchase Victory bonds, or the plea for funds by the Red Cross Society. There are men who have put money into new automobiles, or in trips to the Sunny South this winter, who have turned down appeals for patriotic funds and for bond subscriptions. No doubt if these people thought that it was a matter of life or death, or if they realized that their own precious necks or chattels were involved, it might be different. They think it is George's affairs, and they let George go down into his jeans as well as out in his jeans, to fight the war of civilization and democracy. Poor George—poorer "patrioteers."

"Let George do it," is the policy of the man who would rather feather his own nest than take a hand in hunting the vultures that are trying to make the world a shambles. Others may give up home and business to stay with their bodies, this avalanche of horror that threatens to engulf the race, while they sit down at home, and spend their time between counting coppers and criticizing the government regulations that interfere with the flow of the coin into their little fists.

"Let George do it," is a policy that will lose this war. People with such a policy deserve to lose it. This putting it on the other fellow may pass in some cases but it is an awful thing to send men to the battle front and leave them there to die. One may have some respect for a man who through physical fear hesitates to throw his body into the breach, but the fellow who deliberately sits down in the back lines and eats the food or holds back the rations of the man struggling in the front trenches, is worse than Bolo Pasha.

If you are one of those fellows with his nose so close over the muck rake of business, or his finer senses so deadened by his stomach or love of ease, that he can't see anything, but his own selfish interests, get up and shake yourself. Quit settling everything by the question, "Where do I come in?"

There will be men at the close of this war who, if they are not relieved by law of the disgraceful gains they have made out of the blood of others, will be stripped of every vestige of reputation by public contempt, and their names handed down to posterity as examples of those who passed it on to "George." — The Furniture Journal.

CAPT. BURNHAM SEES RED.

Capt. J. H. Burnham went over the top at the opening of the Great War Veterans' rooms last night, in what he styled a "red triangle campaign of truth." Last night's outburst, he intimated, was only the preliminary attack—if the others develop in vehemence as they proceed they will be awaited with interest.

The worthy member for West Peterborough could see nothing but red. Whether his onion farm is not showing sufficient progress, or whether he is still peeved because W. F. Nickle of Kingston stole his thunder in regard to the title question, or whether he was endeavouring to show that he had become one of the Toronto Telegram's so-called "ginger group," his astonished audience could not quite decide. Certainly West Peterborough's representative gave the impression that he was far from being in good humour.

At all events he said things about the Government that if they had appeared in a newspaper would have earned for the latter the pet description from Mr. Burnham's local journalistic support of "the copperhead press." He was sick of hearing platitudes about gratitude to the war veterans, he said. The people of Canada were not grateful; the Government was not grateful. They were thankful enough for favours, yet to come but not for services rendered by those who were not fit to give any further assistance.

Then the red triangle of the Y.M.C.A. flashed through Captain Burnham's mind and he turned loose a terrific verbal barrage on that institution. His remarks could hardly be construed as an endorsement of the campaign that is under way. He had been informed that the rent of the Veterans' rooms also included the taxes on the property. Why should the Y.M.C.A. with its big building where the good young men played pool and billiards when they should be at home be exempt from taxes when the Veterans had to pay on their small quarters? That was one of the questions he hurled forth.

Then more red crossed his vision—the crimson of the tape with which the Government is hopelessly entangled. According to Captain Burnham there is red tape in miles, not in yards, and he proceeded to illustrate by describing the adventures of an application from the Peterborough War Veterans for the use of part of the rifle range grounds for a greater production campaign. The returned soldier who has been wondering why his pension has not been quickly adjusted will wonder no longer after hearing Captain Burnham's recital of the wanderings of this simple application. First it reached the Deputy Minister of Militia, then was passed an to the Prime Minister, who advised seeing the Minister of Militia. General Mewburn said that he had nothing to do with gardening, and suggested seeing Sir Jas. Lougheed, head of the Soldiers' Civic Re-establishment Department. The latter advocated an interview with Hon. Arthur Meighen in charge of the Land Settlement scheme of the Government, who waved Mr. Burnham and the Veterans' application on in the direction of one of his experts. The latter's counsel was to see the Minister of Agriculture, but Hon. Mr. Crerar had no jurisdiction, so he said, and finally after going around the circle the matter came back to the Prime Minister and nothing was done.

"The public, including the Government, has fallen far short of its duty to the men of the army who have returned," was Captain Burnham's indictment. "I have seen so much down-right rank humbug in this country in regard to war veterans that it makes me doubt the sincerity of the people."

The closing portion of the address was reminiscent of the recent speech of D. D. MacKenzie in the budget debate. The description of the men who could quote many texts from the Bible and yet were Pharisees, sucking the life blood of the country, did not contain any names, but none were needed.

It was rather an astonishing oratorical tornado. Everything had been moving along with the peaceful serenity that usually distinguishes such public function, so that Captain Burnham's outburst was as surprising as the first news of the Germans' long range gun. The resounding bang with which he assaulted the president's table as he finished his peroration sent up a regular shower of papers under cover of which the member for West Peterborough took his departure leaving his audience gasping.

It was the star turn of the evening.

A Wrecked Army.

The history of the Russian army since May-June, 1917, is a history of increasing deterioration. It suggests something fatal. Lack of food, lack of munitions, lack of management, lack of transportation facilities—these defects only added to the inherent destructive forces. The Galician drive, headed by Kerensky, in June, was the last attempt to attain the impossible. The drive was a complete failure. The attack of the Liberal press on the army for its humiliating retreat, the epithets "cowards," "traitors," "rascals," applied to the soldiers by the over-zealous patriots, only increased the hatred of the army toward war partisans. Under such conditions no Government favoring a war policy could meet with success. Anything that the Provisional Government did was wrong. Anything that had even a flavor of "peace" was right. Any measure that tried to stem the current of popular sentiment was doomed to failure. Any measure, including the overthrow of the Government—if it only promised cessation of war—commanded a hearty support.—Moissaye J. Olgin in Asia.

IRELAND REMAINS REMARKABLY QUIET SAYS DAILY MAIL

Enormous National Defence Fund Being Collected to Fight Conscription—Sinn Feinism is Spreading.

HOARDING SILVER

Canadian Press:

LONDON, May 7.—Ireland remains remarkably quiet, says the Dublin correspondent of the Daily Mail in reporting on conditions there incident to the anti-conscription campaign. "Although the Church is raising," he adds, "the enormous National Defence Fund, which is ostensibly being collected to fight conscription, it apparently does not prepare to accept the responsibility for the manner in which money is spent and control of fund has passed into the hands of the Sinn Fein. Conditions appear daily to be growing worse as nationalism is being spread further along on the Sinn Fein flood. Moderate men of the Irish Convention have faded out of public recognition. The shortage of silver continues very acute, and difficulty in making change has almost paralyzed business in some towns. Postage stamps are being used in the midlands and in the west instead of coin. As long as hoarding continues, all efforts to meet the shortage probably will be futile."

Editor, The Examiner City:

Dear Sir,—Feeling that an injustice has been done Mr. C. S. Thompson in the report of the exemption proceedings that appeared in your Saturday issue, I would like the opportunity of setting the matter straight.

In the first place Mr. Thompson is not engaged by Farm and Dairy, as stated, but is engaged by The Horticultural Publishing Company Ltd. In the second place your report without stating so, might lead the public to think that Mr. Thompson had appeared on his own behalf. This was not the case. The three editions of The Canadian Horticulturist in connection with which Mr. Thompson is engaged by The Horticultural Publishing Company Ltd., namely the Fruit, Floral and Agricultural Editions, are the only publications in Canada in their field, and each is playing an active part in connection with the campaign for increased food production. This campaign has been such as to lead the Dominion Fruit Commissioner, Mr. Dan Johnson, who has been actively associated with the Food Controller in the cause of increased production, to write to us some time ago urging us to make application for exemption on Mr. Thompson's behalf because of the importance of his services to the country. We have received a similar letter from the President of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association. On the strength of these two applications we felt warranted in making application as a company for Mr. Thompson's exemption, especially in view of the fact that the medical examination placed him in Class B2 and his own physician's statement shows him to be unfit for active military service. Mr. Thompson did not make any application for exemption on his own behalf.

I had intended appearing on Mr. Thompson's behalf but being called away, requested Mr. Thompson to attend and to phone me should the case be called. I understand that application was made to His Honour Judge Huyke to this effect. His Honour did not see his way clear to grant either this request or the exemption asked. In justice to Mr. Thompson we would like that these facts should be made known.

Yours very truly,
The Horticultural Publishing Co., Ltd

Managing Director.

THERE IS NOTHING FOR THE LIVER
SO GOOD AS MILBURN'S LAXA-LIVER PILLS

They will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels and will tone, renovate, and purify the liver, removing every result of liver trouble from the temporary, but disagreeable bilious and sick headaches, to the severest forms of liver complaint.

They are small and easy-acting, do not gripe, sicken or weaken like the old-fashioned, nauseating, griping purgatives.

Mrs. A. Kirk, 53 Yorkville Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I have tried and tested Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills, and have received good results, for which I am very thankful. I took them for liver trouble. I came out of the hospital on May 3rd, last, after having had a serious operation which might have been saved had I taken your remedy sooner. I have given some to my sister for biliousness and sick headache, and she has found great relief. A lady who lives in my house has started to take them. I will do my best to recommend them to all my friends."

Peterboro Milk Products Co.
Now Operating Condensing Plant, a New Industry Here

A new industry was opened for the first time in this city yesterday, when the Peterborough Milk Products Company started the initial operation of their milk condensing plant. It was a trial performance, and was in every sense a complete success. To-day the work is settling down to the routine of filling orders that have been booked months ago. Mr. T. A. MacDonald, who was for fourteen years with the Borden Milk Company at their Ingersoll condenser, is manager, and Mr. J. Ridley, who was his assistant, holds the same position on the Peterborough Milk Products staff.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie stated this morning that the company is now prepared to receive all the milk that can be produced in this district. The departments of the establishment are as follows: City milk delivery, ice cream and butter manufacture and condensing. Milk in any or all of its forms will be accepted, either as cream, home milk or otherwise. The company has two motor trucks covering the country in certain sections within a radius of eight miles. Thus, the milk will be collected at the farms and hauled to the city. Many farmers nearer Peterborough are themselves drawing in their supplies.

"The dairy people will soon discover," Mr. Gillespie said, "that they have a market in Peterborough that will take all the milk they can supply. There will be no need of exporting it to Toronto. In winter as in summer there will be a steady demand, a feature that should appeal to the dairy farmers."

Mr. MacDonald stated that the condensers are numerous in Oxford county. "They have proved a great boon to the dairy industry, and have enriched the farmers. A big business has been built up with fine returns to the rural communities, and in a short time Peterborough would realize the new benefits to them."

A Complete Plant.

The equipment of the Peterborough Milk Products factory is now a complete and compact dairy unit. Practically all the machinery was manufactured by the De Laval Company and includes special vats, Alpha bottle fillers, washers, churns and other specialized apparatus. A conspicuous feature of the plant is the absolute cleanliness that prevails. After yesterday's operation of the condenser it was cleaned by water and heat until the burnished copper shone clearly like a mirror. Outside and inside it was as clean as it could be made. Throughout the plant the same condition arrests attention. Cleansing by steam is the guarantee of purity of the various milk products.

The First Order.

The first order for condensed mill is being filled for the Bowes Company of Toronto, with shipments beginning at once. The company's trade name for the new product is "Meadowvale." The labels for the tin containers are striking in their pretty design and colour, and it is fully expected that "Meadowvale" will soon be a familiar name in business, and that it will be a symbol of quality, as Mr Gillespie and his company intend to make it.

Illustrated Lecture At George Street

The mission department of the Epworth League enjoyed a splendid "snap shot" evening at the George street church, last night, when Mr. E. T. Haynes showed some excellent views of a trip through Russia and through England, and of different points of interest in Canada. At the conclusion of the address, which was listened to by a large number of people, a good musical programme was given by some of the young ladies of the League.

CHOOSE YOUR SEED.

Discrimination in the purchase of seed is very important. There is a scarcity this year and for that reason none must be wasted. In the following list, based on tests made at the Experimental Farms and stations in Canada, several varieties of parallel merit are suggested, so that if it is not possible to get one kind the other may be obtainable.

Potatoes—Irish Cobbler or Eureka Extra Early, Green Mountain, Gold Coin, Wee MacGregor, Farmer's No. 1.-Early Ohio.

Beets.— Crosby Egyptian, Detroit Dark Red and Early Model.

Carrots—Chantenay, Danvers Half Long, Early Scarlet Horn.

Corn.— (Extra early) Early Malcolm, Malakoff, Peep O'Day, Golden Bantam, Early Evergreen or Black Mexican, Country Gentleman and Stowells Evergreen.

Peas—Gregory Surprise, Thos. Laxton, Gradus, Nott Excelsior, American Wonder, Sutton's Early Giant, Telephone, Champion of England, Quite Content, McLean's Advancer, Sutton Excelsior and Premier Gem.

Beans— (Round Pod Wax) Round Pod, Kidney Wax, Pencil Pod and Brittle Wax, Wardwell Kidney Wax, Hodson Wax; (Green Pod) Stringless Green Pod and Early Red Valentine. Refugee or 1000 to 1 (Jate). Lima and Pole beans are not very satisfactory except where the season is long and warm. Scarlet Runner is the most reliable Pole bean but Kentucky Wonder is one of the best in quality.

Cabbage.—Early Jersey Wakefield, Copenhagen Market, early; Succession, medium; Danish Ballhead and Drumhead, Savory late; Red Dutch.

MUSIC AS RECREATION

Recreation is essential for the health and well-being of the family, and music is essential for a recreation that is totally relaxing and instructive.

Are you doing without music in the home because no one plays? In these days of marvelous inventions, that is no excuse for the lack of music.

There are people who have been wise enough to purchase player-pianos, organs and phonographs, slightly used, therefore cheaper, by securing them through Heintzman Hall, Peterborough, Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter Street.—B. H. Britton, Manager. 'Phone 252.

Hon. Pres.—Capt. Hamilton Munro
Pres.—Col. Duncan Walker.
1st Vice-Pres.—G. O. Cameron.
2nd Vice-Pres.—C. H. Pennyfather
Sec.-Treas.—V. J. McElderry.

Executive Committee—James Hamilton, P. P. Westbye, T. W. Carruthers, F. D. Craig, J. W. Fraser, Alex MacGregor, B. D. Hall, Dr. Cameron, F. D. Kerr and H. R. H. Kenner.

W. R. roMis esfTxT
W. R. Morris and E. L. Goodwill were named officers ex-officio.

SILENT REVOLUTIONS.

Following the election of officers the Club was privileged to hear a splendid address by Rev. R. Bruce Taylor, D.D., President of Queen's University, who had very kindly consented to speak.

Dr. Taylor began by speaking of the way in which University life had been affected by the war. Twelve hundred students had gone from Queen's; as far as he knew, 98 had been killed, and 72 had been decorated for distinguished services. The bottom has not yet been reached, and they had to look forward to a time during which there would be scarcely any men left at the University. This was of course as it should be, but it did not make it any easier in the carrying on of the instituion.

He expressed his pleasure in meeting so many of the Queen's graduates in Peterboro, and mentioned the generous action of Mr. R. M. Waddell, in giving $9,000 for the establishment of a lecturship in history in memory of his mother, this being the fourth lecturship or scholarship given by the Waddell family to Queen's University.

Passing from University affairs he went on to speak of the silent revolutions of the war. The things of which we were so much a part we found it difficult to realize that we were in them at all. There was, first, the revolution of the conception of government. It had been the boast of the race in earlier days that we had done with the minimum of political control, but now under the pressure of circumstances the individual is secondary to the state. The government has taken charge of the means of transportation, of the processes of industry, of the disposition of a large share of a man's income—of the right of his own family. It was necessary in this life and death struggle that it should be so, but the broad fact was that state socialism, whether we like it or not, was really upon

POSITION OF WOMEN.

He then dealt with the silent revolution in the position of women and the extent to which the war his discovered their capacity and banished the old idea of refined idleness.

He rferred to the change from the activities of the suffragists to the splendid organizing power that women are displaying in every field of civil life. Nothing finer than the administration of the Patriotic Fund in its economy and kindliness, has ever existed in Canada before.

RELIGIOUS CONCEPTION.

In conclusion he dealt with the silent revolution in the conception of religion. In settled times religion always tended to become formal and virtue attached to the man carrying out certain acts; but at the front amid dirt and bad language, the things that do matter are thrust into prominence.

There is there the sense that the heart of religion is the willingness to give yourself to what you feel to be duty. There is there too the closest of fellowship between men of different origin and training brought about by the same great cause. There is too the quiet of mind in the daily presence of death through the unexpressed consciousness that this life is but the beginning of days.

Nursing Sister Blewett Had Varied Experience

Miss Blewett was one of the Canadian nurses to go over with the first Canadian contingent in September, 1914, and since then has had many wonderful experiences. She has nursed on every front but the Italian front, though she has visited Italy. She nursed at Gallipoli, in France and Serbia and Greece, as well as in England.

It is a matter of great regret that Miss Blewett's stay in Lakefield should be so short as very few people had the privilege of meeting her. Miss Blewett has been decorated several times for her valuable service.

Just One Application And The Hairs Vanish

(Toilet Talks.)

Any woman can keep her skin free from unsightly hair or fuzz if she will follow these simple instructions: When hairy growths appear, apply a simple paste, made by mixing some water with powdered delatone. Apply this to hairy surface and after 2 or 3 minutes rub off, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. This is a harmless treatment, but be sure you get the real delatone.

New German Divisions Identified By French

Hun Prisoners Admit That French Artillery Before Amiens Is Inflicting Heavy Losses

ANOTHER OFFENSIVE

(United Press Service.)
(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, May 7.— The French have identified eighteen fresh or reformed German divisions (218,000 men) on the Amiens front.

While this presumably indicates the Germans intention to resume their offensive there, it indicates likewise that the divisions thus replaced have sustained an aggregate loss of at least 50,000, the enemy customarily replacing first line divisions when they have lost between 2,000 and 3,000 men.

Prisoners admit the French artillery before Amiens is constantly inflicting the heaviest losses.

VETERANS' CLUB ROOMS ARE HANDED OVER

Enjoyable Programme at Big Gathering in New Quarters Last Night When Furnishings Secured by Ladies' Auxiliary Were Presented to The G.W.V.A.—Many Speakers Featured the Occasion.

The new club rooms and headquarters of the Peterborough branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, formerly declared open by His Excellency, the Governor-General, yesterday morning, were handed over to the Association at a public function last evening by the Ladies' Auxiliary, to whose efforts the securing of the splendid furnishings of the rooms are due. The affair was marked by a very large attendance, especially of ladies and by a programme of addresses, interspersed with musical numbers. Mrs. J. Mills, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary, very ably presided, and addresses were given by His Honour Judge Huycke, Mr. B. F. Ackerman, Capt. J. H. Burnham, M. P., Mr. G. A. Gillespie M.P.P., Major J. C Davidson, Col T. J. Johnston, Col J. Mills, Rev. J. R. Webb and President Hall, Stanmount, of the G.W.V.A. Among the visitors were Lieut.-Col. Gillespie, of Kingston, and Sergt. Lewis, of the headquarters staff of the G.W.V.A., Ottawa.

The new quarters are commodious and adequate for the present needs of the Association. They have been comfortably furnished by the Ladies' Auxiliary, as the list, read by Mrs. R. J. Devey, testified, and the Veterans will undoubtedly make good use of the quarters. A room at the rear has been fitted out as a secretary's office and board room, while the long hall at the front will serve admirably for meeting and social purposes. There is a piano and Victrola to provide music, considerable reading matter has been supplied, and more of this is expected while the equipment includes a dozen card tables and a billiard table may be added.

Mrs. J. Mills.

Mrs. Mills in handing over the furnishings of the rooms to the Veterans, remarked that it was a great honour that the new quarters should have been formally opened by the Governor-General. The furnishing of the rooms, she stated, was due to the fact that the rooms formerly occupied by the Veterans, in the Armouries, were to be given up to the Overseas Battalion, the daughters of the Empire, and Mr. Hayes, and become necessary for the needs of the Association. As for the new quarters, it was expected that from time to time more equipment would be added.

Mrs. R. J. Devey read the inventory of the furnishings, after which President Staunton accepted the gift of the ladies on behalf of the G.W.V.A. After expressing the hearty thanks of the Veterans to the Ladies' Auxiliary and to the citizens who had assisted, he pointed out that the rooms would not be used only for pleasure purposes, but for sincere work on behalf of the Veterans. President Staunton pointed out the necesisty of the work they were carrying on, and expressed the determination of the G.W.V.A. to do all they could on behalf of the returned soldiers.

Major J. C. Davidson.

Major J. C. Davidson, rector of St. John's church, after endorsing President Staunton's expressions of thanks to the ladies and referring to the arduous work of canvassing spoke of the work of the G.W.V.A. in nurturing the most distintive mark of army life, the wonderful comradeship and fellowship among all ranks. The furnishings of the rooms would remind the Veterans of their responsibilities to their fellow citizens and could be taken to show the interest displayed in the Veterans by the people of Peterborough.

Capt. J. H. Burnham.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, the next speaker, whose remarks are treated at greater length in another column, supplied the fireworks of the evening. He was sick of hearing of platitudes about the gratitude of the people for the returned men. He had heard so much downright, rank humburg about the matter that he doubted the sincerity of the people. "The public, including the government, has fallen far short of its duty in dealing with the Veterans." Capt. Burnham remarked, and he went on to point out that the Veterans' new rooms were taxed, while the Y.M.C.A. escaped. He thought that the meeting should resolve itself into a deputation to wait upon the Council and demand that the taxes should be remitted. Then Capt. Burnham turned his guns on the government and slashed at the red tap—"miles of it," he said—which clogs the wheels of the departments. His story of how the Veterans' application for the use of the rifle range ground for agricultural purposes went the rounds of half the Ministers in Ottawa, caused much amusement and the speaker was most sarcastic in his reference to "the grateful government" which was, he said, only grateful for favours yet to come and not for services rendered. It was a slashing indictment that upset the even tenor of the programme.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie, M.P.P., who assisted in the canvass, did not agree with Capt. Burnham that all the people were ungrateful. Many were most anxious to assist the Veterans and among those who did not contribute he was certain that there were many who did not understand or realize the need of the work. It had been understood that large sums were not required for the present.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman.

Mr. B. F. Ackerman pointed out that the first thing before the Veterans was their reestablishment in civil life. Ability, reliability, endurance and loyalty were four qualities necessary for success, and if the Veterans did not possess these qualities, he did not know who did, so that there was no reason why they should not succeed.

Col. T. J. Johnston.

Col. T. J. Johnston, after referring to the comradeship of the Great War Veterans, where men left their rank outside the door, expressed his confidence that the people of Peterborough would come up to the standard they had shown in supporting the 93rd Battalion. He expressed the thanks of the Association to the ladies for what they had accomplished.

His Honour Judge Huycke.

His Honour Judge Huycke said that he believed Capt. Burnham was too pessimistic. The people of Canada were, he was sure sound at heart and meant to do the right thing by the Veterans. Speaking of the future before the G.W.V.A. His Honour referred to the great influence and power the Grand Army of the Republic had proved in the United States, and prophesied a similar future for the Great War Veterans. He hoped, however, that the time would never come when they would fix themselves as a fifth wheel to any political party.

Rev. J. R. Webb.

Rev. J. R. Webb expressed the sympathy of the people of Murray street Baptist church with the objects of the G. W. V. A. and pointed out that the greatest and best days of their history were before the members of the Association. It would never be possible to fully pay the debt that the people at home owed to the men who had offered themselves.

Col. Mills.

Col. J. Mills expressed regret at the absence of Mrs. F. H. Torrance, one of the officers of the Ladies' Auxiliary, whose brother, Pte. L. McIntosh, had recently been killed at the front, the second brother to lay down his life for the Empire. Col. Mills pointed out the needs of the Association and pointed out that it would not be fair to the men overseas to wait until the war was over before taking steps on behalf of the returned men.

The Musical Programme.

Vocal selections—"Hearts of Oak," British Grenadiers"— Orpheus Glee Party. Mr. R. J. Devey, accompanist.

Piano solo—"The Two Larks"—Miss Dorothy Stuart.

Vocal solo—"Love in the Meadows" —Miss Emma Worth. Accompanist Mr. J. H. Renwick.

Violin solo—Miss Laura Logan. Accompaniste, Miss Agnes Logan.

Vocal solo—"Angus MacDonald"; encore "Annie Laurie." Mrs. J. H. Renwick. Accompanist Mr. Renwick.

The evening was brought to a close with the singing of "God Save Our Splendid Men" and the National Anthem.

"Heintzman Hall" Attracts Thousands Of Visitors At Its First Anniversary

Crowded Receptions Afternoon and Evening—The Interior in May-day Attire—Roses and Carnations Given Away to The Ladies—Orchestral Music.

The first anniversary of the opening of "Heintzman Hall," Royal Bank building, Hunter street, on Saturday was pronounced an auspicious event. Both afternoon and evening receptions were greeted with an overflow of delighted visitors from the city and country. These came in a steady procession from shortly after one o'clock and continued until 10 p.m. The event was even more successful than at the inauguration of these handsome quarters for Heintzman and Co., Limited, last June, when the company first formally occupied their attractive home of music. The local management was delighted with the marked success of the event.

Over two thousand roses and carnations were used as floral souvenirs to the ladies—Mrs. Britton presiding at the flower table. Much praise was bestowed on the effective decorating of the Hall, which received the special attention of Mrs. Britton. Admirable taste was displayed in the drapings and floral displays, which contributed so much to the beauty of the interior. The floral souvenirs were supplied by the Peterboro Floral Co., and were beautiful trophies of early bloom.

The Heintzman Company sent a representative from the Victrola department from the Toronto warerooms, whose expert services were much appreciated during the day.

It was learned that a number of unsolicited sales were made during the day—one a beautiful Baby Grand Piano, which graced the front of the showrooms, as well as four upright pianos, Sonoras, and a number of other instruments.

Every lady who visited the rooms received carnations and roses, in addition to a cordial welcome. An orchestra played a delightful programme. The public showed its interest in the splendid instruments on display, the three sound proof rooms, cabinets for Victrola customers, and the large display of pianos and Victrolas and Sonoras.

The greater credit for the event falls to Mr. R. H. Britton, the manager, whose sense of fitness in retailing musical instruments deserves commendation, and to all appearances has amply received the approval of the public since his coming to Peterboro.

In short these new music parlours combine service and beauty in a measure that will appeal to the public's finer tastes, and their sense of the fitness of things.

Mr. R. H. Britton, the local manager of "Heintzman Hall," desires the Examiner to record his thanks to his salesmen who so ably assisted, and worked enthusiastically to secure the success of the opening event.

The warm appreciation of the local management also goes out to the public for the very marked interest shown in the event by so large an attendance of visitors during the afternoon and evening.

ALLIED GUNS ARE SWEEPING THE GERMAN BACK AREAS

Infantry Lull Continues on The Western Front—May Time Showers Prevalant

PETTY EXPLOITS

(By William Philip Simms—United Press Service).

Two O'clock Despatch:

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, May 7.—The Allied guns, for the last twenty-four hours, have been steadily straing the German back areas. This is not conducive to the quick movement of men and materials across the war-made desert areas around Noyon.

Infantry Lull.

The infantry lull continues, only raids and petty exploits being conducted. On most of the front there is only ordinary, mutual cannonading. The terrain is being drenched by May-time showers.

In the Hazebrouck, Strazeele, Morbecque, Pyres and Meteren areas the Germans laid down considerable high velocity shells, and their artillery searched the roads around Poperinghe and Vlamertinghe.

SATISFIED WITH THE SITUATION

Special to The Eraminer:

PARIS, May 7.—Premier Clemenceau, who has returned from a visit to the front, "satisfied" with the situation, will make a formal report to-day.

NEILL BOILER DID NOT EXPLODE

Fire Chief Grange reports that he has examined the boiler in the Neill Building where the fire occurred on the 26th of January, and that he found the boiler intact, indicating that the fire did not result from an explosion of the boiler.

Queensland Sponges.

The natural resources of Queensland, Australia, exist in the sea as well as upon the land. The great reef which skirts its northern seaboard is the home of the commercial sponge, the trocus, shellfish, beche de mer and other things which a more systematic or scientific search might reveal. So far the growth of sponge has not been exploited, but trocus shell to the value of £30,000 has been exported to Japan from North Queensland.

The luggers fish consistently and effectually. What is required is (1) a greater first-hand knowledge of the resources of the Barrier and its environs; (2) a more stringent enforcement of the licensing laws; (3) the necessity for a close season in various sectors of the waters, and, lastly, the introduction of scientific methods for development and control.

It is interesting to note in connection with this last proposal that in Florida, U.S.A., a sponge farm has been successfully inaugurated, and sponges to the value of $200,000 are about to be put on the market. The way was made clear for this achievement by the American Bureau of Fisheries, an institution which is doing, in conjunction with the American Bureau of Standards, monumental research for American industry. The sponges are separated into tenths and secured by platinum-wire to small slabs of cement, which are "planted" in a water vat selected for the complete absence of fresh water, protection from marauders and freedom from sand.

High Cost of Prevarication.

As an indication of the severity with which political gossip of a possible unneutral character is dealt, a recent British exchange states that under the Defence of the Realm Act, Cecil Henry Whitburn, manager of a Liverpool timber company, and Frederic Theodore Wills Smallridge, a clerk in the employ of another timber firm, were fine $50 each at Plymouth, England, recently for making false statements. It was stated that Whitburn heard that a cable ship, well known in port, had been sunk with all hands, and he repeated it over the telephone to Smallridge, who in turn questioned another man about it. The statement proved to be without foundation.

BASEBALL

At the Exhibition grounds Saturday afternoon one of the best games of baseball witnessed in the south end for some time was played between Blondin's bull dogs and the South End field rats, the rats winning by a score of 11 to 5. It was anybody's game till the seventh inning, when the score was one to one, but the rats hit the Braund party hard and bunched up the runs.

McINTYRE BROS. EXPLAIN POSITION IN ARCADE MATTER

A protest from the Carpenters' Union, supported by the Trades and Labour Council, that the building of the two stores in the market arcade should not be done by McIntyre brothers because they are members of the Council, was received by the City Council at the regular monthly meeting last night. The deputation of carpenters, for whom Mr. J. A. McKeown was spokesman, insisted that there was no personal feeling against the McIntyre brothers. The question involved was the principle which the Union men said they believed to be provided by law that no alderman could legally accept a contract for city work.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre replied that he and his brother, Malcolm McIntyre, had not taken a contract, nor were they working for the Council. They were engaged by the City Trust Commission to build the stores, after they had been informed that the work had been offered to several contractors who refused it.

"We are working by the day and receiving a percentage on the cost. I regret that this matter has come up, and if it is against the law I am willing to throw up the work. But we didn't think it was against the law."

Ald. M. McIntyre—I told Mr. Lane (the carpenters' business agent) that we were willing to throw it up. I understand that two other carpenters were asked to take the work, but they declined."

Mr. McKeown—We have no personal axe to grind with any member of the Council. We simply want to see all city work let by tender, and we believe that it is against the law for any alderman to accept work from the city.

Mayor Duncan—I want to make it plain that the work was not let by the Council. We had nothing to do with it in any way, and it seems that the McIntyre brothers took it up quite innocently. I don't see what we can do about it any more than to leave it with the McIntyre brothers and the carpenters.

Ald. A. A. McIntyre— I won't go ahead if the Carpenters' Union protests. I always backed up the Trades and Labour men, and I am in sympathy with the Carpenters' Union. I have never done anything but what I thought was right.

When the Council washed its hands of the subject, Ald. M. McIntyre and the deputation retired to the hall for a conference, which was not concluded when the Council adjourned a few minutes later.

COUNCIL REFUSED MR. GATES' APPEAL FOR REGULAR WAGE

Mr. James Gates, the city's official dog catcher, asked the Council last night to make up the deficiency between a regular wage of $15 a week and his earnings from his present uncertain occupation. The more Mr. Gates works the harder his job becomes, for as the dogs disappear, grow wise or are more carefully guarded, the fewer there are to catch. In his letter, to which the Council turned an unsympathetic and deaf ear, Mr. Gates showed that he had caught, since Feb. 21st, 160 dogs. Eighty-five of them were shot, and seventy-five restored to their owners. Ten weeks of snooping for dogs without deducting $4.25 for cartage, had netted Mr. Gates $120, or $12 a week, providing a bare existence in these times, when the crops of taxes are more frequent and formidable than the best efforts of hard-worked farmers. Mr. Gates suggested that the Council enlarge his powers to include cats, which, if more elusive than dogs, are at least more numerous.

Ald. Edgar remarked that the Council had accepted Mr. Gates' offer, and that there was no reason for departing from it now. With this view the Council agreed, and the Gates' communication was simply received.

Will Investigate Reported Feeding of Potatoes to Hogs

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 7.—"We will investigate that immediately," said Mr. Baxter, of the Canada Food Board, when a Peterborough despatch, saying that farmers would feed their potatoes to hogs rather than sell them at the prevailing price, was read to him. "Can you give me the name of the person who sent the information so that we can wire the Peterborough police to look into it?" he asked.

Mr. Baxter said that in Prince Edward Island farmers were feeding potatoes to stock because the roads were impassable, and they could not get potatoes to market.

"The Prince Edward Island farmers can't do anything else with their potatoes, but their conditions do not obtain in Peterborough," he said.

Council Preparing To Restrict Sundae Sales On Sunday

Immediate action to restrict the sale of ice cream on Sundays was promised by the city council to a deputation from the Trades and Labor Council last night. Mr. J. J. Hartley, B. Fredericks, W. Stevens, George Stenton, Arthur Farr and others composed the delegation, which was informed that Ald. Taylor's committee had already given the subject of this petition some attention, and expected to reach a decision this week. If it is within the power of the council the Sunday sale of ice cream will be cut off.

Mayor Duncan assured the deputation that he was opposed to business violation of the Lord's Day.

The committee will meet in a day or two.

Mr. Hartley stated that it was the almost unanimous desire of the Trades and Labour Council that the sale of ice cream, cigars and cigarettes by the restaurants on Sunday be prohibited. The effect of these places remaining wide open on the Lord's Day was bad. They certainly did not look right. It was merely a money-making scheme, he stated, a retailing of a luxury that should not be encouraged at this time, besides it required Sunday work.

Mr. B. Fredericks remarked that one of the ice cream parlours has a "hurdy-gurdy" going all day Sunday. The owners of these places were foreign born. British-born men in this business closed their stores on Sunday.

"Between Brock and Hunter streets there are now nine foreign-born storekeepers." Mr. Fredericks added that Port Hope keeps such places closed.

Speaking on the same question Mr. Wm. Stevens remarked that he had seen a new ice cream parlour, the "Tea Pot," on Hunter street, with the doors wide open last Sunday. "Remember the Sabbath Day to keep it holy," Mr. Stevens quoted, adding that the Trades Council were opposed to such Sunday labour.

Work is Now Completed

Of Tidying the Graves Of the Lusitania Dead

WORKMEN have just finished a month's task of tidying up the Lusitania cemetery in Queenstown, Ireland, where 147 of the Lusitania dead are buried. They have converted the three mounds of earth, which mark the trench-graves of the victims, into the neatest and best-kept part of the village burying ground at the top of the cliffs.

A neat sign placed over the largest of the three trench graves informs visitors that the improvement was made at the direction of the Cunard Steamship Co., and that the company has engaged a Cork firm of gardeners permanently to keep the grass and trees trimmed and the flowers watered.

The failure of the Town Council to care for the graves made it necessary for the Cunard Company to do so. Some time ago the Associated Press correspondent visited the spot and was surprised to find grass a foot high all over the cemetery. His account of the incident led a high official of the Cunard Line to make an inspection. He reported to his headquarters in Liverpool, confirming the account of the neglect of the graves. The company acted at once and the result is that, while two months ago it was almost impossible for the casual visitor to distinguish the Lusitania graves from any others, they now arrest immediate attention.

The earth around the graves has been banked up two feet above the level of the ground and carefully sodded. Fifteen pine trees have been planted about the edges, and a space in the centre is adorned with beds of hardy flowers. A gardener from Cork makes a weekly visit to the graves.

After the war it is proposed to build a monument on the site. This is to be done by the steamship company in co-operation with the British Government and a plot of ground has been reserved for this purpose.

There are three trenches, the largest of which contains seventy bodies, the second fifty and the third twenty-seven. The plot for the memorial is between the second and third trenches. A few small gravestones sent by relatives of the victims, now form the only memorials to be found about the spot.

The graves are seldom visited by the villagers. They say they shun them because they recall the terrible scenes enacted three years ago.

The Town Hall in Queenstown, which was used as a morgue for the victims, was for two years afterward deserted by the villagers who had, for generations before, used it as a market-place. It was said to be "haunted" and no good luck was expected from any transaction completed there. During the last few weeks the villagers have begun to use it again, but only after a squad of painters and decorators had transformed its gloomy interior into such a cheerful place that the merchants, despite their superstitions were coaxed back.

Rats in Brazil.

In certain parts of Brazil rats are a great nuisance. The common rat does not thrive for some unaccountable reason, but is replaced by a species of small boa constructor—the gibola. The snakes are not venomous. They sleep in the house, generally taking up their position at the foot of the stairs.

Another Arch-Traitor Tried to Sell Country And Pays the Penalty

THE evil that Bolo Pasha did will undoubtedly live after him, for it is going to be a long time before the allies can be sure how far his intrigues reached. Before he paid the penalty of high treason when the French shot him at Vincennes on April 16th, he made a partial confession which implicated several other traitors who have been in the pay of Germany, and further investigations based on his statements may startle the world. The execution of Bolo Pasha brought to an end a career that might have been a brilliant one but for the sinister side to the man's character. Paul Bolo was born in Marseilles. He studied for the law, but forsook that profession for occupations which were varied and hazardous.

He was identified in several enterprises which failed and then he drifted to Paris, where in 1894 he was convicted of abuse of confidence and swindling. He later went to Valencia, Spain, where he conducted a cafe which was frequented by the French colony. In 1903 he married a widow who had an annual income of 70,000 francs and at once enlarged his field of activities, becoming an agent for champagne and other wines.

Just before the world war broke out in 1914, Bolo entered into a new phase of work, which took him to Egypt, where he met Abbas Hilmi, then the Khedive, for whom he became a trusted agent in the exploitation of land owned by the Khedive and for the protection of the Khedive's interests in the Suez Canal and in Egypt, in the event that Great Britain should repudiate Abbas Hilmi. From the Khedive, Bolo received the title Pasha, which has been linked with his name.

Following the flight of Abbas Hilmi to Switzerland in 1915, Bolo met him at Zurich, in company with the then German Foreign Minister, Gottlieb Jagow, and an arrangement was made to turn over to Bolo a sum of ten million marks, to be paid in instalments through the former Khedive, for the purpose of influencing the French press. Of this sum about four million marks were paid through Swiss banks.

During the summer of 1916 Bolo bought the Paris Journal from Senator Humbert, paying 5,500,000 francs for the property. After the initiation of proceedings against Bolo, the money he paid Senator Humbert was refunded.

In February, 1916, Bolo came to America. The Deutsche Bank of Berlin is said to have turned over to Bolo a sum of 10,000,000 francs, which was deposited in this country, at least nine banks figuring in the records of the case. Disclosures made by the United States Government relative to his activities in that country are said to have brought about his arrest.

Bolo was arrested on Sept. 29th, 1917, for receiving money from Germany for use in peace propaganda. Following his arrest, there came sensational disclosures of his activities. He was placed on trial for high treason on Feb. 4th, 1918, was convicted on Feb. 14th, and was sentenced to death. Bolo appealed to the Court of Cassation on April 2nd. The committee of revision of the Department of Justice rejected Bolo's plea for a new trial on April 5th, and on April 8th President Poincare refused to grant clemency to the condemned man. It was announced on the same day, however, that the military judicial authorities had granted a reprieve "for the moment" to Bolo because of revelations which he had promised to make.

The activities of Bolo and other alleged instruments of German propaganda in France were given the general term of "Bolofism," and the general trend of comment in legal, journalistic and political circles after Bolo's conviction were: "With Bolo's death, Bolofism will die."

Prominent Frenchmen connected with the Bolo affair included Former Premier Joseph Caillaux, Senator Charles Humbert and Fernand Monier, presiding judge of the highest Parisian court. Caillaux and Humbert are in prison awaiting trial.

Bolo's brother is a Roman Catholic priest, and is one of the most eloquent pulpit orators in the church in France.

The Censorship in Germany

THE German Reichstag is again quarrelling with the censors and the military governors who control them. Every year since the war began there have been angry debates over their arbitrary and partisan decisions, and regularly there was some minister on hand to promise that a better practice would be introduced. About the middle of January another of these debates occurred, which showed that the censors are going on "spinning the same thread," as the German phrase has it.

In the Main Committee of the Reichstag, Georg Gothein, a Progressive member, called attention to some of their sins. He complained that they were working to undermine the authority of the Reichstag and the Government; that they freely passed insulting attacks upon the Reichstag, and even upon Hindenburg, whereas they used their red pencils liberally to protect von Tirpitz and the Fatherland party from attack. The censorship is responsible to the military governor of the district or city in which they discharge their functions, and these governors are responsible to the Prussian Minister of War, yet, according to Gothein's showing, the governors pursued each his own course, and it appeared that most of them placed the censorship at the disposal of the Fatherland party in its war upon the Government and the Reichstag. Such are conditions in Germany at this moment.

An extract from Gothein's speech is worth reproducing here. He said:

"Count Bothmer declared in behalf of von Tirpitz that the U-boat campaign ought to have been begun a year earlier, and every criticism of this false view was hindered by the censors. An article by Vice-Admiral Galster on the development in building U-boats was forbidden by the censors by alleging scarcity of paper; also numerous articles by Captain Persius. Much is stricken out by the censors to prevent any criticism whatever of von Tirpitz. The Chancellor and even the Kaiser may be attacked, but the person of the leader of the Fatherland party is sacred."

At the next meeting Ebert, chairman of the old Socialist group of the Reichstag, pursued the subject and showed how the censors were favoring the annexationists and allowing them to circulate their literature in the freest possible manner. A secret order of the War Minister of last November ruled that the Fatherland party was not a political organization, and hence that soldiers might join it. Some of the army commands have special censors for examining the newspapers sent to the soldiers; under one command the "Deutsche Tageszeitung," the chief Junker organ of Germany, is passed without examination. Another command prohibits upon penalty the circulation of the Socialist "Vorwarts" and the "Berliner Tageblatt." Soldiers were even prohibited from associating with members of the Reichstag.

To all of this the Minister of War responded with a few commonplace remarks, in which he denied not one single statement that had been made. Finally Wolfgang Heine, another Socialist, brought in a bill for abolishing military government in parts of the country not near the seat of war. The adoption of the bill would mean the abolition of the military censorship.

It is a queer state of things that was revealed by these debates. They showed how liberty of discussion is suppressed by the military authorities and how it is influenced in favor of the Pan-German annexationist policy of the army leaders and the Junkers. They snap their fingers in the face of the Reichstag and the so-called Government of the German Empire.

The German newspapers have also been giving attention to the censors and printing examples of their queer antics. Political and spiritual dignitaries must be shielded from danger. A playwright whose name is Essig, or Vinegar, recently wrote a comedy which he called "The Cow-trade." It was about a stingy village parson and a quarrel with his flock about a milch cow. The whole idea displeased the censor; he saw in it an attack upon the clergy in general, and insisted that the parson should disappear from the play altogether. Poor Essig had to transform his parson into a schoolmaster and shift his chief scenes from the parsonage to the schoolhouse, which produced incongruous effects. The newspapers are now asking why the schoolmasters of the country should not also enjoy the protection of the censors.

The Oppressed Czechs.

The Czechs have not begun only since 1914 to struggle against the conquering Germanic influences that hem them in. Of the one hundred and seventy-six millions engulfed in Pan-Germany to-day, at least eighty-five millions resent it. Of this resentful minority the Czechs number one-tenth; and if no more persecuted than their fellow serfs of Belgium, Poland, Armenia, or Alsace-Lorraine, their persecution is certainly a national burden of greater maturity and concentration. The Austrian oppression of the Bohemians is historical to a degree nearing habit, and this is mainly because it is geographical to a degree affecting political survival. —Richard Wilmer Rowan in the World's Work.

Paper Make From Grass.

From Queensland come reports of successful experiments in manufacturing paper pulp out of "lalang" grass, which resembles very closely the "esparto" of Spain and North Africa, and which when dried before making it into pulp yields as high as sixty per cent. of first-class paper-making pulp. The expert states that esparto is the best pulp known, and the lalang grass product is within ten per cent. of the same value. There are millions of tons of this grass growing in Queensland. Three crops a year can be cut from it, and this plant is said to be otherwise a curse to the country. Chinese "barr"—Urena—and the Queensland hemp—Sida Retusa—are said to produce thirty per cent. of first-class paper pulp. Lantana, which is also regarded as a great pest, makes an excellent wrapping paper.—Family Herald.

Lumping Them Off.

A tiny girl had made it her custom to enumerate by name all the members of the family and the close friends, in her evening prayers, but at the close of a strenuous day of play she was tired and after the opening petition she yawned, then added sleepily: "And please just bless the whole bunch."

LIGHTNING STRIKES BRIDGENORTH HOME

The residence of Mrs. Thomas R. Mann, near Bridgenorth, was struck by lightning last evening between the hours of six and seven o'clock, when everybody was at the barns milking the cows. Although it did not set fire to the house it struck the chimney and went down the eavestrough, badly damaging both the chimney and eavestrough. Otherwise no damage was done.

In placing the VIVID Lamp before our patrons we can highly recommend it to give satisfaction, because it results in cheapness in the end, as it is thoroughly tested in every way against electrical and mechanical defects. It is the life of the lamp that makes it cheap or dear. Nothing better than this lamp can be had at the present time.

The market was comparatively quiet yesterday following the heavy trading. Receipts were light, and more than half of these were held over for to-day's market. What trading there was was on the basis of the prices prevailing on Monday, the tone of the market holding steady to firm. A load of heavy steers sold at $15, and good butcher was steady at from $13 to $14.

Calves firm.

FRENCH WAR MAPS.

Accuracy Is Secured by Many Clever Inventions.

Accuracy and efficiency have been made possible for the French artillery by the invention of an instrument that enables French mapmakers to locate almost exactly an object within the enemy lines which has been photographed from an airplane. In transferring to a map the photographed object, such say, as an enemy battery or munition dump, the margin of error is limited to less than five yards. This permits the French artillery to pour its shells with almost certain aim on to German gun emplacements, trench positions, cross-roads, cantonments, railroad lines, aviation camps and other enemy organizations. It is unnecessary for the gunner to have even a distant view of the object he is firing at.

To take a photograph of the enemy lines from a French airplane is an easy matter but to transfer the objects photographed to their exact location on a map was for a time extremely difficult. This was due to the varying heights and angles from which the airplane observers made their photographs. By the invention of one of the officers attached to the Geographical Section this difficulty has been almost eliminated.

Not only the aerial observation service but other methods of spotting German positions — more especially cannon and machine-gun emplacements—are utilized as aids to the work of the military map-maker. The flashes of guns as they are fired from the German side form one valuable adjunct to his work but the most important of all is the calculation of the speed of the sound of the firing charge of the German shells. This has been brought to a basis of such perfection that the guns can now be located with almost absolute accuracy. In fact in recent operations it has proved that the system of observation by sound has given successful results in over 80 per cent. of instances.

In every army there is a branch of the Geographical Section and each is furnished with a complete lithographic and zinographic printing plant and skilled workers, photographers and mathematicians. In a few hours after the receipt of the day's observations from all the various sources, dozens of copies of the corrected maps are ready for issue to all the staffs of corps, divisional brigades comprised within the army concerned.

Nothing is omitted from the maps —every church, house, chimney, mill, bridge, road, railroad, group of trees is marked as well as every turn and twist of an enemy trench or system of barbed wire entanglements, every stream, ditch, bridge, ford, every path used by supply parties, every point of resistance, organized shell crater, lookout post is shown on the maps. Maps on a very large scale are given when an attack is about to be carried out, so that each officer and man participating may know exactly what is in front of him and what he may expect to encounter during his advance.

GRAIN MARKET

Oats are coming down as rapidly as they went up. The export interests seem to be entirely out of the market for the present and the cash demand for both corn and oats is extremely quiet. The Winnipeg option market was very weak yesterday, going off 2 3-8c on the May option, and 1 5-8c on the July. The Board of Trade cash quotations in C.W.'s yesterday were 5c to 5 3-4c below the market of two or three days ago, and about 15c down since the present decline set in. It is said that there are plenty of oats in the country but at present no outlet.

Count Von Bernstorff Fostered German Dream Of Conquering Canada

As evidence accumulates with regard to the propaganda formerly carried on by Germany with the view of winning over to its side, in a war for world domination, the sentiment, sympathy, and active support of the United States, it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that, while the Deutschtum campaign of intrigue and conspiracy was often ably and loyally served by Count von Bernstorff, the Wilhelmstrasse was, on the whole, made a victim of imposition, and fraud on a tremendous scale. There is no doubt that the imperial treasury spent money like water, during three years of the war, in the hope and belief that a break could be forced between the United States and Great Britain. To this Germany's Ambassador in Washington, its consuls, its commercial agents, its entire staff of emissaries, including college professors, medical directors, editors, lecturers, representatives in the public schools, in the industries, in business houses, in banks, in labor organizations, in every department of activity, were plentifully supplied with secret instructions and cash by Berlin. It was expected of the official and non-official agents of Germany, in the United States, that the republic, thoroughly educated and prepared for the event would at an appointed time, join in the "Deutschland Ueber Alles" chorus; and those who were receiving generous remittances from the imperial treasury made it their business, of course, to prove to the Wilhelmstrasse how easily this could be, and how well it was being done.

VON BERNSTORFF.

The German-American Alliance, an organization conceived in pro-Germanism, financed by pro-Germans, officered by pro-Germans, and posed and promoted under the false pretence that its aim and object were purely educational and cultural, was employed to cloak the entire plot. Thanks to the work carried on for the Fatherland by the German-American Alliance and other organizations operating to the same end, 550,000 German reservists could, and would, when necessary, according to German writers, be thrown across the northern border of the United States for the conquest of Canada. The United States, these writers held, would back this invasion with all its strength. This, and much more to the same general effect which might easily be cited, illustrates the kind of pabulum upon which not only the remarkably intelligent German public, but the super-intelligent German Government, were fed up to the moment of disillusionment.

The awakening to the facts led, no doubt, to the even greater folly of assuming, with encouragement from Count von Bernstorff and his train of helpers, in and out of the German-American Alliance, that the United States could be punished by Mexico and Japan. The propagandists and plotters, who were drawing upon the imperial treasury, very likely felt that they had to do something to make amends for the failure of the promised German uprising in the United States and the consequent loss of Canada. The impressive phase of the whole matter is its absurdity. Only the densest ignorance, among all classes in Germany, concerning this continent, could have led the German people to accept the fairy tales which, before and long after the initial outrage a on Belgium, were conveyed to them by mail, cable, and radio apparatus. It is not credible that in their wildest speculations the pro-German leaders in the United States of the period between August, 1914, and April, 1917, could have honestly believed in the possibility of carrying through successfully the proposed invasion of Canada and similarly ridiculous enterprises. What they believed, apparently, or professed to believe, was what they were paid for believing.

An old tiger started home one night in his normal condition, with a turkey which he had bought for his Sunday's dinner.

The road was rough, and he fell several times over all sorts of obstructions in the path, dropping the turkey each time, but picking it up again.

Entering his house he steadied himself as well as he could and said to his wife:

"Here, wifey, I've brought you eleven turkeys."

"Eleven turkeys!" cried his wife, "I see but one."

"Nonsense, you're blind!" cried her good man. "Why, I fell down eleven times coming home, and I swear I picked up a turkey every time."

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

AN UNEXPECTED DISAGREEMENT

CHAPTER LXI.

The tone in which George interrupted my recital of the day's doings surprised and puzzled me. It was cold, almost as if he were terribly angry about something, yet I could think of nothing I had done to displease him.

"Yes, he asked us to come and see his pictures, then his man served us a delicious luncheon. We had creamed chicken and lots of things. Then he showed us all through his studio apartment, then we had to run because we had told the dressmaker we would be back a certain time."

I had talked so fast he had no chance to interrupt if he wished to, but now he said:

"Have I ever given you permission to lunch at studios?"

"Why no! but—" suddenly I knew he was angry because I had gone to Merton Gray's studio. I was a bit frightened, as always, because I had displeased him, but there was also a little thrill of gladness because he cared. Could he care enough to be the tiniest bit jealous?

"Well, I do not like it! It isn't pleasant to meet people who tell you things about your wife."

I knew, then. He had met Julia Collins. Unfortunately I said so.

A Foolish Remark.

"Oh, I know! That catty Mrs. Collins told you. We met her and she acted as if she wanted to join us, and we just nodded and hurried on. Evelyn doesn't like her; neither do I. I suppose she was cross because M—Mr. Gray hadn't asked her." I bit my lip. I had almost said "Merton." Mrs. Sexton had been right; I must not think of him, or any other, by their first name.

"Mrs. Collins is an old friend of mine. I prefer you should speak more respectfully of her. You say Evelyn Reeve was with you?"

"Why yes! she had spent the entire day with me. She was so delighted to see Mr. Gray's pictures. He showed us some he has finished, as well as those he is working on."

"So long as you did not go alone I have no objections, save that it isn't a thing I want you to do often. An occasional visit to a prominent artist's studio can do no harm, if you have some one with you. But hereafter ask my permission before you go."

He did not seem to expect an answer, so I made none. Yet had I I should have refused to give such a promise. It was unbearable. He treated me as if I were six years old, instead of twenty and a married woman. I certainly shouldn't ask his permission when I wanted to go somewhere, just because that horrid Julia Collins had been mad because she was not asked to go along.

George was quite pleasant all through dinner. But I was not, although of course I dared not give expression to my feelings. I wanted to talk of the good time we had had. I wanted to tell him of the things Merton Gray had said; of the society woman's portrait and everything. But if I started the subject again, he might repeat his command, so I sat trying to appear pleasant, but in reality sullen and cross.

A Time of Peace.

The two days that passed before I was to leave for home, were unusually pleasant days for me. George was continually kind. As usual, I thought many times a day of this, and also, as usual, wondered why—when he could be so nice—he at times was so disagreeable, so almost unkind.

Evelyn kept her promise and was over as soon as she finished her marketing in the mornings, and remained until the late afternoon. She helped me buy some gifts for the home folks—a dress for mother, a nice smoking outfit with a lot fo his favourite tobacco for dad and books and fishing outfits for the boys. How I did enjoy spending money for them! That was one nice thing about having a rich husband. One could buy things for those one loved.

I was to remain away not quite two weeks., George had been very emphatic as to the time. I had begged for an extension, and he had said:

"You will either return when I say, or you will not go."

That frightened me, and I promised faithfully to return on the very train he had ordered me to. Now that I really knew I was to see father and mother and the boys, I should have been broken-hearted had anything happened to interfere with my plans.

So I tried not to fret because of the short visit I was to make, and to think only of the pleasure in store. Pleasure for them, and for me. I knew they would be delighted to see me; Mother's letters had been filled with longing for months. She was not very well, or she would have come to Moreland to visit me long ago. But father couldn't come with her, and none of them wanted her to make the journey alone.

The morning I left, George went to the station with me. We stopped on the way and he bought me a wonderful basket of fruit, some candy, and late magazines. The fruit I determined to keep for mother. It was such an attractive basket.

A HORRIBLE CRIME.

Teuton Conquerors Tried to Destroy Serbian Race.

Prof. Voyslav M. Yovanovitch, of the University of Belgrade and a representative of the Serbian Government in Washington has made public a memorandum presented to the International Socialist Bureau in Stockholm by the Serbian Parliamentary Deputy T. Katslerovitch, and the general secretary of the Serbian Labor party, Dusham Popovitch, treating of Serbia's martyrdom and the enemy's efforts to destroy the Serbian race. The memorandum says, in part:

"The greatest crime of the Austro-Hungarian and Bulgarian authorities in occupation consists in the internment of the most inoffensive and peaceful people, among them a great number of women and children. These internments are wholesale massacres. In the territory occupied by Austria-Hungary more than 150,000 Serbian citizens, among them several thousand men over sixty years of age, several thousand women, and even children of from eight to fifteen years old, have been interned.

"This appalling number does not include 150,000 Serbian prisoners of war, who share the fate of their interned brothers in Austria-Hungary.

"Being interned in Austria-Hungary or in Bulgaria is in reality equivalent to being indirectly sentenced to death. About 30 per cent. of these unfortunate people have already died. Those who are left lead a wretched existence, a prey to atrocious sufferings and to ill usage baffling description, while waiting for certain death.

"In the numerous concentration camps, which contain on an average several thousand persons, the occurrence of ten, twenty and thirty deaths a day is the rule, but there are some, especially in Hungary, where the death rate is from two hundred to three hundred a day. There are concentration camps where half of the inmates have died. This is not a case of an epidemic, which has claimed countless victims. They die of cold and hunger.

"Most of those who still survive must be looked upon as dead. Only a small number of persons with extraordinary powers will be able to live on and work after the war.

"All that has been said of the Austro-Hungarian administration applies equally to the Bulgarian. The latter is even far worse.

"Cross the Moravia, and you find yourself in Asia. The Bulgarian part of occupied Serbia has no such thing as a court. Only recently a court was established at Nish, which has to suffice for the whole occupied territory of Serbia, and the police, which is recruited from the dregs of the population, is all powerful there. The personal liberty and life of every Serbian citizen depend exclusively upon the arbitrary power of some Bulgarian police agent or gendarme.

"The Serbs in this region are condemned to a veritable state of slavery, such as they endured 200 years ago under the Turks. Such Serbs as the Bulgars did not succeed in murdering in Serbia itself have been transported in great numbers to Asia Minor.

"The Bulgars have made up their minds to deport and exterminate everybody from that part of Serbia who is capable of national resistance, in order to Bulgarize what is left of the population. These methods of denationalization, which the Bulgars have borrowed from the Turks, can have but one result, the barbarous extermination of the innocent and defenceless Serbian population."

The authors of the memorandum have both been eye-witnesses for two years of the conditions they describe.

A Queer Building.

Of the many strange buildings and temples in the Far East, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, there are none more wonderful than the four hundred and fifty temples of Law at Mandalay, in Upper Burma, known as the Rutholdaw, or "Royal Merit." The group consists of a large central pagoda surrounded by hundreds of smaller white temples or shrines. They were erected by Ain-shap-min, who ascended the throne on the death of his brother in 1867. The latter was cruelly murdered by his two nephews, and it appears that this very much affected the new king. Not only did he devote his energies to peace, but erected this strange group of temples, each one of which contains a slab on which is engraved a portion of the Buddhist Bible. These holy tablets are made of soft marble or alabaster, each slab being about the size of a large, old-fashioned upright tombstone. On both sides are engraved chapters from the Buddhist scriptures. Over every slab is erected a canopy surmounted by a gilded framework of metal with small tinkling bells. The temples are situated in a beautiful wooded valley, and seen from the surrounding hills they present a [illegible] picture.

FACE COVERED WITH PIMPLES

ASHAMED TO GO OUT

Many an otherwise beautiful and attractive face is sadly marred by unsightly pimples, blotches, flesh worms and various other blood diseases.

Their presence is a source of embarrassment to those afflicted as well as pain and regret to their friends.

Many a cheek and brow cast in the mould of beauty have been sadly defaced, their attractiveness lost and their possessor rendered unhappy for years.

Why, then, consent to rest under this cloud of embarrassment?

There is an effectual remedy for all these defects.

It is Burdock Blood Bitters. This remedy will drive out all the impurities from the blood and leave the complexion healthy and clear.

Mrs. Katherine Henry, Port Sydney, Ont., writes: "Two years ago my face was so covered with pimples I was ashamed to go out at all. I tried several remedies, but they were of no use. At last a friend advised me to try Burdock Blood Bitters. I got a bottle, and by the time it was used I could see a difference. I then got two more, and when I had used them the pimples were completely gone. I can highly recommend B.B.B."

A Japanese Waiting Station.

The scene was one of "orderly confusion"—men, women and girls, laughing and chattering, running here and there, sometimes stopping for a few words of banter but each with his or her own work to do. Above the babel of sounds, the strange, half wild, meaningless chant, "Ya-ra-kura-sa," rose and died away, swelling again in a fierce chorus as the sweating, half naked men pulled and strained at a great jawbone, or swung the hundred pound chunks of flesh into the waiting hand-cars which carried them to the washing vats. Sometimes a kimona-clad, bare-footed girl slipped on the oily boards or treacherous, sliding blubber cakes and sprawled into a great pool of blood, rising amid roars of laughter to shake herself, wipe the red blotches from her little snub nose and go on as merrily as before. It was essentially a good-natured crowd, hard working, but apparently deriving as much fun from their labor as though it were a holiday.

The Bridal Wreath.

The Roman bridal wreath was of verbena, plucked by the bride herself. Holly wreaths were sent as tokens of congratulations, and wreaths of parsley and rue were given under a belief that they were effectual preservatives against evil spirits. The hawthorn was the flower which formed the wreaths of Athenian brides. At the present day the bridal wreath is almost entirely composed of orange-blossoms on a background of maidenhair fern, a sprig here and there of stephanotis blending its exquisite fragrance. The custom of using orange-blossoms at bridals has been traced to the Saracens, among whom the orange-blossom was regarded as a symbol of a prosperous marriage. —Family Herald.

At International Exhibitions highest awards for power transmission units have always been awarded to Dodge Manufacturing Company.

The demonstrated efficiency of Dodge Wood-Split Pulleys, Universal Hangers and Split-Friction Clutches represent the Pentathlon or pinnacle of achievement in the Science and Art of Power Transmission Engineering.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Tongue of Fame

By Elizabeth Cherry Waltz

After supper was over, young Gideon Sennett changed his rough clothing for a little better suit, then set to walk up the road towards the Alstet er homestead.

He had worked hard in the hayfield all day. His back ached, his arms were sore but this was Wednesday night. On the white wooden steps of the church a mile away, Flavilla Lingerel would wait for him. They could sit there quietly until he was rested.

Flavilla was there. He saw her from afar, her pink calico gown making a bright spot against the whiteness of the steps. It was just after sunset when he started, there were rosy clouds still in the west. Flavilla was not a pretty girl, but she had a smile that meant volumes. It was worth a very long walk to see.

These two devoted young people were shy and awkward in the expression of deep feeling between them. Their very loneliness while boy and girl at school had drawn them to each other. He was an orphan and her father had long since married a woman who resented her existence. Neither Gideon or Flavilla had any but a grudged life up to the time each was able to work. Then came days of toil with little to enliven them or breed aspiration.

Stranger things have happened than that both should be absurdly ambitious. In Gideon's family, two generations back, there had been a preacher. He was a devout man, well educated for his time, and not without power in oratory. His son, Gideon's father, had been not only stupid, but a ne'er-do-well. In his grandson, Gideon revived the devotion, the ambition, the gift of speech, the sturdy industry.

Flavilla wanted a home different from what her home had been. She dreamed of peaceful days, of thrifty management, of love, of being kind to those about her. She entered enthusiastically into Gideon's ideas, she stimulated him from his boyhood to luring dreams of success.

For seven years they worked, toiled, dreamed. Tonight, as they sat on the steps of the church where the grandfather had lifted up his voice, they seemed little nearer to the fulfillment of their hopes than before. Physically weary, Gideon's spirits wavered.

Flavilla was a year the older. That counts a great deal at 19 and 20. Besides, in her burned a more enthusiastic and steady fire.

"I don't see how it can be done this fall, Flavie. I've got the money for the college course, but how are we going to live?"

"Twouldn't take much to keep us." "Us! O, Flavie!"

"You're never going without me, Gideon. I've got some money, you know."

"It might be. When hayin's over. I'll go up and see."

This is the reason why a meeting of the faculty of a certain college and theological seminary was interrupted one day by a stalwart country lad. He came asking impetuously for entrance into college, with little money and no church influence to back him.

Then Gideon talked. The spirit of his grandfather seemed in him. He told of his dreams for years, his toil and Flavilla's interest and encouragement. How well he expressed himself at that time he never knew, but as the old president walked from Recitation Hall to the library afterwards with the professor of Greek, he said gently.

"It is a long time since I felt that a lad had such a clear call. I had been wondering if there was to be no more inspiration."

They promised Gideon shelter in a part of a house on the campus. He went back to Flavilla triumphant. Now was Gideon the very sword of the Lord.

In the quiet country neighborhood his return, the projected wedding, such projects for a lad of no property caused the wildest excitement. Flavilla, from scarce more than a drudge, at once became the most envied girl in the township. Her setting-out was discussed far and near. She had many presents from women who thought that by helping her, they gave directly to the Lord. Meetings were held to help her sew and it was from these grew that idea that afterwards caused such a sensation at the college.

The neighborhood religion had been for years a dead letter. The small country church with its pulpit reached by a winding stair, its benches black with age, had not been opened for many years. Now a sentiment grew to open it one Sunday during the summer and Gideon was asked to conduct a service by a committee of grave men.

"I am but entering college," he cried, this lad who had plowed from sunrise. "I know nothing yet of what I expect to learn. Men, it will be seven years before I am fit to teach the word of the Lord."

"The Lord will tell you what to ...," said a very old man who remembered his grandfather, "and we have ... to speak to us, Gideon."

To drive a tank, handle the guns, and sweep over the enemy trenches, takes strong nerves, good rich blood, a good stomach, liver and kidneys. When the time comes, the man with red blood in his veins "is up and at it." He has iron nerves for hardships—an interest in his work grips him. That's the way you feel when you have taken a blood and nerve tonic, made up of Blood root, Golden Seal root, Stone root, Cherry bark, and rolled into a sugar-coated tablet and sold in fifty-cent vials by almost all druggists for past fifty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This tonic, in liquid or tablet form, is just what you need this spring to give you vim, vigor and vitality. At the fag end of a hard winter, no wonder you feel "run-down," blue, out of sorts. Try this "Medical Discovery" of Dr. Pierce's. Don't wait! To-day is the day to begin! A little "pep," and you laugh and live.

ST. CATHARINES, ONT.—"Several years ago, when convalescing after a serious illness, I took a half dozen bottles each of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Favorite Prescription as tonics. I cannot praise these medicines too highly for the benefit I received—my health was completely restored. I always take pleasure in recommending these twa of Dr. Pierce's remedies."—MRS. FLORENCE LOGAN, 33 Beach Street.

The Correct Time.

A certain platoon commander "somewhere in France" insisted upon obedience, instant and complete.

"Smith," he said to his servant recently, "I want you to go down to the railway station and get me the correct time."

Smith shuffled his feet and fidgeted with his fingers.

"Well, man," roared the officer irately, "why don't you do as you are told?"

"Please, sir," replied the servant meekly, "I—I—haven't a watch!"

"A watch—a watch!" snapped the officer. "What d'ye want a watch for? Just write it down on a bit o' paper!"

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp, and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all that you need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

Bulkheads Save Ships.

J. W. Isherwood, naval architect, told a London Express representative recently that "50 per cent. of the merchant ships sunk by U-boats could have been saved if they had been built with bulkheads in the proportion of about one for every forty feet of their length. "It is quite an easy matter," he said, "to build a ship which cannot be sunk by one torpedo and, as a rule, that is sufficient to sink the ships of the mercantile marine to-day. I maintain that if the Glenart Castle had been fitted with ten instead of six watertight compartments she would have remained afloat. The same applies to practically all ships that have gone down as a result of one torpedo."

Read Kaiser's Palm; Fined.

Ruth Smith, a fortune teller, boasted as a means of drawing clients that she told the fortune of the Kaiser twenty-seven years ago. When she was charged with telling fortunes a magistrate fined her $25, although he said he did not take into consideration her forecast of the future of the Kaiser.

FREE BELGIUM.

The Portion of the Country That Is Still Unconquered.

That portion of Belgium which the Germans have been unable to overrun is a strip of country about the size of the average Canadian county. Every foot of it can be reached by German guns. Under their menace live 90,000 civilians, 10,000 of them children under 15. The country is held by what remains of the Belgian army.

The picture of the living conditions of this army, given by Paul Kellogg in the Survey, is sad enough. The investigator for the Red Cross, visiting the barracks at the end of 1917, reports:

"I found near Gyveringchove 240 men sleeping in two barns. No fires could be allowed; there were no lamps; candles were impossible. The buildings were old, with wide cracks through which the wind whistled. The soldier crawled into his blankets on the soggy straw or hard boards to keep warm. Sometimes, on bitter nights, the men had not tried to sleep at all, but ran up and down all night to keep from freezing."

Since then there has been a betterment of affairs. Fully half the army is now in brick barracks. The Red Cross has embarked on a project for building eating and recreation huts. It has undertaken to supply books also in some quantity. It has strengthened the medical service. It means to make it possible for the men to have ten days' rest leave a year in some place away from the army.

These Belgian soldiers, it must be remembered, are not only paid as little as 7 cents a day (eggs in this region cost, by the way, 15 cents apiece), but even if they had the money to go home they have no homes to go to. Many of them have hardly heard from their families since the war began. The families of many others are refugees somewhere in France.

This Belgian army has a list of casualties running every month into the thousands. It is holding miles of front. There have been heard in the last year charges of Belgian inactivity, of the necessity of re-enforcing the Belgian sector with French and British. To which may be attached the remark of a Belgian officer:

"It seems hard to have kept the faith, to have spurned every offer of a separate peace, to have given up our families, to have given up our homes, daily to stand ready with our lives, and then to be accused of being shirkers."

Small Change.

If you want to keep on the good side of the paper boy, the milkman, the vender of vegetables and all the other tradesmen with whom women have to deal at front and back doors keep plenty of small change on hand. Most women do not like to bother with large purses, but in the end it pays and it pays in money. Every person who serves you will be more prompt and willing if you have the money ready and the right amount. No one would think of taking a head of cabbage or a pint of milk from a dealer, but ten minutes of his valuable time means more than a head of cabbage in these days of sharp competition.

When you have the money ready instantly, and the right amount, the man with whom you deal will show his appreciation in various ways. A neighbor was very much astonished to see her vegetable man slipping out a bunch of beautiful flowers with a small border, where her own heaped-up basket was bare of decoration. The explanation was simple. The one who ordered largely took up a great deal of extra time and haggled over the price while she hunted for the money, while the other woman handed out the right change instantly and went about her business.—Mother's Magazine.

Wouldn't Gamble.

A thrifty father tells how he thought he had a great scheme for keeping order in his household. He noticed that his rather obstreperous young son had the quality of thriftiness, and resolved to appeal to it. "Sonny," said he, "I'm going to give you a nickel every day you're a good boy on condition that every day you are naughty you are to give me a nickel. Is it a go?" "I'd like to do it, dad," answered the kid. "But I can't afford it. I've only got $1.26 in my bank to start on."

Mystery Cleared.

Conversation between an inquiring stranger and a steamship pilot—"That is the Black Mountain?"

"Yes, sir, highest mountain about Lake George."

"Any story or legend connected with that mountain?"

"Lots of 'em. Two lovers went up that mountain once and never came back again."

"Indeed! Why, what became of them?"

"Went down on the other side."

"THEY SHALL NOT WANT"

In a moment of inspiration an advertising man recently hit upon the above four words as epitomizing the desire and determination of the people of Canada that the Armies of the Allies and the suffering peoples of the Allied nations of Europe shall be supplied with all that Canada can possibly furnish of the food stuffs necessary for their support in the energetic and successful prosecution of their struggle for the defeat of tyrannical Prussian aspirations.

Compressed in this little sentence is more real throbbing meaning than most full pages of printed matter contain. In sixteen letters it expresses the determination of a people that a great cause must be sustained at no matter what personal sacrifice.

"They shall not want."

How aptly these words also express the attitude of the NORMAL, HEALTHY-MINDED MAN towards, those who under our social system, naturally look to him for support and protection. As he thinks of the wife who has entrusted her future to his care and of the children whom he has brought into the world, his thought and determination is "THEY SHALL NOT WANT."

This is always the attitude of the normal, healthy-minded man who is willing to sacrifice, if need be, to attain this noble end.

A policy in the Sun Life of Canada provides the safest and most economical means of fulfilling this noble desire and determination and incidentally, if fortunately in time this mode of protection is no longer necessary he may himself reap the benefits of his savings and thrift.

Thus virtue has its own reward.

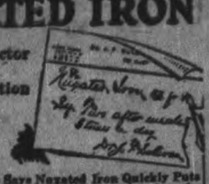
NUXATED IRON

"Say Doctor This Prescription Works Like Magic."



Physician Says Nuxated Iron Quickly Puts Astonishing Strength and Energy into the Veins of Men and Brings Roses to the Cheeks of Nervous, Run-Down Women.

Ask the first hundred strong, healthy people you meet to what they owe their strength and see how many reply "Nuxated Iron." Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician of Bellevue Hospital, (Outdoor Dept.) New York, and the Westchester County Hospital, says: "Thousands of people suffer from iron deficiency, but do not know what to take. There is nothing like organic iron—Nuxated Iron to quickly enrich the blood, make beautiful, healthy women, and strong, vigorous men. To make absolutely sure that my patients get real organic iron and not some form of the metallic variety, I always prescribe Nuxated Iron in its original packages. Nuxated Iron will increase the strength and endurance of weak, nervous run-down folks in two weeks time, in many instances."

Manufacturers' Note: Nuxated Iron recommended above by Dr. Sullivan can be obtained from any good druggist, with or without a physician's prescription on an absolute manufacturers' guarantee of success or money refunded.

THE ROAD TO BLIGHTY.

The Impressions of a Wounded Canadian Officer.

There are two faces — one of a nurse and one of a doctor — that Coningsby Dawson, lieutenant, Canadian Field Artillery, will always remember. He saw them during the days he spent in a hospital in France.

"I arrived about nine o a summer's evening at the Casualty Clearing Station. In something less than an hour I was undressed and on the operating table. You might suppose that when for three interminable years such a stream of tragedy has flowed through a hospital, it would be easy for surgeons and nurses to treat mutilation and death perfunctorily. They don't. They show no emotion. They are even cheerful; but their strained faces tell the story and their hands have an immense compassion.

"Two faces especially loom out. I can always see them by lamplight, when the rest of the ward is hushed and shrouded, stooping over some silent bed. One face is that of the colonel of the hospital, gray, concerned, pitiful, stern. His eyes seem to have photographed all the suffering, which, in three years, they have witnessed. He's a tall man, but he moves softly. Over his uniform he wears a long white operating smock—he never seems to remove it. And he never seems to sleep, for he comes wandering through his Gethsemane all hours of the night to bend over the more serious cases. He seems haunted by a vision of the wives, mothers, sweethearts, whose happiness is in his hands. I think of him as a Christ in khaki.

"The other face is of a girl — a sister I ought to call her. She's the nearest approach to a sculptured Greek goddess I've seen in a living room. She's very tall, very pale and golden, with wide brows and big gray eyes like Trilby. I wonder what she did before she went to war—for she's gone to war just as truly as any soldier. I'm sure in the peaceful years she must have spent a lot of time in being loved. Perhaps her man was killed out here. Now she's ivory-white with over-service and spends all her days in loving. Her eyes have the old frank, innocent look, but they're ringed with being weary. Only her lips hold a touch of color; they have a childish trick of trembling when anyone's wound is hurting too much. She's the first touch of home that the stretcher-cases see when they've said good-bye to the trenches. She moves down the ward; eyes follow her. When she is absent, though others take her place, she leaves a loneliness. If she meant much to men in days gone by to-day she means more than ever. Over many, dying boys she stoops as the incarnation of the woman whom, had they lived, they would have loved. To all of us, with the blasphemy of destroying still upon us, she stands for the divinity of womanhood.

"What sights she sees and what words she hears; yet the pity she brings to her work preserves her sweetness. In the silence of the night those who are delirious re-fight their recent battles. You're half-asleep when in the darkened ward some one jumps up in bed shouting, 'Hold your bloody hands up.' He thinks he's capturing a Hun trench, taking prisoners in a bombed-in dug-out. In an instant, like a mother with a frightened child, she's bending over him; soon she has coaxed his head back on the pillow. Men do not die in vain when they evoke such women."

Protect the Birds.

Approval has been given by the Committee on Foreign Affairs of the House of Representatives to the enabling Act providing for carrying into effect the treaty between the United States and Canada for the protection of migratory birds. Enactment of the pending legislation will ensure protection to non-game birds on both sides of the border and also will promote co-operation between the states in bird protection. The National Association of Audubon Societies is urging prompt passage of this enabling act by the House—it having passed the Senate last July — contending that it may properly be regarded as a war measure. If this war is to be won by the food crops of America the birds will prove an important factor; they destroy insects, weed seeds and rodent pests, and are in consequence conservators of crops.

War or no war, the bill is one that should be enacted into law. The fact that birds can and do contribute to crop conservation should ensure favorable action by Congress without further delay.—N. Y. Herald.

Center of Fashion.

Paris, the center of the world's fashions, has no fewer than 60,000 women dressmakers, not counting designers and fitters, which would bring the number up to close on 100,000. The designers, who sketch out their ideas in pen and ink or with water-colors, and often originate the fashions that prevail throughout the world, earn easily over four figures a year, observes a correspondent.

Good mannequins are the most difficult to obtain. Some of the largest Parisian houses employ twenty or thirty, whose whole time is passed in trying on dresses before the eyes of fashionable French women. Naturally the numbers are fewer nowadays, and many of the most famous mannequins of Paris are now nursing in the hospitals or employed in the French munition works.

Hospital for War Boots.

The war girl is again setting new records in a factory near the east end of London. Here, however, it is not shells, but boots which she is turning out. It is more like a surgery for boots than a factory because, within 40 minutes, a pair of boots from Flanders thick with mud and hardly recognizable are completely restored to strength and soundness. The boots are scrubbed in warm water, dressed with castor oil, the heel and tap is stripped off, then the outer skin of the upper part is taken off with a machine invented during the war. The sole and heel are renewed, the whole blocked into shape and finally restained, polished and made ready for use again in the army; all in 40 minutes. About 300 girls are working in this boot hospital.

SUFFERED WITH NERVES
COULD NOT KEEP QUIET

Diseases of the nervous system are very common.

All the organs of the body may be sound while the nerve centres may be affected.

Many women become run down and worn out by household duties never ending, and sooner or later find themselves with their nerves shattered, and the heart action weakened.

On the first sign of any weakness of either the heart or nerves, flagging energy, or physical breakdown, do not wait until your case becomes hopeless.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills will at once quieten the shaking nerves, strengthen the weak heart and build up the entire system.

Mrs. F. Bailey, 221 Earl St., Kingston, Ont., writes: "I was suffering very much with my nerves, so much so that I could not keep myself quiet at all. I was recommended to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I bought three boxes, and I must say I have derived much benefit from them, so much so that my friends have all noticed the change in me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Dizzy Spells, Indigestion

Napanee Man Could Scarcely Walk at Times, He Was So Dizzy—Indigestion and Kidney Trouble Overcome By This Treatment.

NAPANEE, Ont., March 19. — The experience of Mr. Nolan of this town will interest all who suffer from indigestion and accompanying derangemens of the liver, kidneys and bowels.

Indigestion is such a common trouble that many suffer for years without knowing how readily they could obtain relief by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills to arouse the action of the liver, kidneys and bowels, and thereby remove the cause of much discomfort and suffering.

Mr. John P. Nolan, Dundas street west, Napanee, Ont., writes: "For some time I was troubled with weak kidneys, and used to have a scalding, burning sensation in my stomach. This was accompanied by dizziness, and occasionally it would be so severe that I would stagger while walking. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and in a very short time my kidneys were in normal condition. Then I tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food for the dizzy spells and I am glad to say that under this treatment they gradually disappeared. At present I am enjoying good health, and am pleased to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and Nerve Food."

Pearls In Cocoanuts.

The cocoanuts of the Malay Peninsula sometimes produce pearls that are highly prized by the natives. The stones are not unlike the pearls of the molluscs, and are similar in composition to the oyster pearls, having calcium carbonate and a little organic matter. The mollusc pearl is said to come into existence by the efforts of the oyster pearl to dispose of irritating particles that have entered the shell; but the cocoanut could have no cause for producing these concretions, which, while they have great similarity to the pearl, are not pearls. These concretions form just beneath the stem, and a pure white pearl brings a high price, as it is supposed by the natives to possess some kind of a charm. Cases have been known where the cocoanut pearl has been sold as a mollusc product, but such instances are rare. —Family Herald.

Cocoanut Oil Makes A Splendid Shampoo

If you want to keep your hair in good condition, be careful what you wash it with.

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and is very harmful. Just plain mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and entirely greaseless), is much better than anything else you can use for shampooing, as this can't possibly injure the hair.

Simply moisten your hair with water and rub it in. One or two teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather, and cleanses the hair and scalp thoroughly. The lather rinses out easily and removes every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves it fine and silky, bright, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at most any drug store. It is very cheap, and a few ounces is enough to last everyone in the family for months.

Life of St. Kilda.

The chief occupation of the St. Kilda men is fowling. The St. Kildans eat vast numbers of the eggs of the seabirds which frequent their islands, in addition to the birds themselves, which are not only eaten fresh, but dried and salted for winter supplies. The cliffs are equally divided among the inhabitants, and a man seldom or never pouches on his neighbor's property. Each year the cliffs are portioned out anew, the Saxon Mod, or council, assembling for the purpose. The adjacent islands and "stacks" are regarded as common property, and are hunted at intervals by a party despatched in one of the boats, the proceeds being equally divided among the entire population. No fowler in the world is more expert than the St. Kildan. Armed with a long rod at the end of which is a horsehair noose, he climbs the dizzy heights and snares the sitting birds at will, slipping the fatal noose over their heads and dragging the fluttering captives to him.—Family Herald.

FOOD IN GERMANY.

The Problem Is Growing Steadily More Acute.

A gloomy view of the food situation in Germany was outlined by Dr. von Bretterich, the Bavarian Minister of the Interior, in a forecast which has appeared in the Berlin newspapers. The public was told that "not only is there no chance of the potato ration being increased, but we must think ourselves lucky if it is maintained at its present level." The Bavarian Minister said he hoped the bread ration might not have to be reduced and that the meat ration may be kept at its present height, but there was little confidence in the tone of this assertion.

Special preparation of cereals, on which many hopes were based a few weeks ago were not on the market in any considerable quantities, and the public must wait for a daily ration of half a teacupful.

Wholesale complaints of the quantity of food being supplied at the public kitchens throughout Germany appear in the newspapers. The director of public kitchens, in reply to these attacks, issued the following statement:

"With the continuance of the war, the quality of the materials we receive becomes ever poorer, and the choice more limited. We are compelled to take what is offered us or go without, complaints of defective quality are simply ignored, and if we insist upon receiving a regular supply we run the risk of being entirely cut off. The fat quota alloted to us grows ever smaller, spices are now scarcely obtainable, and the substitute spices have a bad flavor. The vegetable supply is now limited to Kohlrabi and turnips."

A pessimistic article on the potato situation by a member of the Prussian House of Deputies says that the acreage under potatoes has decreased by one-fifth as compared with the peace-time figure. "Not only is the acreage less," he says, "but the demand is greater, and a crop double that of peace-time would not fully suffice."

Italian War Dogs.

Dogs, at least some dogs, have proved themselves so valuable for military purposes during the present war, that they have been added to the equipment of every army engaged in the struggle. The main purpose for which they are used is the finding of wounded soldier after an engagement or skirmish in difficult territory, so that they may be carried to the field hospitals immediately behind the lines without delay. The dogs employed for that purpose are carefully trained and well taken care of, as their usefulness depends in a large measure upon their good physical condition and their willingness to work.

Various breeds of dogs have been tried by the Governments of the belligerent nations, but only a few of them have been found of value. The dogs used by the Italian army in its difficult campaign in the mountains are of several different breeds, with the St. Bernard type predominating. St. Bernard dogs have been used in relief work in the high Alps for centuries and have proved themselves hardy, efficient and trustworthy even when working by themselves. The sagacity and courage of the St. Bernards are wonderful. They seem, at times, almost human.—Popular Science Monthly.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre At Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural colour is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

HAPPIEST MAN IN CANADA, HE SAYS

"It's All Because of What Tanlac Did For Me," States Ward.

"I believe I am the happiest man in all Canada to-day and I want to tell the public it's all because of what this Tanlac has done for me," said Henry Ward, who resides at 20 Batavia avenue, Toronto and is employed by the Swift Canadian Company.

"Sometimes," continued Mr. Ward, "when I stooped over a pain would catch me in the small of my back and I could hardly straighten up again. My kidneys were all out of order and disturbed me so I could scarcely get any rest at night. My stomach was so out of fix that I couldn't raise my head and I would actually have to roll out of bed. I have gone to work hurting so bad that I could hardly drag along and felt that I would be compelled to go back home. I have had to quit work many times on account of my condition and last spring I got in such a bad shape I had to stop off for more than a week, and I can't describe my suffering. Then my legs became affected with something like rheumatism and there were sharp, cramping pains going through my muscles that made my legs feel like they were drawing double. Many a night I have had to crawl out of bed, walk the floor and rub to get relief from those awful cramps, and I just tell you I was in misery nearly all the time.

"This is just the fix I was in for fifteen years and while I doctored and tried nearly every kind of medicine recommended for such troubles, nothing did me any good until I began taking Tanlac. Others said so much about Tanlac helping them that I thought I might as well try it. So I did, and when I found it was doing me good I kept on taking it. I have taken six bottles now and I can say it and tell the truth, I am feeling better than I have in fifteen years. I am simply getting along fine and have gained five pounds in weight, which I think is wonderful for one of my age, as I am sixty-four. I haven't been bothered with my stomach and kidneys since I took my first bottle of Tanlac and I believe these troubles are gone for good. All signs of the rheumatism have left me too, I'm not constipated any more and I feel stronger and more vigorous than I have in many years. I certainly am happy over my wonderful relief and I think it is nothing but right that I should tell about it for the benefit of others."

A WOMAN CENSOR.

She Has the Fun of Reading British Mail.

The latest and, to a woman, the most attractive profession is that of postal censor. To the well-educated woman in her prime, hesitating as to her choice of service, the postal censorship offers opportunities for advancement not to be found elsewhere. The pay ranges from $7.25 a week while learning, rising by increments of $1 to $15 a week, the maximum for an examiner, with additional war bonus. There are at least fifty women earning more than $1,000 a year, supervising 30 or 40 examiners each. They have all risen from the ranks.

Now they hold the proud title of D.A.C. (deputy assistant censor), to which they have been elevated not so much for their languages as for their general capacity. One girl of 19, engaged two years ago as a typist at $5 a week, rose to $15 within six months. Another, beginning at $10, drew $20 within eight weeks.

Yet the plaint of the Deputy Chief Censor is that "we cannot get enough of the right kind of women to be censors." The latter is the executive head of that vast machine, created mainly for restrictive measures, which yet feeds with valuable information not merely the War Office, of which it now forms an integral part, but the Admiralty, the Foreign Office with its offshoots, the Propaganda Department, Contraband Committee, and on which the whole of our blockade activities are based.

Is there enough of the right kind of women anywhere? The right kind of woman has many avenues open to her. Some offer service in France—adventure, romance, the making of history, the glamor of the uniform and a chance of honor and glory. But the woman censor, catch spies though she may, gets but little limelight.

There are women in the censorship to-day with three or more years service who are not least among the heroines of war. They work in secret and in silence, behind closed doors, and their successes are hidden. They will not even tell their friends where they work, let alone what they do. Although the women examiners of mails number some 2,000, against some 500 male examiners, there has been little mention of the women. The recent decision of the authorities to remove some of the secrecy which shrouds the Roman censor will lead the right women to apply for the work, though naturally there will be no disclosure which can possibly be of use to the enemy, and the discipline habit of calling everything confidential will continue. Experience is not demanded of recruits, since the work of censorship was only called into being by the harsh needs of war, and the censors' office itself is the only place where training and experience can be obtained.

The necessary qualifications are not merely languages, and what they do is not just to read other people's dull letters, as seems the general impression; it is much more interesting than that. There are women there who know no tongue but their own; they have been chosen for their judgment, and their unquestionable discretion besides their undoubted and general knowledge. Only would emphasize the value of judgment and the opportunities for exercising it if it is a question of weighing up facts and coming to wise and reasonable decisions the whole time. To women with a happy blend of imagination and common sense the work is absorbing at times thrilling.

It is an experience and an education, a privilege to be part of this wonderful mechanism, even as the humblest cog in its wheel of progress; to observe the details of its construction and to watch it expand week by week.

For as the war widens the censor throws his net still further overseas, tightening it until one marvels how the German secret service agent can slip through its manifold meshes. Slip through them he does, and that is why the country needs her daughters to help to outwit him.

In the women's army or navy the average pay of officers is $625 to $875, with free quarters. They must leave their homes, and to the woman who is settled in London this is a difficulty. But if the London dweller has not the robust health that enables her all day to stand on her feet, though she can do a good day's work "on her head," if her family falters at the thought of France, is her come forward to the censorship, and stay in England. Here, as an ordinary censor or examiner of mails she will have responsibility, with scope for individuality and the great chance of bringing a spy to book by her keenness in drawing close the net.

High Individual Morale.

The reason why morale is necessary in times of peace as well as in war is that the morale of no army can be higher than the individual morale of the men, declares San Antonio Light. Therefore the very best soldiers are those recruited from civil life who have every day morale—the men who do things, who stand fearlessly for what they believe to be right, who are undismayed by opposition and apparent defeat, and who accept life's tribulations calmly, patiently and with fortitude.

Men of that stripe cannot be stampeded or confused in military affairs, once they have been trained as soldiers, just as in every-day life they cannot be kept down by circumstances. They are individually invincible and hence when organized into an army, they are militarily invincible.

Therefore when you read of an army or a military unit with a high morale you know that the men in the ranks and the officers over them are men of strong, dominant courage who meet death calmly in the discharge of their military duty and who cannot be routed nor overawed by the enemy, but must be vanquished, if at all, by fighting.

Eat More Pancakes.

It is a common mistake to suppose that to get the necessary strength to do hard manual labor, a heavy meat diet is necessary. This is far from correct. Muscular labor does not materially affect the demand for minerals and proteins, but rather for starches, fats and sugars. Therefore any additional wastage through muscular effort could be much better repaired by pancakes and sirup than by roast beef, for as much moisture and heat are wasted as tissue, so it is fuel that is required. — Popular Science Monthly.

Warming a Room.

The temperature of a heated room is several degrees warmer at the ceiling than at the floor. To equalize the temperature, it is necessary for the air to be in circulation. This may be accomplished with an electric fan, but to prevent any unnecessary draughts, the blast from a fan should be confined. As the air must be driven from the floor to the ceiling, place the fan in one corner of the room in such a position that it will drive the air upwards. To keep the air confined, make a cardboard tube about 6 inches in diameter to carry the air up and across the ceiling to the opposite corner of the room. This will take the cold air from the floor and force it out at the ceiling level. Naturally the air currents are forced from a lower to a higher level, thus equalizing the temperature. — Popular Science Monthly.

The Best Habit In The World

is the habit of health. The way to get it is to train your bowels, through the liver, to act naturally, at a fixed time, every day.

Take one pill regularly (more only if necessary) until you succeed. Then you can stop taking them, without trouble or annoyance.

This has been the good-health-rule for 50 years.

The Desert Dry? Read This.

Would you believe that the air in an average schoolroom is dried than the air in the deserts? That is what recent tests indicated. However, there is nothing to be alarmed over, as the drying power of air does not depend so much on its humidity as on its being in motion. An interesting illustration of this is furnished by the fact that the air in a room which is fan ventilated and artificially humidified has greater drying power than the air in a naturally-ventilated and humidified room.—Popular Science Monthly.

New Treatment Now Advocated For Bronchitis

Is Having Wonderful Success, and is Making Most Remarkable Cures.

For bronchitis a different form of treatment is now advocated. It consists of a scientifically devised vapour that penetrates to the uttermost recesses of the lungs and bronchial tubes. Every spot that is sore, every surface that is irritated is at once bathed with soothing balsams and healing essences that make chronic bronchitis an impossibility.

This treatment now so universally employed in bronchitis, throat troubles, colds, etc., is called CATARRHOZONE. It acts just as air of the pine woods acts, as a healing antiseptic remedy for all diseases of the breathing organs.

Just think of it—a remedy that can be carried with the very air you breathe to the seat of bronchial or catarrhal inflammation. A remedy powerful enough to kill germ life and yet so healing that disease flees before it. Catarrhozone is truly a wonderful remedy. In many lands it has won its way, and is affording grand results to sufferers from colds, catarrh, throat weakness, asthma and bronchitis. There is no sufferer from a grippy cold or any winter ill, that won't find a cure in Catarrhozone, which is employed by physicians, ministers, lawyers and public men throughout many foreign lands. Large size lasts two months and costs $1.00 and is guaranteed; small size 50c., sample size 25c., all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

MAURICE INCIDENT

Government Has Issued a Summons to its Supporters—Inquiry May Not be Held.

WILL MAKE STATEMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, May 8.—The Government has issued a summons to its supporters requesting their attendance in the House of Commons on Thursday when Mr. Asquith will move a resolution which if carried will be a vote of censure of the Government regarding the Maurice incident. A division is absolutely certain, says the call. According to the Press Association the proposal to refer the Maurice affair to two judges may be regarded as withdrawn, as the suggestion did not appeal to the members of the House, and its rejection by Mr. Asquith and his followers rendered it worthless. On the other hand it is added, it is doubtful whether any other form of injuiry will be held, and it is likely the Premier will give the House the fullest possible information consistent with public safety, citing figures in proof of his statement of the relative strength of the army in January, 1917, and January, 1918. As regards other matters involved in the statement of General Maurice it is understood that an explanation perfectly consistent with both versions will be made.

SPLENDID APPEAL BY MADAME CASGRAIN

Wife of The Late Postmaster Gen. Addressed Peterboro Chapter

Authorized by the Daughters of the Empire, Madame Casgrain, Regent of the Madeline de Vercheres Chapter, I.O.D.E., and wife of the late Postmaster-General, made one of her series of appeals to the local chapters yesterday afternoon in the Green-Room of the Y.W.C.A.

Madame Casgrain, who had been in France up to a year and a half ago, gave a graphic picture of conditions in the desolated war zone.

Build After the War.

In her appeal for help for the French left homeless she clearly outlined the object of the movement to rebuild the desolated area. This will not be attempted until the war is over and things are straightened out over there. The Government will rebuild the houses as nearly as possible in the former sites, and it is Madame Casgrain's object to endeavour to interest the Daughters of the Empire in providing funds to furnish the homes. At the present moment there is more money in circulation than ever before, therefore now is the time to get it and put it out at interest. After the war money will doubtless be very scarce, making it more difficult to attain Madame Casgrain's object of helping the French.

The appeal was most sympathetically heard by the members of the I.O.D.E.

MR. JACK FRASER HOME.

Gassed at Hill 70 in August. Is Returning to Detroit.

Mr. Jack Fraser, formerly of Peterborough, who enlisted with the 129th Battalion of Hamilton, is spending a few days in Peterborough on his way to Detroit. Mr. Fraser was through the attack on Vimy Ridge, but was gassed at Hill 70 in August. He has now been discharged, and has been in Peterborough since Saturday. His friends were delighted to welcome him back to the old town in which he was generally popular. He will return to civilian work in Detroit, leaving Peterborough on Thursday.

Officers Elected At Annual Meeting

At the annual meeting of the Y.W.C.A. the following ladies were elected as members of the board for the coming year:

Mrs. Walsh, Mrs. Cressman, Mrs. Roger, Miss M. Dickson, Miss E. Morrow, Mrs. Robert Neill, Mrs. Wood, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. V. Eastwood, Mrs. Nugent, Mrs. Chisholm, Mrs. Gardiner, Mrs. Scott, Miss Rush, Mrs. R. J. Turner, Mrs. Denham, Mrs. Cruikshank, Mrs. Adam Hall, Miss F. Cameron, Miss Williams, Mrs. Matthews, Mrs. Greer, Mrs. George Macdonald, Mrs. Harvey, Mrs. Eastwood, Mrs. Widdess, Mrs. LeClair, Mrs. Ingall, Mrs. Fraser, and Miss Annie Walton.

THE LETTER THAT HAS BROUGHT POLITICAL CRISIS IN LONDON

LONDON, May 7.—General Maurice's letter, which was discussed in the Commons to-day, is as follows:

"To the Editor of The Daily Chronicle: My attention has been called to answers given in the House of Commons on April 23 by Mr. Bonar Law to questions put by C. Lambert, Colonel Burn and Mr. Pringle as to the extension of the British front in France. Those answers contain certain misstatements which, in the sum, give a totally misleading impression of what occurred. This is not the place to enter into discussion as to all the facts, but Hansard's report concludes:

"'Mr. Pringle Was this matter entered into at the Versailles War Council at any time?'

"'Bonar Law—That particular question was not dealt with at all by the Versailles War Council.'

"I was at Versailles when the question was decided by the Supreme War Council, to whom it had been referred. This is the latest of a series of misstatements which have been made recently in the House of Commons by the present Government. On April 9 The Prime Minister said: 'What was the position at the beginning of the battle? Notwithstanding the heavy casualties in 1917, the army in France was considerably stronger on January 1, 1918, than on January 1, 1917.'—Hansard, Vol. 104, No. 24, P. 1028.

"That statement implies that Sir Douglas Haig's fighting strength on the eve of the great battle which began March 21 had not been diminished. That is not correct.

"Again, in the same speech, the Prime Minister said: 'In Mesopotamia there is only one white division at all, and in Egypt and Palestine there are only three white divisions. The rest are either Indians or Colonials, or mixed with a very, very small proportion of British troops in these divisions. I am referring to infantry divisions.'—Ibid, P. 1027.

"This is not correct.

"Now, sir, this letter is not the result of a military conspiracy. It has been seen by no soldier. I am by descent and conviction as sincere a democrat as the Prime Minister, and the last thing I desire is to see the government of our country in the hands of soldiers. My reasons for taking the very grave step of writing this letter are that the statements quoted above are known to a large number of soldiers to be incorrect, and this knowledge is breeding such distrust of the Government as can only end by impairing the splendid morale of our troops at a time when everything possible should be done to raise it. I have, therefore, decided, fully realizing the consequences to myself, that my duty as a citizen must override by duty as a soldier, and I ask you to publish this letter in the hope that Parliament may see fit to order an investigation into the statements I have made.

"I am, sir,

"Yours faithfully,

"(Signed) F. MAURICE,
"Major-General.

The Front Is Now a Sea of Mud

Conditions Now Similar to The Early Stages of War When Men Were Living in Mud Holes — Americans Pound Enemy Trenches

ARTILLERY ACTION

(United Press Service.)
(By Fred S. Ferguson.)

WITH THE AMERICANS IN PICARDY, May 8.—The American artillery throughout the night was pounding the German positions at Cantigny, Courtamanche, Fontaine Sous Montdidier, Meanil, St. Georges, and all roads and woods in the vicinity.

Under the extremely heavy fire, Cantigny Framincourt Wood has been torn up by high explosives. Enemy supply trains were subjected to a deluge of shells. The sky was ablaze with the artillery fire.

French airplanes hover over the German lines in bocks.

The front is now a sea of mud, and conditions are similar to the early stages of the war, when there were no shelters and men were living in mud holes.

COUNTY COUNCILLORS HARD PRESSED BY FARM HELP PROBLEM

The scarcity of farm help and the present pressure of the work that must be done applies to the members of the County Council as directly and inconveniently as to any other farmers in the county. The temptation to rest on Monday and participate in the reception to the Governor-General must have been strong upon them, but none of them could spare the time from their farms, already seriously depleted of help. Hence, it devolved upon County Clerk E. M. Elliott to represent the County. Warden Anderson's spring problem is reported to be two farms and a cheese factory, for the working of which he has to carry on single-handed with some slight help from his wife. Other members of the Council are as seriously handicapped.

The County desired to share in the welcome to the Governor-General, but their greater production efforts demand every day's labour in this extremely important season.

TONNAGE OUTPUT

Canadian Press:

LONDON, May 8.—The sinking of enemy submarines has increased steadily and the sinking of merchant ships has fallen steadily, T. J. McNab, M.P. for North Camberwell, and Parliamentary Secretary to the Admiralty, in a speech in the House last night declared. The output of tonnage month by month is well ahead of last year. Large plans have been laid by American and Great Britain for output of new tonnage, but plans must take time to mature. Meanwhile, he added, the onus of immediate output was on the United Kingdom.

SIR SAM ON WARPATH

Former Minister of Militia Causes a Disturbance in the House of Commons.

RETRACTION DEMANDED

Canadian Press:

OTTAWA May 8.—Sir Sam Hughes gave the House of Commons an interesting session this morning when he asked Sir Robert Borden about the forthcoming trip of the Canadian Cabinet Ministers to the Imperial Conference. Sir Robt had stated that he was going to the Imperial Conference, and Sir Sam proceeded to ask other questions, when told by the Speaker that he was out of order.

"I purpose to ask questions," Sir Sam declared, "in spite of chloroform that is being applied here."

The Speaker resented the expression regarding chloroform and demanded twice that it be retracted. When Sir Sam persisted in trying to speak, Mr. Speaker threatened to "name him."

Finally Sir Robt. Borden cooled things down by stating that if Sir Sam would put the questions on the order paper they would be answered. The debate on the budget was then resumed.

McIntyre Brothers Quit City Trust Jobs

Mr Arthur Stevenson of the City Trust Commission stated to-day that McIntyre Brothers have retired from the supervision of the building of the Market Arcade stores. It is understood that the delay in the progress of the work has already affected the cost of the iron beams which have increased considerably since the first price quotation was obtained.

ADDITIONAL TAXES FOR MOVIES AND OTHER THEATRES

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, May 8.— The Ontario government to-day announced a new scale of provincial license fees for theatres and movie houses as follows.

Class A—In cities over ten thousand twenty-five cents per seat per annum or a minimum fee of $135.00.

Class B—Five to six thousand population, twenty cents per seat per annum or a minimum fee of $90.

There will be a tax of $5 additional for each vaudeville act put on.

These fees supersede the old provincial scale and are additional to all federal and municipal, local and war taxes.

BRITISH OFFICIAL

British Lines Were Advanced Last Night in Successful Minor Operations.

FRENCH OFFICIAL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, May 8. — (Official) — Successful minor operations last night resulted in the advance of the British lines a short distance in the Amiens sector between the Somme and the Ancre rivers, the War Office announced to-day.

Increased activity was developed by hastile artillery early this morning on the Flanders front between Meteren and Kemmel.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, May 8.—(Official)—Heavy artillery fighting occurred last night on both sides of the Avre River southeast of Amiens, the War Office announces.

THE STATEMENT FOLLOWS.

There was very great activity of artillery on both sides during the night north and south of Avre. Raids attempted by the enemy west of Montdidier and in the regions of Thennes and Grivesnes were broken up by the French who took prisoners. There is nothing to report from the rest of the front.

Events Take a Turn In Quebec

The Inhabitants are Responding to Kind Treatment

(Special to The Examiner.)

QUEBEC, May 8.—Quebec has had a mysterious and incomprehensive attitude since the outbreak of the war and the recent turn towards voluntary enlistment, though it must not be taken as a general movement for the present, and possibly not until after the farmers are through their work will there be another surprise, though nothing is so natural to the character of its inhabitants.

The severe control of articles published in Nationalist newspapers arriving in the east, of Archbishop Mathieu of Regina, and last but not least, a proper advertisement given to any good move on the part of the French-Canadian population after furnishing them with units where they could volunteer, have been the factors of the recent turning of events in Quebec.

ASQUITH'S MOTION IS SAID TO CONSTITUTE DECLARATION OF LACK OF CONFIDENCE

The Most Serious Political Crisis in the Life of The Lloyd George Government Exists Today

WILL GIVE FACTS

(By Ed. L. Keen.)
(United Press Service.)

LONDON, May 8. — The most serious political crisis in the life of the Lloyd George Government exists to-day.

The situation, engendered by General Maurice's letter charging the Premier with lack of veracity, was brought to a head by Herbert Asquith's motion in favour of the House of Commons investigating the charges instead of allowing the Government to appoint two judges for that purpose.

Lack of Confidence.

Asquith's action amounts to a direct declaration of a lack of confidence in the Government. Lloyd George is likely to reply to Maurice. Political students generally believe the Premier will be able to explain satisfactorily. Nevertheless the incident tends to shake public confidence, until it is straightened out.

A Challenge.

Although divided along lines for and against the Government the morning press agrees upon the seriousness of such a charge coming from Maurice, a former member of the General Staff. They hold the opinion it is a challenge which the Government must meet immediately, or face the peril of weakened public confidence.

The Northcliffe press supports the Government, refusing to believe that the Ministers deliberately deceived the people.

The Times and Mail favour the Government's method of investigation. The Mail believes Asquith thinks he has found a weapon with which to destroy the present Government and return the old government, of which he was the head, to power.

Has Given Notice.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, May 8.—Outwaite, the Liberal member of Parliament from Hanley, has given notice that he will ask Lloyd George to-morrow whether the Premier and Chancellor Bonar Law will continue to exercise the functions of their offices while the Maurice probers are investigating.

Will Give Facts.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, May 8.—As a consequence of the political situation brought about by General Maurice's letter, Premier Lloyd George, according to the lobby correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, considers it unavoidable to disclose the facts which have been withheld up to this time for military reasons. The Premier, it is added, intends to give facts and figures when he speaks on the Asquith motion on Thursday.

RETAIL GROCERS ARE IMPERILING LICENSES

By Advising Customers to Buy More Sugar and Flour Than Permitted.

OTTAWA, May 7.—Reports have reached the Canada Food Board that certain retail dealers have been advising their customers to buy more sugar and flour than is permitted under the new regulations. A warning has been issued in all such cases that the practise must be discontinued at once, and that dealers who are urging such excessive purchases may have their application for license refused or delayed. Moreover, customers buying quantities which will bring their total holdings up to a larger amount than is allowed under the Food Board regulations make themselves liable to a fine of between $100 and $1,000, while the quantity of sugar in their possession in excess of the amount which they may legally hold may be seized and forfeited after May 15.

HINDENBURG APPEARS TO BE PREPARED TO STRIKE AGAIN

A NEW DRIVE

(United Press Service.)
(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, May 8.— (10 O'clock Despatch.)— Hindenburg appears about ready to strike again, unless the signs of the Times are wholly deceitful.

From various sources it is known the vast machinery, composed of roads, railways, bridges, airdromes, airplanes and artillery concentrations stand ready, while great armies of troops, refitted and refreshed await the pull of the trigger to the catapult which will hurl them into the fray.

Divisions Refitted.

My personal computation shows that of 205 enemy infantry divisions (2,272,000 men) on the west front, about 130 are now in the line. Of the remainder, which is in reserve, about sixty men drawn out of recent batteries. Of these about forty are refitted sufficiently to be ready for action elsewhere in the line.

Twenty-five divisions have taken no part in the offensive. Adding to the above between fifteen and twenty divisions in reserve, one arrives at the probable total of more than eighty fairly fresh divisions which are now preparing to strike.

Hindenburg, presumably, is much in the same position now as on March 21, with two important qualifications. His troops then were wholly fresh and doped with the infallibility of the German plans, and had the advantage of a long winter of preparation in machinery, whereas the new drive must be undertaken with men doubting their own ability.

The Street Parade Did Not Materialize

Owing to a delay in the train service, the company playing "Uncle Tom's Cabin" at the Grand Opera House this afternoon and evening, did not arrive in time to hold a street parade, much to the regret of the younger element.

Australian Troops Advanced South of the Somme River

A Heavy Bombardment Preceded Its Attack—The Battlefield Is Deluged with Sunshine

MADE A FEINT

(United Press.)
(By William Phillip Simms.)

Two o'clock despatch.

With the British Armies in France, May 8.—Australian troops have advanced again south of the Somme. One advance, west of Morlancourt (midway between Albert and the Somme) was to a depth of 300 yards on a 500 yard front. The other was northeast of Sailly les Sec (on the north bank of the Somme, three miles south and west of Morelancourt) 500 yards deep, on a front of 600 yards.

FINE WEATHER AGAIN.

The Australians first made a feint with a heavy bombardment in another portion of the sector between the Somme and Ancre. Then they advanced this morning on the two fronts where they made advances.

The enemy put up a tremendous machine gun and shrapnel barrage, but the Australians held on.

The battlefield to-day is deluged with sunshine, and war planes are flying about in swarms.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

WEDNESDAY, MAY 8TH, 1918.

OILING THE STREETS.

It is expected that the work of oiling Peterborough's streets will soon be under way. In this connection a local citizen who followed the methods used last year points out that there is need for improvement. There are four or five main arteries running through Peterborough on which the bulk of the traffic travels, and this citizen makes the logical suggestion that these busy thoroughfares should be the first to be oiled. In other seasons he complains, considerable time was spent in placing oil on streets on which the traffic was light, the principal travel routes being left, in some cases, almost to the last, with the result that the conditions along these latter streets were almost unbearable until well on into the summer. The suggestion is passed on to the Board of Work Department as one that seems well worth following up.

VOTES FOR INDIANS.

A contemporary remarks that any Indian who wants the franchise can obtain it by giving up his special privileges as a ward of the government. That is understood, but why in the case of Indians who have fought for Canada overseas should this additional sacrifice be necessary. The man who was good enough to fight for Canada is good enough to vote in Canada, and he should not have to give up any of his privileges to get the franchise. It would be just as logical to deprive any returned soldier of his vote because he is in receipt of a pension from the government, as to say that the Indian who offered his life for the cause of liberty cannot exercise the franchise because he is a ward of the same government. Alien women the wives and daughters of the very men who were denied the privilege of voting by the War Time Elections Act, are being enfranchised. There is little justice in measures that allow to aliens the opportunity that is denied to men who have faced the Hun overseas.

The War Times Election Act allowed Indian members of the Canadian expeditionary force to vote at the last election. Why not make the privilege permanent? The government was willing enough to take Indians as soldiers, the government was willing enough to give them the vote when it figured that the soldier vote would go to support conscription; the government should be willing enough now to say that the Indians who fought for Canada should have a voice in Canadian affirs.

It only takes a few seconds to swear an Indian in as a soldier. As the law which our contemporary quotes now stands, it takes six years to enfranchise him. The red tape should be cut.

MORE FRONT FOR CANADIANS.

The announcement that the Canadian troops in France have taken over a new sector of the allied lines, in addition to holding as hitherto the whole line in front of Lens between Hill 70 and Gavrelle, will be of vital interest to the Canadian people. It is evidence of the fact that the Canadian units in France are up to full strength, for the new line taken over adds three and a half miles to the front guarded by the Maple Leaf troops, and gives them the task of protecting about thirteen and a half miles of the battle line. The growth in the size of the Canadian fighting forces in France is illustrated by a comparison between the long stretch of front now held by General Currie's men and the line maintained by the 1st Canadian Division at the opening of the 2nd Battle of Ypres, three years ago, which only comprised, roughly, about 5,000 yards.

The new sector taken over by the Canadians is south of Arras, and covers a front of about three and a half miles. It is evident that one Canadian division has been transferred from the First British Army to the famous Third Army, which so distinguished itself at the beginning of the German offensive, while the other three holding the Lens sector, are still part of General Sir Henry Horne's First Army.

WHY TALK HERE?

The Veterans' Club is not the place for J. H. Burnham, M.P., to hammer tables and denounce the wrongs done the returned soldier, and the grievances sustained by the soldiers' dependents at the hands of the Union Government.

Mr. Burnham is a member of the House of Commons, who at the last election received the support of practically every soldier. If he wants to do anything to improve the condition of the men and women who helped to elect him, let him do his talking on the floor of the House, and let him keep on talking until there is an improvement shown.

God knows the men and the majority of the women, who listened to Mr. Burnham's outburst at the opening of the G.W.V.A. rooms, did not need any information from Mr. Burnham as to government red tape. They know only too well what departmental inefficiency means; they know how often separation allowances go astray, how errors in pay tangle up a man's accounts for weeks; how pension adjustments are held up. There was no need of Mr. Burnham growing red in the face and shattering the ear-drums of his hearers, bellowing of points such as these.

The place for his so-called "red triangle campaign of truth" is not Peterboro, but Ottawa.

The red tape that he slashed, the mistakes that he attacked, the "grateful government" that he grew satirical over, are all at the capital.

Mr. Burnham owes his election to the soldiers—a body of men who have seen too much camouflage at the front to be deceived by it at home.

If Mr. Burnham is sincere and not using grandstand tactics he will transfer his attack to the real battle front at Ottawa, where his complaints may do some good. He is only wasting his own time and that of the Veterans in talking about grievances that cannot be corrected here, but should be at Ottawa.

Mr. Burnham's mistake lay not in what he said, but in where he said it—let him go into action where he can do some good.

BETTER ACCOMMODATION NEEDED.

Complaints about the accommodation for troops at Kingston, have been general, and although the situation will be relieved by the moving of units to Barrichefd Camp for the summer, it is evident that some change in policy must be made. The Kingston Whig, in an article reproduced below, calls attention to the serious need for better accommodation, and in this connection many people, military as well as civilian, cannot understand why in view of the conditions as described, the military authorities allow the splendid armouries at Peterboro, Belleville, and other points in the district, to remain deserted, except for the caretakers. Here in Peterboro there is a magnificent building with every accommodation for the housing of at least 600 troops, equipped with a large kitchen, splendid lavatory facilities, shower baths, rifle ranges, and other necessities for training, and it remains unused, while at Kingston troops have been jammed into old mills and barracks that have long outgrown their usefulness.

Discussing this feature, The Whig says:

The men of the permanent units, the volunteers and the men called up under the provisions of the military service act, have not been provided with suitable accommodation. The Artillery Park and Tete de Pont Barracks are obsolete relics of an outgrown past. Fort Henry in its present condition, is regarded by the soldier with disgust. The Cereal Works, where a battery is housed, is not adapted for military purposes. Other units are scattered here and there in unsatisfactory quarters. The men of the new army are now arriving in the city by hundreds daily, and the officers have a hard time of it to find them any kind of a place in which to eat and rest.

This is not as it should be. It is not as the Canadian people would wish it to be. Many of the boys now called up come from good homes wherein, during all their lives they have been accustomed to cheerful and refining surroundings. The change they are now called upon to face is not a pleasant or an agreeable one. They are entitled to better things, and they know it. Called upon as they are to sacrifice much that life holds dear for them, their country might reasonably be expected to provide the best accommodation possible.

BLAMES THE WARLORDS

PRESENT CONFLICT FORCED ON THE ALLIES.

Former Ambassador to London Makes Candid Statement Regarding German Diplomats, and He Says "We Deliberately Destroyed the Possibility of a Peaceful Settlement."

THE personal memorandum of Prince Lichnowsky, revealing the inner workings of German diplomacy, and which has caused much feeling in Germany against the former ambassador to Great Britain, leaked out last summer through the German General Staff after the fall of Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg. This statement is made by the Socialist Vorwaerts of Berlin, which prints the most important points of the memorandum.

"Prince Lichnowsky has not a shadow of a doubt about the responsibility for the war. Without hesitation he fastens it upon Germany. The German militarists were inexorable. They would not suffer Count Berchtold to give way, when he flinched from plunging Europe into the war they forced his hand.

"We deliberately destroyed the possibility of a peaceful settlement," is the former ambassador's considered judgment. He cannot feel surprised that "the whole civilized world outside Germany attributes to us sole guilt for the world war."

The first hint of coming trouble which reached Lichnowsky seems to have been Von Bethmann-Hollweg's refusal to share his optimism when he visited Wilhelmstrasse early in July, 1914. The Chancellor and the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs complained of Russian armament, and the latter declared that Russia was everywhere in Germany's way. At the same time he learned that Von Tchirsky, the German Ambassador at Vienna, had been rebuked because he had counselled moderation towards Serbia. But these were mere straws, showing the direction of the current.

It was not until later that he heard of "the decisive conversation at Potsdam on July 5," and of "the absolute assent" which "all personages in authority" there gave to Austria's enquiry, that he knew that Gen. von Moltke, then chief of the General Staff, was "pressing for war," or, that he was informed of the statement in the protocol of the Potsdam meeting sent to Count Mensdorff that these "personages" had agreed "there would be no harm if a war with Russia were to result."

Herr von Jagow met his warnings about the probable effects of the Potsdam policy upon British opinion by assuring him Russia was not ready and "Germany must simply risk it." This belief as to Russia's unreadiness "caused us to stimulate Count Berchtold to the greatest possible energy."

Meanwhile the attitude of Britain was absolutely pacific, and the British press protested against the political exploitation of the Sarajevo murders, but it sternly reproved the crime. It at once understood that the unprecedented ultimatum which, under "stimulation" from Berlin, Count Berchtold, had launched at Serbia, meant war. Still Sir Edward Grey, as he then was, did not despair, and the former German Ambassodor bears the strongest testimony to the sincerity of his unwearying efforts to avert this war which the Germans calumniously assert he provoked.

The prince declares that "it would have been easy to find an acceptable solution" for the two relatively small points left in dispute between Vienna and Belgrade, and that "given good will everything could have been settled in one or two sittings" of the body proposed by Sir Edward. "Far from from Berlin" would have been enough to make Count Berchtold less satisfied with a diplomatic success and to cause his acquiescence in the Serbian reply. What happened?

"This hint was not given, on the contrary we pressed for war." Sir Edward brought Germany to make a proposal of her own; "we insisted upon war." The Russian Foreign Minister made urgent appeals and definite declarations, and later the Russian Emperor "sent positively humble telegrams" in vain. "Berlin went on insisting that Serbia must be massacred."

At last Count Berchtold himself wavered. He "had hitherto stayed the strong man on instructions from Berlin" and he "decided to change his course." Then Germany cut short all hopes of peace by herself declaring war.

Prince Lichnowsky speaks of "perudy" of the policy he was used to cloak, but it is not chiefly upon sentimental or even upon moral grounds that he condemned the German system. It is the folly rather than the wickedness of German statecraft which he reprobates. It is quite unnecessary, he insists, for Germany to trouble herself about Austria. Austria-Hungary might have been turned into "a vassal of the German empire" without an alliance at all. Germany could always keep her in tow by cultivating good relations with Russia.

But Prussian "militarists" were bent upon war which was essential to their own class interests.

"When the ex-ambassador visited Wilhelmstrasse on his return from London he was told that in any case there would have been war in 1916. "But then Russia would have been ready, and so it was better now." In the face of these facts, many of which must have passed under his eyes, Lichnowsky is not astonished that the rest of the world should look upon German policy as it does. He finds it intelligible that the allies should vow the destruction of a system which is a permanent menace to Germany's neighbors, that they should believe the German people to be animated by the spirit of Bernhardi, and that they should look upon Germany as still ruled by a caste of feudal knights and junkers. That, he owns, is what Germany's enemies think, and what they are bound to think. He does not consider that her future prospects are brilliant. "Central Europe," he declares, 'is mediævalism, and Berlin-to-Bagdad is a cul de sac." The struggle she has provoked will end in triumph for her opponents, and she will remain alone with Austria and Hungary. Such is the punishment he forsees for her folly and her perfidy in provoking the bloodiest war that has ever scourged the nations of the world."

Against Games.

The man who deliberately takes unnecessary exercise wastes an equivalent of food according to Dr. Robert Hutchison, a dietetic expert at West London Hospital, and, on this assumption, he strongly objects to athletics at the present time. He believes Britons can suffer 10 per cent. reduction in weight without endangering their health. Other dietetic experts express the opinion that the recent enormous consumption of fish and rabbits in Great Britain instead of the red beef of old England is reducing the British waistline, but so far is making people healthier. Less exercise and more sleep is advocated by Dr. Hutchison to retard loss of weight.

Lightning Struck City In Several Places Last Night

Lightning struck the home of Mr. George Rayner, 171 Prince street during the storm last night at 7.30.

The house was occupied at the time the bolt hit the south gable end of the roof near a chimney. However, no one in the house was effected by it, one in the house was affected by it, half square in the roof and travelled down an electric wire into the ground saving the house from taking fire. The Fire Department was summoned as a precaution.

Hit Driving Shed.

A shaft of lightning hit the peak of the driving shed at Mr. Edward Vinnie's home, 211 Barnardo avenue, last night. It scattered a shower of shingles over the roof and the yard, split and splintered a rafter and, in short, tore out the north-west corner of the building. There was, fortunately, no sign of fire. The barn was stored with dry hay and would have caught fire from the slightest flame.

CHEESE BOARD MEETING.

First of the Season Will Be Held Next Monday.

The first meeting of the Peterborough Cheese Board will be held on Wednesday, May 15th. The pasturage in the country has greatly improved during the past week, and the flow of milk has shown a very considerable increase, but the present prospect of the dairy industry for the summer is not the most encouraging. The difficulties facing the farmers extend from the scarcity of milkers to cheese makers.

GREAT WAR VETERANS WANT AN EXPLANATION

Claim Their Request For Permission to Canvass in the Schools Which Was Refused Was not Before the Whole Board For Consideration

THE POLL-TAX QUESTION

A sequel to the tag day campaign of the Peterborough Branch of the Great War Veterans' Association cropped out at the regular meeting of the Veterans' Association in their new club-rooms last night, when the secretary was instructed to write a letter to the Board of Education, asking for an explanation of the circumstances surrounding the Veterans being refused permission to visit the schools in connection with the sale of tags.

Secretary Whatley explained that he had written to the Board, asking for permission for canvassers to go into the schools on the Friday before tag day. Other societies had been given this privilege, but in this particular case a letter was received from Mr. G. H. Thompson, secretary of the Board of Education, stating that the Board could not see its way clear to grant the necessary permission. Since then Secretary Whatley stated that he had been told by members of the Board of Education that the Veterans' request had never been before the whole Board for consideration. Secretary Whatley thought that an explanation should be forthcoming as to why the whole Board should not have had a chance to consider the matter, and the meeting agreed with this opinion, a motion being passed to instruct the secretary to ask for an explanation from the Board of Education.

The matter of members of the C. E. F. invalided home from overseas having to pay poll tax was also before the meeting. It was pointed out that when members of the active Militia in peace times were exempt from this tax, it was scarcely fair to ask men who had fought overseas to pay. The Veterans will take the matter up with the City Council.

No fewer than fourteen members were added to the roster at last night's meeting, the new members including two Original Firsts, in the persons of Corp. Thos. Levoir, of the 2nd Battalion, home on furlough, and Corp. Cummiskey, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons. The membership of the Peterborough Branch is steadily climbing, and the 300 mark is rapidly being approached.

Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P., was selected as one of the Association's delegates to the Provincial Convention of the G.W.V.A. at Hamilton on May 23, 24, and 25. The membership has grown so fast that, whereas the branch was only entitled to send three delegates when the latter were selected a few weeks ago, they are now permitted to send four, and Capt. Burnham's name was added to the list.

The report of the tag day campaign was presented by Comrade Stanley, chairman of the committee, and showed a balance of over $1,300, after all expenses had been met. A vote of thanks was tendered the members of the committee.

BROTHER OF PETERBORO MAN IS DECORATED

The following letter refers to Lieut. H. Sutherland, M.C., a brother of Mr. A. B. Sutherland, an employee of the Robt. Fair Co., of Peterborough:

In the Field, 4th Feb., 1918.

My Dear Sutherland,—I was greatly gratified when I learned that you had been awarded the Military Cross, and I have intended to write to you to express my personal appreciation of your services at Passchendaele from the 22nd to the 28th of October. The pack trains at Ypres had to be depended on entirely for the transportation of food, munitions and other supplies to the forward area, and in almost every case, devoted service was given, and instances of great bravery abounded. I do not think, however, that I have heard of anything finer than your action on the night of October 28th, when you made two trips through the heavy shelling, almost impassable, and up to the forward dumps, and got through the supplies needed for the next day's attack.

Very many men would consider that being blown up by a shell was good for a "blighty" at least, and your carrying on in spite of this showed a very great devotion to duty, which must have inspired the men under your command.

That the recommendation should have come from another brigade pleased me very much, since it showed that our efforts to help them in their active operations were appreciated.

Please accept hearty congratulations on your well-earned honour.—Yours sincerely,

Victor W. Odlum,
Brigadier-General.

Three Pounds For Triplets

RODIN IN OLD AGE.

View Taken of War by the Great Frenchman.

"In the beginning of the war Rodin did not dare to hope that France would preserve to the end this essential strength of patience which seemed to him and to many of us the privilege of the northern peoples; but as the days passed he was filled with a positive veneration for the incomparable fortitude of our soldiers. 'The patience of the trenches,' he said, 'is the sublime virtue of this war.'

"This vigor of mind and spirit which life had brought him little by little, despite the inevitable, harrowing struggles of genius against mediocrity, explains the altogether extraordinary effect which Rodin had over all who came close to him. Amid the exhausting uncertainties that beset the modern soul, this beautiful being, massive in form and in thought, rose up with the august calm of a Moses. He dominated the chaos of ideas from the height of a very simple philosophical conviction, based upon the love of nature and the supremacy of intelligent labor. He conveyed such an impression of latent courage, of sure power, that those who lost faith during the long years of war and the overwhelming of France said to themselves in the presence of Rodin, 'The country which has produced such a man cannot die!'

"Especially in his old age the great sculptor had attained a wonderful serenity. In his perpetual contact with nature, which he saw with the eyes at once of the lover and of the naturalist, he had wholly divested himself, in her presence, of the spirit of criticism; for him there was no longer either good or evil, but only the opposition of forces and temperaments. This gave him a superior equilibrium, a contagious certitude of having found the true meaning of life. Every time I saw him in his immense studio at Meudon, casting the eye of a gracious sovereign over the people of his sculpture, I said to myself, 'He is one of the Blest.'" —Judith Cladel, in Century.

Saving Romantic Girls.

The United States War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities now had 55 women deputy sheriffs doing scouting and patrol work. Under the girls' protective bureaus being established by the Training Camp Activities Commission these protective officers are working in vicinities of camps in all parts of the country. They have training and experience in social work with girls. Their work is intensely personal in character and is chiefly concerned with the problems of the individual girls who come to their attention. They wear no badge or distinguishing mark of any kind, though they cooperate closely with the military police and the local authorities.

"Often," said Miss Maude Miner, chairman of the Committee on Protective Work for Girls, "the women protective officers find girls in the vicinity of the camps who are attracted by the presence of the uniform. Some of these are girls who have answered advertisements and who arrive in camp cities with insufficient funds; others are runaways from their homes in near-by cities and country towns. A girl resident of the town, who is disposed to resist discipline, is taken to her home by the woman protective officer and her mother warned of her danger. The officers also visit near-by amusement places to discover young girls who seem to need protection and to see that local ordinances are obeyed."

Three of Gen. Foch's Maxims.

Gen. Foch, apart from his military genius, has written books and articles on military strategy and tactics. The French review, La France Militaire, recalls certain passages in the general's articles. Three passages read as follows:

For chiefs: The 33th article of war does not consist in pouncing on the enemy like a wild boar. There must be harmony of all wills, submission of the subordinate higher command.

The War Department is a moral force. A battle is a struggle of two wills. A victory is moral superiority in the victor; moral depression in the vanquished.

A battle is lost morally, but it is also morally that it is won. A battle won is a battle in which one will not admit being vanquished.

The Golden Year.

The "golden year," as 1916 was called, for the fish canning industry, of which Stavanger is the largest centre in Norway, resulted in the construction of eighteen new factories in that vicinity. Norway's total export of canned fish was 82,019,290 pounds in 1914, 114,107,972 pounds in 1915, and 84,859,839 pounds in 1916.

The Making of Big Guns.

"No fewer than one hundred and seventeen miles of steel wire are wound on a twelve-inch gun that weighs thirteen and a half tons," says a writer in the Millgate Monthly. "In appearance this wire, which is of the same quality as piano wire, resembles tape; it is one-quarter of an inch wide and one-tenth of an inch thick. It is tested to a breaking strength of one hundred and ten tons. The wire unwinds from a reel as the gun-barrel revolves, and a tension of about fifty tons to the square inch ensures mechanical accuracy in wrapping it around the gun. Various parts of the gun receive different thicknesses of wire. At the breech of a twelve-inch gun, where the chief strain comes, there are ninety-two layers, which give a thickness of nine and a half inches of wire, but at the muzzle there are only fourteen layers. Over the wire the gunmakers shrink on steel rings at white heat. When they cool they contract and grip with immense force. The rifling of the barrel is an automatic process—an example of wonderful mechanical ingenuity. When the gun is finished experts test the accuracy of the rifling with plastic gutta percha."—Family Herald.

School Board Discuss The Question of School Accommodation In The South End Of The City

Property Committee Recommend That The Basement of St. James Church be Used as a Class Room —Report Was Adopted—List of Accounts Passed.

REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING

A lively discussion on ways and means of relieving the congestion of pupils at the King Edward and South Central schools occupied the main portion of the School Board's time last night. Suggestions of moving the overflow of one school on to another, by using the Queen Mary for the surplus of the South Central and moving the King Edward to the South Central, were eliminated on account of the distances it would incur for the pupils. Already a considerable number of complaints have been made by different families of the inconvenience in school situations. The matter was closed by the adoption of the Property committee's report renting the basement of St. James' church to turn it into a class room, leaving it to the property committee to act.

The King Edward school is overcrowded by 40 pupils, the South Central by 100.

Report of the Propertly Committee.

Regarding the matter of the extra class room accommodation to be provided on the 1st of September next, and which was referred to this committee for consideration, we beg to advise that the trustees of the St. James' church have offered a portion of their basement which will accommodate one class room at a yearly rental of $300.00, the Board to make the necessary minor repairs and your committee beg to recommend that this offer be accepted, and that a proper lease be drawn up by the Board's solicitors and that the chairman and secretary be authorized to execute the same.

This extra room, together with another room to be opened in the Queen Mary school, will temporarily relieve the overcrowded conditions now existing.

Your committe also recommend that early next fall the Board consider the matter of providing permanent accommodation to relieve the overcrowded conditions of the King Edward and South Central schools.

Respectfully submitted.
A. A. FOWLER.
Chairman.

Stand by Contract.

A question of whether a teacher may or may not break a contract was finally settled by the Board last night over a letter from Miss Flossie Jackson, who wrote asking permission to resign this month and supply a substitute in Miss Evans. Mr. Gordon contended that in the case of Mr. Stubbs, the Board had fallen over themselves to release him. Miss Jackson should be dealt with likewise. Mr. Greene thought that as the closing of the term is the time a pupil is in most need of the teacher he has been used to, she should not be released. Miss Jackson will stick by her contract.

Telephones For Schools.

Mr. Fowler spoke of the inconvenience incurred in the lack of Bell telephones in the schools, which condition is also dangerous in case of fires. After considerable discussion, in which Mr. Denne contended the phone system would institute tea party conversations, and Mr. Patterson suggested having a city fire bell system installed instead, it was decided to install telephones by January 1 in the Public and High schools.

Mr. Kenner wrote, asking that the decision of the Board regarding a teacher from the Institute staff on the Entrance Board be reconsidered as anadvisable measure. As this had been definitely settled before as unnecessary, the matter was left over.

Greatest Enrollment.

The report of the High and Public school enrollment showed the greatest number in the history of the schools being 180 in advance of any previous year.

School Nurse's Report.

Results Are Very Encouraging Says Y.M.C.A. Campaign Worker

Team Workers for the Red Triangle Campaign Report Good Progress—Canvass Will be Continued Today

RETURNS NOT ALL IN

The results of yesterday's canvass for the Red Triangle fund were fairly encouraging, and when the final returns are in, it is believed that Peterborough's share of the fund will have been secured. It is the intention of the campaign workers to continue the canvass as yesterday it was found impossible to cover such a large area. It is not the intention of the committee to make a house to house canvass, but anybody who wishes to subscribe to the fund may do so at the local Y.M.C.A., or the Royal Bank. Until the returns are all in it will be impossible to say what the final result will be.

The Banquet.

At the banquet held last evening in the Empress Hotel the team workers spent a pleasant hour relating their experiences. Many stories were told of returned soldiers who wished to donate something to this worthy object which contributes so much to the morale and comfort of the troops.

"You cannot imagine how good a cup of hot coffee tastes in the trenches," said a veteran of Vimy as he handed the committeeman a five-dollar bill.

In one of the large departmental stores the elevator boy asked the Red Triangle canvasser if he could not contribute, and when told that he could he promptly handed over fifty cents. Many stories were also told at the banquet, of widows who had their donation ready, saying: "It is all I can afford," or "I have heard from my boy at the front and I know what it means."

"I value these widow's mites more than the large subscriptions which will be obtained from some of the corporations and companies," said Mr. J. J. Allen, one of the committeemen. "If everybody gave in proportion to them we would have no trouble in raising $60,000."

Among the large subscriptions obtained was one from the Quaker Oats for $1,000.

All teams are out to-day and are strenuously trying to fill the city's quota.

Lieut. Might In United States

Peterboro Boy Helping in The Liberty Loan Drive

Lieut. Percy G. Might, of Peterboro, formerly of the 83rd Battalion, is one of the Canadian officers who has been on duty in the United States in connection with the Liberty Loan drive. The Westboro, Pa., Agitator, says of a meeting at which he took part:

"Lieut. P. G. Might, of the 18th Canadian Infantry, gave a splendid address in Alumni Hall in Mansfield, Monday night, under the auspices of the Liberty Loan Committee of Tioga county. He is an eloquent and forceful speaker and held the big audience spellbound with his account of conditions in France. He spoke last evening in Knoxville, and will speak tonight in Blossburg. Tioga County must raise over $300,000 yet to make its quota for the Third Liberty Loan. Buy a bond—'Come Across or the Kaiser will.'"

GIRLS! GIRLS! TRY IT! STOP DANDRUFF AND BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR

HAIR STOPS FALLING OUT AND GETS THICK, WAVY, STRONG AND BEAUTIFUL.

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a "Danderine hair cleanse." Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil, and in just a few minutes you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

Besides beautifying the hair at once Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping the itching and falling hair.

But what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair, growing all over the scalp. If you care for pretty, soft hair, and lots of it, surely get a small bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter for a few cents.

Uncle Sam Wants Truth About Aircraft Situation

Three Separate Probes Have Developed Yesterday, and Interest is Keen.

STORM IN SENATE MARKS DAY'S DOINGS

Where Have Millions Gone?

Washington, May 8.—Three distinct and separate probes of America's aircraft production were being developed yesterday.

Secretary of War Baker before the House Military Committee, was quoted as having declared charges of graft and failure in the aircraft programme constituted merely "enemy propaganda" and asked that he be allowed to outline next year's programme before being asked about last year's work.

Upon receiving President Wilson's letter asking the Justice Department to go into the charges of graft and malversation launched against aircraft officials by Cutzon Borgium, the sculptor, Attorney General Gregory summoned Assistant Attorney General G. Carroll Todd for a conference on the subject. It is believed Todd, who has been conducting an investigation of graft charges against the Hog Island shipyard officials, will also lead the aircraft inquiry.

ANOTHER STORM IN SENATE.

Following publicatin of reiterated charges of Borgium the storm of criticism and indignation in the Senate, regarding the aircraft situation, broke loose again. Senator Chamberlain, chairman of the Military Affairs Committee, reversing his previous position, declared that the committee would conduct a searching investigation "that would spare nobody" and make no use of "whitewash."

"There is something radically wrong and we propose to put our finger on the man or men who are responsible for the present condition," he declared on the Senate floor.

WHERE HAVE MILLIONS GONE?

"This committee is going to find where the $840,000,000 aircraft fund has gone. There ought to be a change in method. The President has now constituted a change, and I look for better results. Aircraft production is now in the hands of a man who has made good in his private business, which is pretty good evidence that he will make good in business for the government.

"This committee proposes to do everything in its power to win the war. It does not propose engaging in any whitewash process, either.

"The people of the country should be told the truth about the situation. They never have been. I do not blame anybody. Perhaps nobody has known the truth."

He declared that 1500 Americans in the aviation service were sent abroad for training, where they waited a long time, and were then sent back here to train.

"As a result I have been informed that the morale of these men has been absolutely detroyed," he declared.

Senator Thomas, Colorado, submitted the letter received from the President regarding the charges of Cutzon Borgium.

Thomas said he had looked over the Borgium report and was inclined to doubt the credibility of the findings.

Senator Brandegee, Connecticut, submitted a letter from the President of the American Aeronautical Society, defending the officers of the Society, and the engineers in its employ.

"I don't want to incriminate anybody," he asserted. "The people who are making charges ought to shut up or prove up. All I want is the truth. I don't think it behooves us to sit silent and let such things go on."

FUNERAL TOOK PLACE ON SUNDAY.

Lakefield, May 7. — The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock of the late Emmanuel Sweeting, who died on Friday after years of suffering. The deceased was 61 years of age and is survived by his wife, who was a Miss Roseborough, a daughter, Mrs. Snelgrove, of Smith, and a son, Pte. Victor Sweeting, who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion. Messrs. Jonathan, Fred and Aaron Sweeting of Smith, are brothers.

Interment took place in the Lakefield cemetery, the pallbearers being all nephews of the deceased.

Big Increase In Canned Goods

Greater Production is the Only Thing That Will Help Says Peterboro Grocer.

Greater production this summer, is the only element which will save a material increase in the price of canned goods, Mr. R. H. Hunter, grocer, said this morning. Except the crops show a decided increase to offset the high price of materials contracted for by the Dominion Canneries to be used in canned goods, the prices will soar higher than ever.

Some idea of the increase in the cost of canning goods, may be obtained by a quotation from representatives of the Dominion Canneries on the cost of materials, showing the comparative prices of this and last year. The first figures refer to 1917, the latter figures to the present year.

Pea seed, $3.50, $6 to $9.
Corn seed, 15c, 21 1-2c.
Cans, $24.70, $28.00.
Boxes, 13 1-2c. 16 1-2c.
Fuel gas, 20, 30.
Green peas, $20, $45 ton on field.
Green corn, $10, $14 on field.
Bushels advanced 25 per cent.

Mr. Holden, a representative of one of the largest wholesale grocery houses in Canada, stated that things looked like a big increase in canned goods costs.

AN EXPLANATION.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—I understand the report of the Shannon case in your issue of Friday last has been very detrimental to me. I noticed at the time that you had not all the facts reported, but took no notice. I would be much obliged if you will give this the same prominence as you did the report.

It was stated that I got $100.00 out of the litigation. This was wrong. The $100.00 allowed by the Judge in Toronto included not only the disbursements, which included all Court fees and expenses of a trip specially to Toronto, but also I had to pay out of it the Official Guardian's costs, as is usual in all such cases. I could have taxed a bigger bill of legitimate costs, but put it down to $100.00 because of the smallness of the fund.

The effect of the judgment as it now stands is that Shaunon got the whole of the second $100.00.

Far be it from me to criticise the Judge's decision, but I think I got the worst end of the deal. The man agreed to supply me with three cords of best hardwood, and to help him out in paying for the car to bring the wood to town I paid for it in advance. I never got the wood and had to buy wood at a higher price. The ordinary man would think the purchaser would be entitled to damages for breach of contract, but according to the judge's ruling, this is not so, and he did not allow me one farthing for all the inconvenience I was put to by that breach of contract. That is the whole matter.

I offered to give Shannon an extra $10.00 before action, but he claimed and sued for $95.00, and gets $27.50. I would like to know how much better off he is than if he had accepted my offer, after paying his own costs.

Yours truly,
Jas. G. Guise-Bagley.

Lakefield Cadets Were Inspected Monday Afternoon

LAKEFIELD, May 7.— The annual inspection of the Lakefield High school cadets took place on Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Col. Gillespie, of Kingston, was the inspecting officer and spoke in a kindly, soldierly manner to the boys. Mr. W. H. Casement and Mr. G. B. Hilliard, Rev. C. Spencer and Mr. J. M. Simpson principal of the High school, spoke words of encouragement and commendation. This was the fourth annual inspection of the cadets and it has become one of the red letter days in the school year. One feature of this year's inspection was the attendance of parents, which was the largest of any years as yet. Kenneth Madill, who has been cadet captain for two years, deserves credit for his painstaking work with the corps.

Lakefield High school cadets have a creditable roll of honour of ex-members who are serving the Empire.

Pte. Allan Roy, who has returned from France on sick leave, is visiting his aunts, the Misses Roy, on Regent street.

Alex. Burgess of the R.F.C., Toronto, was in the village renewing old acquaintances. Alex. left here five years ago as a school boy, and his many friends are pleased and proud to see him wearing the King's uniform.

GIRL DECLINED TO GIVE HER NAME

A C.P.R. detective got an unexpected retort recently. A young lady prominent in the Business Girls' Club was taking a stroll up the C.P.R. track when a man in plain clothes stopped her asking for her name and address. The young lady asked him his reason, and he told her he was a C.P.R. detective, showing his badge. She saluted and told him: "I'm the Mayor of Peterborough." The detective on warning her he'd get her yet, was told by her: "Not on the car tracks!"

MUST NOT HOARD SUGAR

How Chief of Police Thompson Views the Local Situation

The Order-in-Council pertaining to the hoarding of sugar will not, Chief Thompson stated this morning, be interpretated to the letter, and families having a reasonable quantity on hand need not fear a raid by the police.

Where a housekeeper has been thrifty and economical enough to provide three or four months' supply of sugar, she will be allowed to keep it, as returning would only mean confusion, and work out in the end that she would merely re-buy the same material ultimately.

Must Not Hoard.

Should the Chief find a housekeeper who has already a supply on hand buying more, however, the law will interfere, and the offender be dealt with accordingly.

Grocers Annoyed.

A number of the local grocers have already been annoyed and bothered by people wishing to know the exact ruling, and the information given by the Chief will probably serve as a guide.

Allied Forces Are Lengthening Positions All Along Line

Enemy is Experiencing Great Difficulty With Transportation and Communication Service.

FLANDERS MUD

Canadian Press:

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Allied forces are strengthening their positions all along the line in Northern France, said a statement to-day by the British Military Mission.

"Were it not practically certain that another German attack will be delivered in the very near future, one might be misled by the number of small operations and successful raids into thinking that the situation had settled down into the old stationary warfare phase again," said the statement.

"The enemy is experiencing great difficulty with his transportation and communication service. In addition to our harassing fire, a heavy rain has fallen in Flanders and the German is now realizing in the old Ypres salient what Flanders mud really is."

WEDDING BELLS

RUTHERFORD—SMITH.

The marriage was quietly solemnized Monday in Chalmers Presbyterian Church, Toronto, of Gwendolyn Agnes, youngest daughter of Mr. John H. Smith, of Peterborough, to Mr. Chas. Fred. Rutherford, of the Bank of Nova Scotia, Toronto. Rev. John W. Woodside conducted the ceremony. Miss Elizabeth Smith attended the bride, and Dr. Grant Barrie, of Toronto, acted as groomsman.

ELSOM—ELLIOTT.

At the George street Methodist parsonage on Tuesday, May 7, Edwin Elsom and Caroline Elliott were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. A. J. Thomas. The happy couple left on the 5.40 G.T.R. train for Toronto. They are both residents of this city and will reside in the city.

The Order Will Affect Peterboro

Passengers Will Have to Purchase Tickets Before Boarding Trains.

Starting on May 15th passengers on the C.P.R. railway will be required to purchase their tickets at the ticket office and show the ticket before entering the train.

On the G.T.R. the order has been in effect for a year on the main line, and will probably come into effect on the Peterborough line in the near future.

Asked the reason for the new regulation the officials on both lines said that while they had not been given a definite reason by the authorities for the new order, they supposed it to be done to save confusion and time lost by people purchasing their tickets on the train.

STREET CAR MEN DENY DISCOURTESY EXPECT RETRACTION

The announcement by Mr. W. G. Ferguson, manager of the Street Railway, that the management proposes to employ women as conductors and probably as "motormen" did not surprise the men, but the imputation that they have been more or less discourteous has aroused their resentment. In fact they expect Mr. Ferguson to retract that reflection. It was contained in the statement that the management believed that women conductors would be more courteous than the men.

"Street railway men are only human," was one comment, "they are good, bad and indifferent. We have had our share of all three categories, just as every street railway system or any other business has. But that was a sweeping statement that made no exceptions, and we not only resent it, but we deny that it is true. There probably have been some employees who offended in this respect, but it was the duty of the management to have removed them."

The men have intimated that they expected that women would be tried out, but they refer to the experience of Kingston to question the success of the experiment here. It was remarked that one of the most courteous of the conductors was recently discharged for a minor, although evidently sufficient, infraction of the rules.

LET GEORGE DO IT.

(Supplied by Local Councilor Women)

Is this the class to which you belong, or are you honestly and perseveringly trying to help the boys at the front, not only in the matter of conservation, but also in that of increased production of food. It is easy to sit in a comfortable chair and expect your neighbour to work that you may eat, while his son fights that you may live. Surely at this crisis you are not one of those selfish ones who, doing no strenuous labour, physical or mental, insist that whatever others may do they will not forego their breakfast bacon so long as they can afford it, but will actually consume the food needed for the boys who are defending their country.

Increased Price Of Bread Affects Local Consumption

"Since the increase in the price of bread on Monday from 20c to 22c a three-pound loaf, there has been a strikingly noticeable decrease in our bread sales," said a grocer to-day. He was wondering whether there was any cause, other than that of the higher price, for the diminished demand. Apparently, however, the people find that at 22c they simply must use substitutes, vegetables and other food to keep their food bills from advancing to new high levels. Not only have the people been urged to eat more vegetables, fillers that will take the edge off a well developed appetite and save flour for export, but the grocers have been requested to advise the people and to encourage them to curtail their purchases of bread. Twenty-two cents a loaf is the strongest argument that has yet appeared, and will likely prove the most effective.

BUILDING PERMIT FOR NEW GARAGE

Rebuilding the Dominion Bank, destroyed by fire during the winter, will cost the Bradburn Estate $16,000, and a permit for that amount was taken out yesterday. The building will be constructed on steel rafters with Barrett specifications roof and the interior finished in wood and plaster. The reconstruction will be completed on November 1 this year. Mr. G. M. Miller, who was architect of the C.G.E., and former Quaker Oats Company., will also construct this building.

Military Police Reach Peterboro

Men of military age, married and single, are warned to carry their civilian certificates, for the vanguard of the Military Police has reached the city and has already intercepted a number of men who had left their exemption cards at home, preserving them from the wear and tear of pocket carriage, for the satisfaction of inquisitive grandchildren who someday may ask them what they did in the great war.

Married men should arm themselves with their marriage certificates, or some statement equally acceptable, and the unmarried should be able to produce exemption sheets, otherwise the military police will arrange a rendezvous for them at Kingston.

Several of the factories have been visited and the others will be gone through during the week. It is understood that the present force of one man will be augmented before Saturday and that Peterboro will be combed thoroughly for military delinquents evaders and deserters.

WESTLAKE.—In Loving Memory of Philip M. Westlake, who departed this life May 8, 1917.

One year has passed and gone
Since one we loved so well
Was taken from his home on earth
With Jesus Christ to dwell.

Now the day is past, the night is come,
Its shadows o'er us creep,
And lo, this life is over for thee,
There is infinite peace in sleep.

Gently the billows are rolling,
Down by the silent grave,
Where lies our dear one sleeping
The one we loved but could not save.

Sleep on, dear one, thy suffering o'er,
Thy willing hands shall toil no more;
God took you home, He thought it best
To give you a sweet, peaceful rest.

Only gone a while before us,
We shall meet him by-and-bye,
If we are prepared to enter
That bright mansion in the sky.

For there is a hope, a blessed hope,
Which our dear Lord has given,
When days and years are passed and gone
We all may meet in heaven.

GALLANT ITALIAN GARRISON HOLDS POSTS AFTER 6 MONTHS

Three Hundred Soldiers Have Defied All Efforts of Enemy to Dislodge Them Since the Great Retreat

FATE WAS NEVER LEARNED

Washington, May 9. — One of the most remarkable incidents of the war was related in a communication from the Italian supreme command.

"One of our prisoners who escaped from an Austrian camp and succeeded in reaching the Italian lines after a series of thrilling experiences narrates that at Cimolai, east of Longarone, three hundred Italian soldiers are still fortified in a strong position in the mountains and present a most stubborn resistance to the Austrians, who thus far have been unable to dislodge them."

"Cimolai is in the invaded Italian territory and the Italian soldiers holding the position have successfully resisted siege and assaults for more than six months as it was last October that the Italian retirement took place.

The incident recalls several of a similar nature reported for weeks after the Italian retirement and is believed to represent one of the groups of soldiers who held out obedient to orders to stand or die and whose fate was never learned.

FIGHTING BLACKLEG IN PETERBOROUGH COUNTY

Vaccine is Being Distributed to the Farmers Throughout the District

F. F. McRae, agricultural representative of Peterborough County, writes as follows to the Weekly Sun, Toronto:

We have sent out to three farmers 280 doses of Blackleg Vaccine. I may say that the output of this vaccine since I came to the Department of Agriculture four years ago, has increased at least 200 per cent. Last spring almost 1,000 head of cattle in this district were vaccinated and present indications are that the number will be as large, if not larger, this year. Blackleg has been quite prevalent in the past, but is being eradicated.

And Kaiser Hurries Home to Potsdam.

BERNE, May 9. — (British Admiralty per Wireless Press.)— Emperor William has returned to Potsdam, owing to the political crisis resulting from the rejection of suffrage reform by the Prussian Diet. Count Von Hertling, the Imperial Chancellor, has been summoned to Potsdam to report on the situation.

In Families With Children many parents now use for the simple reason that children should never drink tea or coffee, and POSTUM which is wholesome and healthful, has a delicious satisfying taste.

GRAIN MARKET

There was a slight reaction in the option markets yesterday from the sharp declines of the markets of late. The feeling that the decline had about run itself out was assisted by a firming up in the spot premiums. Both corn and oats took a slight upward turn towards the close of the markets. Cash oats, Fort William, were advanced 5-8c on No. 2, C.W.'s, and 1-8c up on the lower grades. The government crop report out yesterday showed a better winter wheat condition than was expected, the percentage being 86.4, against 78.6 a month ago and 73.2 a year ago.

Pathé

The Simple "Why" of Pathe Superiority

SOME articles achieve fame by their intrinsic merit as viewed by the public. Others by the puff and blow of their producers. The Pathephone success is as simple as it is sure. It is due to its being an improvement upon anything which has come before it or since.

The original Pathe' Freres took the old-time talking machine and developed it until it is now the supreme achievement. Note these improvements: Instead of the old, scratchy, ever-changing steel needles—a genuine polished sapphire ball. Instead of a metal sound chamber—an all-wood one (on the violin principle). Instead of recording in narrow sound waves—a unique Pathe' method with long broad sound waves, more contact, more tone, richer music. Instead of "varnished boxes"—handsome cabinets—in historic period designs. Instead of playing only one or two kinds of records—the Pathephone will play all makes of records.

MUSIC AS RECREATION

Recreation is essential for the health and well-being of the family, and music is essential for a recreation that is totally relaxing and instructive.

Are you doing without music in the home because no one plays? In these days of marvelous inventions, that is no excuse for the lack of music.

There are people who have been wise enough to purchase player-pianos, organs and phonographs, slightly used, therefore cheaper, by securing them through Heintzman Hall, Peterborough, Royal Bank Buildings, Hunter Street.—B. H. Britton, Manager. 'Phone 259.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

AN UNEVENTFUL JOURNEY

CHAPTER LXII.

George had kissed me good-bye very fondly, had expressed the wish that I have a pleasant journey, and had sent kind remembrances to those at home. Then, just as he left me, he said:

"Remember, I shall expect you home a week from Wednesday."

Someway, I wished he hadn't said it. I had promised to do as he wished, and I should have preferred to carry the memory of his kind thought of me, his remembrances to mother and the rest at home, as his parting words.

I would be all day reaching home, so I made myself as comfortable as possible. I took off my hat and coat, opened my box of candy, and laid my magazines on a vacant chair in front of me, retaining one to read. But for a long time I sat with it unopened on my lap. I was thinking of George, of myself as I now was, and as I was when I left home. Would they think me improved, or would they fail to recognize what George considered as an improvement in me?

I hoped they would be half as glad to see me as I should be to see them. Then smiled at myself for my foolish thoughts. Of course, they would be. I visualized dad and mother and the boys, each one expressing their joy in their own way, each one voicing their regrets that my visit was to be so short.

The day passed slowly; but promptly on time the train drew into the station. There they all were! I saw them before the train stopped.

A Joyous Reunion.

There were dad and mother, she hanging on his arm and peering anxiously at the train. All three boys talking excitedly together, and running along with the slowing train.

I was so impatient I could scarcely wait for it to come to a stop, and made the porter quite angry by trying to push by him and get off before he had taken off the luggage which filled the vestibule. But, finally, I was in mother's arms, then in dad's. After that the boys each in turn took possession of me. Oh, it was good to be at home; and to be so loved!

We decided to walk home. The house was but a little ways from the station, so the boys carried my hand baggage. Carl took my bag, Ralph the basket of fruit, and David, the youngest, not to be outdone, insisted upon carrying my umbrella. My trunk would come up later on the village express wagon.

I walked now with dad and mother, then with each of the boys in turn. I fairly danced along the street, I was so happy to see them.

"Some swell sis has got to be!" Carl said in a stage whisper to Ralph. I laughed, but wondered what they would say could they see the wonderful outfit preparing for me for the summer.

"I should say she had." David broke in. "See them nifty shoes. I'll bet you couldn't race me to the top of Brundel's hill in those things."

"I'll bet I couldn't, either," I answered. "But you just wait until I get some sensible ones out of my trunk and I'll race all you want to."

"Boys, She Hasn't Changed After All."

"Honest will you?"

"Of course I will, you little simp! And I'll beat you, too, just as I used to," I bragged, not at all sure I hadn't forgotten how to run.

"Say, boys, she hasn't changed after all," he called over his shoulder. "Marrying that rich guy hasn't quite spoiled her, I guess."

"Just for that, I shan't walk another step with you," I returned, and hastened to mother. So, laughing, talking sense or nonsense, I once more entered the house out of which I had gone a bride the year before. Maggie, mother's one servant, came to meet me and I was so glad to be home that I kissed her, much to her delight. I ran from one room to another, sitting in all the old, comfortable chairs. Nosing around to see if anything had been changed; if there was anything new; and making the late dinner wait until both mother and Maggie declared it wouldn't be fit to eat.

"We killed the calf, you see, when the prodigal came back!" David tried to tease.

"One calf seems very much alive!" I retorted, only to find him behind my chair and to feel a smart box on my ear. One of his old tricks.

All this seems silly and inconsequential to others, perhaps, but to me it was all so vitally a part of my old life that, had anything been changed, had the boys been different, I should have been terribly disappointed. Now it seemed almost as if I never had been away.

When we finally decided to part for the night, dad had family prayers as usual; and thanked God because I had been allowed to return. It almost made me cry, even if I was so happy.

Suffered Great Agony

FROM PAIN IN STOMACH FOR OVER 5 YEARS

Most of the misery and ill-health that humanity is burdened with arises from disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels. If you are feeling out of sorts, have pains in the stomach, especially after eating, bilious spells, headaches, sour stomach, coated tongue, sallow or muddy complexion, specks floating before the eyes, you should take a few doses of Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills and note the change.

Miss Ida Hogan, Dunrobin, Ont., writes: "For over five years I have suffered great agony from pains in the stomach. I tried several remedies but got no relief until a friend advised me to take Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. I started with two vials and before I had one quite used, I found much relief. I continued until I used four vials, and they have completely cured me. That was fourteen months ago and I have not had the slightest return since. The best praise I could give them is not enough."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Miss Doane's Mealer

By J. L. Harbour

Mrs. Semira Doane was out in her front yard counting her Shirley poppies and admiring their almost infinite variety.

"No two of them seem to be exactly the same tint, and I never had such a lot of them out at one time before," said Miss Semira. She loved flowers and nearly every foot of her small front yard was laid out in beds and mounds. There was not a weed to be seen, and her plants looked thrifty and bore evidence of care. The little white house back of the flower garden had plants in the two front windows, and climbing vines completely covered the small, green lattice-work porch over the front door. All of the flowers and plants were of the old-fashioned varieties. Miss Semira did not care for floral "novelties." She liked her four-o'clocks and ragged robins and lady-in-the-green and bleeding hearts better than any "others" she had ever seen.

Miss Semira was so small and fragile looking, with such delicately tinted pink cheeks, and such fluffy yellow hair that she looked quite like a flower herself as she moved about in her little garden in a blue lawn dress with little white flowers in it, and her lace-trimmed snowy white apron in which there was neither spot nor wrinkle. She was stooping over picking a dead leaf or two from one of her geraniums when a shrill, rasping voice startled her by saying.

"How nice your flowers do look, Miss S'mira; an' how sweet they smell. I can smell them clean over to my house when it's still or when the wind is blowin' in that direction. You allus have such good luck with 'em. Flowers grow better for some folks than for others."

Miss Semira looked up and saw a tall, gaunt woman in a chocolate-colored calico dress and green and white checked gingham apron standing at her gate. A red and white tennis cap perched on one side of her iron-gray head gave the woman a grotesque look.

"O, Mrs. Sampson, is it you?" said Miss Semira. "Come in, won't you?"

"No, it ain't wuth while little time as I've got to stay. Then I've left some ginger bread in the oven. I want to know if you wouldn't be willing to take a mealer."

"A mealer, Mrs. Sampson?"

"Yes. You see I've got a chance to let my big front room upstairs if I can find a place for the person that wants it to take their meals. I can't undertake to give anyone their meals with my rheumatiz pesterin' me the way it does, an' Sampson havin' it when I don't. Then I ain't no cook, anyhow. But I do want to let that big front room, an' this person will take it if I can find a mealin' place near by, an' here you are right acrost the road an livin' all alone, an' you as much of a born cook as you are a born flower raiser. An' I've heard you say, that you sometime got dreadful tired o' fixin' your meals all by yourself."

"Who is it wants your room?"

"Well, it's a gentleman—but there, you needn't look so scairt. Miss S'mira, for it ain't a young gentleman nor a middle-aged gentleman, but a real nice, fatherly-lookin' old gentleman that there'd never be a mite o' talk 'bout you givin' his meals to. He must be old enough to be your father, an' I don't know when I've seen a nicer appearin' man. I'd a sight ruther have him around than nine out o' ten fussy, fault-findin' wimmen. Don't you say no until you think it all over."

Miss Semira thought it all over with the result that two days later Mr. Jared Lyster found himself seated at Miss Doane's daintily set table. Miss Semira had often been heard to say:

"I don't mind any part of living alone so much as I mind eating my meals all by myself. If I just had someone that was interesting and pleasant to talk to at meal-time I wouldn't mind the rest. I would take a mealer if I got a good chance."

Mrs. Sampson had gone a trifle beyond the truth when she had said that Jared Lyster was a "real fatherly looking old gentleman." Miss Semira's mental comment when she saw him was:

"Why, I don't believe that he is a day over fifty-five."

Miss Semira's own years numbered forty-five. She had expected her mealer to be a man of at least sixty-five and possibly seventy years of age, but she did not voice her surprise to Mrs. Sampson. She accepted the situation in a manner that manifested her good sense, and she said to herself:

"There's nothing for people to talk about if he isn't as old as I thought he was. I have lived in this town too long for anyone to gossip about me. He certainly is a very well-favored, gentlemanly person, and there's nothing in me giving him his meals that should set any one's tongue to wagging."

Jared Lyster was a childless widower who had purchased a small store in the town. He was a quiet, gentlemanly man of domestic taste who, it must be confessed, had no intention of going through life homeless. Like most men he had a fondness for good meals well served and he liked to live in an atmosphere of cleanliness and order. He found this atmosphere in Semira Doane's pretty and well kept little home, and the meals she served were to his entire satisfaction.

Miss Semira, on the other hand, found the society of Jared Lyster to be more agreeable than she would have dared confess. She would not acknowledge even to herself how much she valued his presence when he had been her "mealer" for three months. But she found herself studying his tastes and cooking the dishes she knew he liked. She found herself also putting a red ribbon bow in her hair nearly every day after he had casually remarked that red was his favorite color and that he liked to see the little bow of red in her hair. She found herself watching for his coming and he did not know that she often stood behind the lattice work on her little porch watching him out of sight. Nor did she know what his thoughts were as he walked away. He did not know how tumultously her heart throbbed one evening at the tea table when he said as he slowly and carefully folded his napkin back into its original creases:

"Well, Miss Semira, I think that I must tell you that I have decided to make a change."

"In your business?" she asked with her eyes fixed on her plate.

"Well, yes; the change I have in mind will give me a partner in my business. But what I was going to speak to you about was a change in regard to my meals. It isn't altogether convenient having my room in one place and taking my meals in another. Moreover, I do not quite like being a mealer."

"Of course, if you wish to make a change you are at liberty to do so. I could not promise you any better meals than I have been giving you even if you stayed with me."

"I wouldn't want any better meals any place."

"O, thank you."

"The meals are all right, but I never before was what they call in this town a 'mealer' and I don't like it. I would enjoy my meals a good deal more if they were served by—well, by my wife. There! Semira, don't look so frightened! It is what I have been wanting to say for a long time, almost from the first meal I ate with you! Let me stop being a 'mealer' and let me be your husband instead."

He had reached across the little table and taken her by both hands and was looking into her face with shining eyes. Her eyes met his in a moment and he must have seen something of hope and encouragement for him in them, for he was by her side in a moment with his arm around her waist and his cheek to hers.

The next day Miss Doane received a call from Mrs. Sampson, who said:

"Well, S'mira, its turned out just the way Sampson an' me have been sayin' for two months that it would [illegible] an' I'm glad of it even if I be[illegible] somber. An', Lor, you [illegible] little [illegible] in

BAYONNE, NEW JERSEY.

Dear Sirs:

I take pleasure in advising you that the relief I have obtained from the use of Nujol is far more than what is ordinarily termed "satisfactory."

For years before sending you my order for a trial bottle of Nujol I habitually used destructive "pink pills" due to the fact that through lack of proper exercise I was continually constipated and a sufferer from other ailments known to result only from irregular bowel-action. I have taken three bottles of Nujol, and ever since I finished the first bottle my bowel action has been as regular as the rising sun, and my general physical condition is now as good as can be wished for.

In my opinion Nujol is a scientific cure for constipation and its countless other resultant ailments. I earnestly recommend it.

Springfield, Ill., January 5, 1917. Yours truly, (Name on application.)

Don't dread constipation; but don't neglect it. It's the poisonous root of scores of serious ailments. Do exactly what this man did: bring back regular bowel-habits with Nujol. Nujol gives you the quick relief you want without the least griping or reaction. Thousands know it is the safest remedy, for the body cannot absorb it. Quit using harmful pills and salts. Nujol makes you "regular as clockwork." Start using it to-day.

Boys for Farms.

An announcement is made by the Canada Food Board that, as a result of the enrolment week for the Soldiers of the Soil, over 20,000 boys have been secured in Ontario and the four Western provinces. If Quebec and the Eastern provinces do as well, 35,000 boys would be available as workers on Canadian farms. In eight cases in Ontario alone 100 per cent. of the High School and Collegiate boys enrolled. The Province of Ontario returns show that there will be a total of 16,700 boys for that province alone.

Story Told by English Girl About a U-Boat Captain Captured by the British

THROUGH the Manchester Guardian there has just been made public a story of the sinking of a submarine which has some dramatic features. The story was written by a girl who lives in a remote seacoast village. Names are suppressed, but the article is well worth while reproducing without names. It is as follows:

"At half-past ten last night I heard a terrific explosion, and, wrapping a dressing gown about me, rushed down to my father, who also had heard the report, but made little of it. However, a second explosion left him as excited as I was—even more so, for I had recollected to put on my slippers, whereas he left the house barefoot. We both ran down to the beach, where already the entire population of the village had assembled.

"The lifeboat was requisitioned, but to our shame there was no one present who could start up the engine. Then father remembered our two old boats, and forthwith these were manned by some eager boys.

"No ship was in sight, nor was there any further sound to guide the rescue party.

"For ten minutes we watched the boats moving to and fro; then arose a shout, a hail, and soon one of them returned in triumph; a man, almost completely exhausted, had been rescued.

"They helped him to the nearest house—ours. Father led the way to the dining-room; but sit, nor lie, nor speak, he would not until the coastguards and police had left the room. He was in a blue funk. Instant death he expected. We reassured him, however, and his terror gradually vanished, and he answered, or rather assented, to dad's questions. 'You are a German? A submarine officer? The captain? You were laying mines? When our doctor, a lady, arrived, she ordered him to bed. Liberal doses of brandy made him almost eloquent. He told us that he was captain of U——. Ten mines were to be laid between —— and ——. Nine of these had been successfully dealt with when U—— struck one of them and all lights were extinguished by the explosion. The captain at once had the hatch opened, the water rushed in with such force that he was flung out, the U—— being torn in two.

"Prisoner was visibly anxious about the loss of his boots. These were found later, and it is rumored his orders were stitched inside them. When his pockets were searched an Iron Cross was found. This he begged should be restored to him, and this was done. He admitted that when rescue he believed that he should have been shot at once. 'We treat German prisoners better than you treat us,' said my father. 'Don't believe all you hear about us. We cannot give them more or better food because we have not got it,' was the reply.

"Next morning they took him away. They raised the submarine. In it were seventeen dead Huns. They buried them at ——. Nine mines were found. One is still suspended from a crane on the pier."

A Bishop's Worries.

Speaking to a patriotic crowd from the top of a battle-scarred "tank," which was doing a roaring trade in war bonds, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Ingram, Bishop of London, announced that he had only £100 and that he had just received that sum for a new book he had written. As soon as he had finished his speech he said he intended to invest it in war bonds at the tank to encourage others to do likewise. Furthermore, he announced, his episcopal residence, Fulham Palace, was soon to be turned into a Red Cross Hospital, and he was giving up half of his other establishment, London House, in St. James' Square.

The bishop is used to being out of funds. According to his own statement, he has been in a chronic state of impecuniosity ever since 1901, when, from a suffragan he was promoted to a full-fledged bishop. He once published a statement of his accounts to show how difficult it was for him to make both ends meet on his salary of £10,000 a years.

Although a bachelor and a man of simple tastes, he was compelled to live at Fulham Palace, with its 44 bedrooms, maintain it in good condition, and not neglect the Scriptural injunction to be "given to hospitality." He hinted that he would much prefer living in a small flat at a much reduced salary. But he was not allowed to rid himself of his episcopal white elephant. Now that the Red Cross is to take it off his hands he may be able to save something out of his income.

One by Haig.

It is, of course, well known that Sir Douglas Haig is a soldier first, last and all the time, regarding all other professions as of quite negligible importance, a trait in his character which lends point to this anecdote.

He was, it appears, inspecting a cavalry troop, and was particularly struck with the neat way in which repairs had been made in some of the saddles.

"Very good work," he remarked to the troop sergeant-major. "Who did it?"

"Two of my troopers, sir," was the reply.

"You're fortunate to have two such expert saddlers in your troop," said Gen. Haig.

"As a matter of fact, sir," was the reply, "they're not saddlers, in civil life being lawyers."

"Well," ejaculated Sir Douglas, "how men who can do work like that could have wasted their lives over law I can't imagine!"

THE LEVEL-HEADED business man economizes in many ways, but he never reduces his newspaper advertising when he needs new business.

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble

Meat forms uric acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless, and makes a delightful effervescent lithiawater drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

Eskimo Superstitions.

It is said that the Russian peasant is among the most superstitious of all mankind; but the Eskimo, unChristianized (and this applies to all the Arctic Coast tribes of Coronation Gulf) has superstition woven into the very fabric of his nature. If he has killed a bear with a rifle, he must not kill a deer with it. He will not use an implement if a woman has stepped over it. A dead whale or seal, when brought ashore, must have a drink. If he moves into a house by the door, he must go out by the skylight. If a child has died, the father stands guard around the igloo with a snow knife, to keep evil spirits away. He will not drive nails at that time. If he wants work done, another Eskimo will do it for him. After the birth of an infant, the female has new clothes made for herself and the child of caribou skin. She builds a snow igloo and goes into it alone to bear her infant. Few have been known to die at this time. The mother stays in the igloo for a month; no one is allowed to go near her. After the expiration of the month, all the bedding and clothing she has used are buried under a stone.

Conjurers and medicine men give advice and cast out evil spirits. They are paid in skins, rifles, or any other article which comes in daily use among these people. Some of the "swells" of the tribe wear a belt with decorations of sealskin, ribbons of different colors and little dolls made of ivory attached. There is a goddess of the sea and a goddess of the land, both very large and very strong.

When a member of a tribe dies, only the next of kin will attend the funeral services. When they bury, if in winter, they take the body on a sled, conveying it to a small island or promontory. Here they build a grave of rocks and place therein the body. Just before covering, the lashing around the body is cut. All the effects of the deceased are left at the grave, and often presents are brought. They mourn for a month, and the nearest relatives abstain from meat and other specified articles of food during that time.—The Christian Herald.

NOTHING LIKE PHOSPHATE TO INCREASE STRENGTH, VIGOR AND NERVE FORCE

ORDINARY BITRO-PHOSPHATE WILL DOUBLE THE STRENGTH OF WEAK DELICATE, NERVOUS PEOPLE IN TWO WEEKS' TIME IN MANY INSTANCES.

Weak nerves quickly reduce the strong and robust to an extremely pitiable condition and rob men and women of all the joys of life. Slowly and stealthily the health is destroyed, the poor sufferer only realizing the magnitude of his ailment when faulty memory, sleeplessness, indecision, lack of energy or other unmistakable symptoms indicate weak nerves. Then it is a serious and dangerous mistake to resort to the use of so-called tonics, alcoholic or drug stimulants.

Weak and exhausted nerves need food and nourishment—not stimulants that lash them into temporary activity. The food and nourishment advised by present day physicians is just one 5-grain tablet of pure bitro-phosphate taken during or immediately after each meal. Simple advice, but its soundness has been proven over and over again.

Moreover the genuine standard bitro-phosphate is inexpensive and is sold by McDermid & Jury and most all good druggists under a binding guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

GIVENCHY.

Givenchy, which has just been the scene of severe fighting, is described in Lord Beaverbrook's "Canada in Flanders" as "another red milestone on Canada's road to glory." There in June, 1915, "the Canadians did all, and more than all, that was asked of them." It was there that Major T. W. Anderson, of Toronto, was first wounded. He was commander of the Third Battalion, and is now in charge of the Minneapolis Recruiting Mission. He is the son of Mr. T. O. Anderson, of Melinda street, Toronto. "The first battalion," says Major Anderson, "made an attack at 3 p.m. on that day. They took three lines of trenches and were driven back. We were supporting them, and at 9 o'clock that night we were sent in. We were fighting round a mine crater. It was more like a snowball fight with hand-grenades than anything else I can think of — the Germans on one side of the crater and our boys on the other. We were driven back after we had taken one line of trenches."

This was due to difficulties in other parts of the field that had prevented the 7th British Division from coming up in time. The battle is described by Lord Beaverbrook as "a considerable and sanguinary battle, the story of which should appeal to every Canadian heart." It was there that Pte. Smith, of Southampton, Ont., son of a Methodist minister, and not much more than nineteen, became, on his own initiative, almost the only source for the replenishment of bombs, and by one fine impulse became a hero. It is said that he was singing the trench version of "I wonder how the old folks are at home," when a mine exploded and he was buried.

"By the time he had dug himself out," says the historian, "he discovered that all his world, including his rifle, had disappeared. But his business training told him that there was an active demand for bombs. So he festooned himself with bombs from the dead and wounded bomb-throwers around him and set out, mainly on all fours, to supply that demand. He did it five times. Twice he went up to the trenches and handed over his load to the busy men. Twice, so hot was the fire, he had to lie down and toss the bombs into the trench to the men who needed them most. His clothes were shot into rags and ravels, but he himself was untouched in all his hazardous speculations, and he explained his escape by saying: 'I kept moving.' So through all these hells the spirit of man endured and rejoiced, indomitable."

It was at Givenchy that Pte. Gledhill, eighteen years of age, of Ben Miller, near Goderich, Ont., was lifted out of his trench by a German bomb, uninjured, and there picked up a rifle and fired away from his knee. He carried Frank Ullock, wounded, and dragged him by a wire lassoo, when he could no longer carry him, into a place of safety under a tempest of fire. It was there that brave deeds were done by the First Canadian Battalion (Ontario Regiment), the Second and Fourth Canadian Battalions, and where many brave officers and men were killed.

Why Not a Plebiscite?

"If the French and the Alsatian leaders who are advocating the return of Alsace and Lorraine to France without conditions are sure of the sentiments of the people of the lost provinces, why not a plebiscite? Would not that be the simplest and the easiest and the surest way of finding out the real sentiments of the people of Alsace and Lorraine, and at the same time of maintaining in the peace conference the principle of deciding the political status of 'the consent of the governed'? The plebiscite idea has been mooted by advanced thinkers and by Socialists, and was adopted officially by the Russian revolutionists. But an ante factum plebiscite, nowhere easy to arrange, is not at all feasible in Alsace-Lorraine. The arguments in its favor are wholly theoretical. The arguments against it are practical and, to those who know local conditions or take the trouble to study them, convincing. History has demonstrated that an occupying army can carry a plebiscite if it will. Even were both armies withdrawn, and the plebiscite conducted under neutral or indigenous auspices, Germany's facilities for espionage, perfected as they are in the Reichsland, would remain. With the future uncertain, fear of reprisals would prevent a free vote. Would it be fair to deprive exiles, driven from their native land by the consequences of the Peace of Frankfort, of their votes, and allow immigres, nine-tenths of them German functionaries or children of functionaries, to have a part in deciding the destiny of a land of which they are not natives and to which they are attached by no traditional or cultural bonds?"—Herbert Adams Gibbons, in Century.

SPAN OF LIFE GREATER.

The treatment of organic disease in ancient and modern times offers a curious and painful study, one replete with proofs of human credulity. It surprises the student to find that the earliest attempts to put surgery and medical effort on a scientific basis were made by the Arabians, the Khalifates of Bagdad and Samarcand distinguishing themselves in this way. Indeed the promise of that outburst of enlightenment in Mesopotamia and Syria strangely contrasts with the present condition of those Eastern lands which are now being rescued from Turkish oppression. In Cairo and Salerno in Italy medical colleges set up rigid courses and examinations, only qualified men being allowed to practice. Of course, crude methods of treatment prevailed; indeed for ages afterward the resources of the professions were scanty, often savoring more of magic and superstitious notions than of careful enquiry and experiment. Even Francis Bacon collected current recipes, the like of which are still to be found among our village dames and advertising quacks of the baser sort. Yet it is encouraging to find that human life has been lengthened in an increasing ratio. At the time of the Reformation it only averaged 25 years; in 1830 it reached 40 years, while today the life insurance companies base their premiums and benefits upon the assumption that a large proportion of those who reach middle life will survive for thirty years longer.

Fire Eater and Slacker.

Count Ernst von Reventlow, chief editorial writer of the "Deutsche Tageszeitung," and ardent supporter of most of the various forms of pan-Germanic ruthlessness, has been sharply attacked by some of his fellow editors in Germany, according to information received in Berne, Switzerland."

"As an author, he is a fire-eater, a raging creature of battle, who goes in for a war to the ultimate limit, or at least until the complete defeat of the British," says the "Neues Weiner Journal." "But even in the first few weeks of the war, when millions of volunteers were hastening to the German colors, Count Reventlow preferred to remain comfortably at home, although at the outbreak of the war he was not quite forty-five years old, and formerly was a naval officer."

Count Reventlow retorted by declaring that he offered his services to the naval authorities at the beginning of the war and appealed to the "Vorwoerts" for a decision whether he had been slandered.

His appeal aroused no sympathy, however, and the "Vorwaerts" merely expressed regret that the count's offer of his services was not accepted by the navy, and added:

"There exists a prejudice against persons who, without personally having felt the miseries of the war, propagate aims that lengthen the war."

Speed.

Under the head "Some Speed" the Great Lakes Bulletin prints this: "Our camp was built in three months," a soldier boasted. "That's nothing," the Great Lakes blue bragged. "In Captain Moffett's station they work so fast that a company that stops to rest on a drill field is often covered with a barracks or a drill hall as the carpenters sweep on."

TROUBLED FOR YEARS WITH BRONCHITIS

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup GAVE INSTANT RELIEF

Bronchitis is a disease which is very prevalent during the late winter and early spring, when there are sudden atmospheric changes. It is a condition of inflammation of the bronchial tubes which produces mucous or phlegm. This irritates the throat and causes you to cough in order to get rid of it. The cough may be tight or loose according as to whether this mucous is sticky and hard to remove, or soft and easily expelled.

Bronchitis is not really dangerous but the complications which are liable to follow makes it necessary to get rid of it at the first sign. This you can do by using Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. A remedy that has been on the market for over 25 years.

John D. McFarlane, Jr., S.W. Margaree, N.S., writes: "I was troubled for years with bronchitis, and could not find any relief. I was especially bad on a damp day. I went to a druggist and asked him for something to stop the constant tickling in my throat. He gave me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, which I found gave me instant relief. It is the best remedy for bronchitis I know of, and I now take care that I always have a bottle of it on hand."

See that you get "Dr. Wood's." Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c and 50c.; manufactured by the T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Overwork Paralysis

Doctors Said His Case Was Hopeless—Could Not Walk or Write—Speech Almost Gone—How Cure Was Effected.

ST. ANN'S, Ont., March 21.—Paralysis is far more easily prevented than cured. For this reason it is only wise to be warned by sleeplessness, headache, nervous indigestion and neuralgic pains and begin reconstruction treatment before the nervous system becomes too far depleted.

This letter from Mr. Hyatt is quoted to prove to you that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is effective even after paralysis has set in. It is not advisable, however, to neglect nervous disorders until such conditions are developed.

Mr. Avery Hyatt, Blacksmith, St. Ann's, Lincoln County, Ont., writes: "I am a blacksmith by trade, and ten years ago became afflicted with paralysis. I could not walk or read or write, and could talk with difficulty, so that it was a hard matter to understand anything I would say. Being only a young man, I was nearly discouraged. Two doctors told me it was brought on by overwork, and that my case was hopeless.

"One day my father read about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and advised me to try it. I bought 12 boxes, and when the fifth was used I saw that I was getting better. By the time the 12 boxes were used I was cured I am well and strong and working every day, thanks to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food."

This statement is certified to by Mr. Elmore J. Hodgins, J.P.

The Pesky Gopher.

California and other western states have two sorts of game that are always in season, says the Popular Science Monthly. One is the gopher, which is not a turtle, as he is in the south, but a burrowing pest; the other is the ground squirrel. Both are nuisances, and both are under the sentence of death when it can be executed. To help in carrying out that sentence, a western inventor has worked out a burrow gun. It has a cylinder containing a cartridge and firing mechanism, with a flat plate projecting from the side and taking the part of the trigger. When the gopher comes burrowing along, shoving fresh dirt ahead of him, he touches the trigger, and the gun goes off. This is hard on the animal, but affords keen pleasure to the boy who has sat by the mouth of the fresh burrow and waited for the wily gopher to make its appearance.

Asquith Claims That It Is Not The Business Of Parliament To Constantly Inquire Into The Conduct Of The War

"The House of Commons Has Had More Than Enough of Such Inquiries Already" Says Ex-Premier —Wants a Committee to Investigate.

MOTION INTRODUCED

Canadian Press:

LONDON, May 9.—In moving the motion in the House of Commons this afternoon for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the charges made by General Maurice, former Director of Military Operations at the War Office, ex-Premier Asquith said he thought it was not the business of Parliament to constantly inquire into the conduct of the successive phases of the war. "The House of Commons," he added, "has had more than enough of such inquiries already."

Ex-Premier Asquith denied that his motion respecting the Maurice affair was designed to obtain a vote of censure of the Government, saying it was absurd to describe it as such. Should he find it his duty to censure the Government, he said he hoped that he would have courage to do so in a direct and unquavering form.

"TREATED UNFAIRLY."

Premier Lloyd-George was cheered loudly when he rose to speak. He said he has been treated unfairly. It was the business of General Maurice to come to the Cabinet and point out where the Ministers had made mistakes, he declared.

The demand made by Mr. Asquith for a select committee was characterized by the Premier as without precedent in the history of the House. During the time General Maurice was in office and when he had accepted information, and to Ministers themselves, Mr. Lloyd George said he never challenged the statements of the Ministers.

Denying that the strength of the British fighting forces had been misrepresented as stated by Gen. Maurice, Mr. Lloyd George asserted that figures which he had given were taken from official records of the War Office. Since that time he had made inquiries on this point, he added, and the figures were not inaccurate.

$9,000,000 More Revenue From The Tobacco Tax

Tea Will Yield An Increase of $3,200,000 and Matches Another $3,000,000--Debate on Budget Closed Last Night---No Preference to British Tea.

OTTAWA, May 9.—Shortly before midnight last night the House went into committee on the resolutions of the acting Finance Minister. Hon. Mr. Maclean said the estimated increased revenue owing to the changes in the duties on tobacco and cigars was $9,035,796, made up as follows: Tobacco, $2,173,000; cigars, $719,456; cigarettes, $3,921,813; foreign leaf tobacco, $2,096,450; Canadian leaf tobacco, $224,750.

The increased revenue from tea is estimated at $3,200,000, and from moving picture films at $300,000.

The Government is counting on $180,000 from the tax on sleeping-car berths and parlour-car seats, while the estimated revenue from the tax on matches is $3,000,000. The estimated revenue from jewelry is $200,000.

Amendment of Film Tax.

Mr. Maclean submitted an amendment, which was adopted, providing that the tariff on cinematograph films should be: British pref., 2 cents per lineal foot; intermediate tariff, 3 cents per lineal foot; general tariff, 3 cents per lineal foot. From this source, the acting Minister of Finance said, it was estimated that the revenue would be $300,000, approximately. The rates of duty given in the original resolution were, respectively, 3½, 5 and 5 cents.

Mr. Maclean explained that the excise tax of 15 cents on picture films for each day used was intended to make up the loss of revenue which would result from the foregoing amendments.

Major Mowat urged that representations should be made to proprietors of moving picture houses, requesting them not to use films portraying the seamy side of American life, as was often the case at present.

New Tea and Tobacco Taxes.

The new tariff duties on tea, coffee, chicory and tobacco were expected to yield about $4,000,000. Of this, the ten-cent duty on tea was expected to bring in $3,200,000.

Replying to a question by Mr. Du Tremblay, Mr. Maclean said that the five cents per pound excise duty on Canadian-grown tobacco would be paid by manufacturers and dealers.

No Preference to British Tea.

Hon. A. K. Maclean, replying to a question by Mr. Lemieux, said the Government did not propose to give a preference to tea grown in British countries. The tax, he said, had been imposed purely for purposes of revenue. While there was much to be said in favour of a preference for British-grown tea in normal times, the growers would obtain little advantage from such a preference at present owing to the lact of shipping facilities. The matter might well be considered at the next session, he added.

Canadians In Another Raid

Infantry From the Maritime Provinces Find the Germans Reluctant to Fight

PRISONERS CAPTURED

(By W. A. Willison, Canadian Press Correspondent.)

CANADIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, France, May 9.—Early yesterday morning strong raiding parties of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick troops, entering enemy outpost line at Neuville Vitasse village, inflicted many casualties on the Bosche, and in addition captured prisoners and machine guns. They retired after this operation with very slight losses. Canadian artillery forces provided demonstrations to increase the confusion of the enemy during the raids of the Maritime Provinces infantry. Returning Canadian raiders say the only disappointing feature of the raids was the reluctance of the enemy to fight.

British Retake Original Line

At One Point the British Were Compelled to Retire Owing to Heavy Machine Gun Fire

A STRONG POINT

(United Press Service.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, May 9. — (2 O'clock Despatch.)—Counter-attacking stubbornly last night, the British recaptured their original line south-west of Dickebusch Lake.

To-day at the extreme right of this small battle front they were compelled to retire owing to heavy machine gun fire.

Fighting continues about a small pocket which the Germans occupy at a strong point east of Mille Kruysen (a mile north-east of Laclyette.)

Withstood Attack.

The French withstood a German attack almost completely stopping the storm troops on the east bank of the Vyverbeck (which flows north-eastward into Dickebusch Lake) and which the enemy was unable to cross owing to the field gun fire.

The latest reports show the French line intact, the Germans failing to renew the struggle.

At three o'clock this morning the Germans laid down a barrage north-east of Amiens. At 4.15 this sector apparently had quieted without any attack.

On the rest of the front, the guns were ceaselessly pounding. Near Bucquoy the British were slightly forced back from Pons, which they won yesterday.

CERTIFICATES ARE SHOWN TO POLICE

Marriage certificates and exemption cards were revised this afternoon by Chief Thompson or Police Sergeant Kidd as they were presented by quite a number of men who were unable to show the necessary civilian credentials to the Dominion Police. The wedding memorials were often ornate and invariably as fresh and spotless as when they played their little part in blissful unions; but the exemption cards, too large for the average pocket, were crumpled and torn. Both were efficacious passports back to the factories the police have visited.

Lakefield Boys Leave For Kingston

LAKEFIELD, May 9.—At noon today a number of Lakefield citizens congregated at the station to bid farewell to several young men who left for Kingston, where they will lost their civilian identity in the ranks of the Canadian Expeditionary Force. Among those who left today were Lavergne Walton, C. Murphy, F. Heard, S. Hockaday, R. Dunford, A. Graham, and Gordon Roseborough.

Reeve F. J. Moore was on hand to wish the boys good luck and a safe journey. As the train moved out Rev. C. Spencer and Mr. J. G. Hendron led the crowd in three hearty cheers for the boys.

MAY WEATHER THE STORM

Despatch Says General Maurice Will Be Court-Martialled—Record-Breaking Attendance

WILL HAVE ANSWER

(United Press Service.)

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, May 9.— (3 O'clock Despatch.)—There was a record breaking attendance in the House of Commons to-day as the hour drew near for the opening of the debate on the situation created by General Maurice's letter questioning the veracity of Premier Lloyd George and Chancellor Bonar Law.

The galleries were packed. Among the notables present were the Archbishop of Canterbury and Lord Stamfordham, the King's secretary.

COURT MARTIAL.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 9. — The Evening News declared to-day that it is understood General Maurice, former director of military operations, will be court-martialed because of his accusations against Lloyd George and Bonar Law.

NEW GOVERNMENT.

Canadian Press:

NEW YORK May 9.—An Associated Press cable from London to-day says, although indications are that the government will weather to-day's storm, it is interesting to note that for the first time in the history of the Lloyd George Government, inspired intimations appear in that portion of the press which supports the former Premier Asquith that in the event of the Government being defeated there exists "an alternative government to step into the breach." It is confidently expected in the same quarter that even should the ministry survive to-day its days are numbered.

On the government side it is assured that the Premier has some answer to the accusation of Gen. Maurice.

Personality Counts In Hotel Business

Fewer Standard Hotels Now Than There Were at the Same Time Last Year

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, May 9.—The Ontario Board of License Commission report that there are fewer standard hotels in the province than there were at the same time last year, but the decrease in the number is very small. At the time that the Legislature sat, there were 1,326 standard hotels in the province, and the number is believed to be somewhat less than this. In the opinion of the Board the general condition of the hotels has improved, as the proprietors now have to give more attention to the transient trade. The hotels that are doing the poor business are the ones that were not located to secure the transient trade but only to get the business from the bar. In even many of such cases the proprietors are able to do a fair business on account of their own personality.

The American Army In France Will Reach Two Million Mark By The End Of Present Year

United Press Service.)

(By Carl D. Groat.)

WASHINGTON, May 9.—The American army in France will be well on to the two million mark by the end of the year.

This forecast has added weight to-day from Secretary of War Baker's official revelation that we have now passed the 500,000 mark "over there."

Included in this are regulars, National Guard and National army forces.

The addition to the half million now there is being accomplished steadily. A maximum effort is expected to be reached this month or next, and to continue well along into the summer.

CHEERING NEWS FOR THE ALLIES.

It may not be said just how fast the troops are moving, it can be stated reliably that the present speed is several times as great as it was in the ebb period around February.

The British representatives here are greatly cheered by the way in which the Government, from its own reserves and with British aid, has been able to exceed the original progress.

Some military men here think the German drive now at hand is quite possible next to the last great effort. They said that, aside from a possible Italian offensive, they doubted that the Germans could keep up major tests much further, though they warned the cessation of such smashes would by no means mark the end of serious battling.

INTENSE INTEREST CENTRES IN CRISIS BROUGHT ABOUT BY THE MAURICE LETTER

The Lloyd George Government Will Stand or Fall in the Momentous Debate in the Commons This Afternoon ---The Concensus of Opinion.

UNPRECEDENTED POLITICAL EXCITEMENT

(United Press Service.)

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON, May 9.—(10 o'clock despatch)—The Lloyd George Government will stand or fall in the momentous debate in the House of Commons this afternoon on the charges brought by General Maurice, impeaching the veracity of the Premier and Chancellor Bonar Law concerning war matters. Unless the Government is able to reply satisfactorily, it is agreed that it means the Minister's resignations will be forced.

Both sides are lined up for the division.

After a day of unprecedented political excitement, politicians are of the opinion that the affair resolves itself into a situation such as is summed up in the statement if the Ministers cannot refute the charges, they must resign. If they can answer satisfactorily, there will be no ground for their resignations.

Press Comment.

The concensus of the morning press seems to be that the Government undoubtedly will win a victory upon the division. The action of the Unionists in deciding to support the Government, and the Irish Nationalists' evident refusal to participate, threatens the Government's position.

Lloyd George, Bonar Law and Sir Edward Carson undoubtedly will speak.

The Post, which is strongly opposed to the Government, says that the Commons will not kill Lloyd George to make Asquith Premier, but the debate will weaken the Government.

The Chronicle thinks the Government will win inconclusively, but will be weakened.

Intense Interest.

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, May 9.—The intense interest in the crisis brought about by the letter of Major-General Maurice is reflected in the morning newspapers. They give much prominence to prospects of to-day's doings in the House of Commons and the attitude of political parties toward the Government and General Maurice, respectively, and speculate upon the probable outcome. Editorially the papers again deal with the subject very fully. Opinion is general that if former-Premier Asquith forces his motion to have a select committee investigate the charges made against the Government by General Maurice to division, the Government will obtain a majority which some commentators believe will be substantial. However, views differ as to how far this will satisfy the public.

Intrigue Alleged.

Some hold that the verdict by the House of Commons in support of the Government will completely vindicate the Government and crush what they call the intrigue of Asquithian opponents. Others say that such a verdict will prove nothing except reluctance to oust the Government at the critical moment, leaving the main question unaffected.

THE BOYS ARE WORKING HARD

Watch For the Boys With the Red Triangle Button

The results of the boys' "earn and give" drive to date shows Vice-Admiral Foote promoted to the rank of Admiral, Admiral Browett being reduced to rank of Vice-Admiral. General "Moose" Canniff remains at the head of the Army, with Brigade General Parsons second in command. The Army still leads the Navy, but by a smaller margin than yesterday. The public will be surprised when the final returns are in, showing what the boys can do when they set about it. The fellows are really putting their hearts to the work, many of them are giving to both this and the "business men's fund."

Red Button.

Watch for the boy with the red triangle button, give him a pat on the shoulder and a kind word of encouragement, because his button shows he has made some real sacrifice.

Our "secret service" men report that signed pledges have been discovered in the possession of Donald Robertson, Robert Moore, Harry Nelles, Hubert Martin, Reg. Cuffe, Fred Brookes and G. Thorndyke. They further report that these pledges are going to be sprung as a big surprise tonight. Any fellow caught with more than fifteen signed pledges in his possession for more than six hours will be court martialled and shot at daybreak.

Get your ribbon and button at the "Y" or headquarters, Monarch Life Office and wear them. Red denotes Army and blue Navy.

BRITISH OFFICIAL

Germans Made Slight Progress This Morning North of Mont Kemmel

FRENCH OFFICIAL

Canadian Press:

LONDON, May 9.— By counter attacks delivered last night by British troops, the Germans were driven from portions of the allied front line they had entered on the Flanders front in the Laclytte Voormezeele sector. Further progress was made last night by the British on a front east of Amiens, between the Somme and Ancre rivers. Yesterday's attack on the Flanders lines was carried out by two German divisions who sustained heavy casualties inflicted by the British. This morning the Germans made a new attack in great force north of Mount Kemmel, making slight progress at one point on this sector.

THE STATEMENT FOLLOWS.

This morning the enemy again attacked north of Kemmell and succeeded in pressing back our line slightly at one point, where the fighting continues. Troops of ten German divisions took part in the enemy's attack yesterday morning. Heavy casualties were inflicted on them by our artillery fire as well as infantry fighting, both during the attack and in subsequent counter attacks.

LOCAL FIGHTING.

Local fighting took place also yesterday at Bocquoy, in the course of which we captured thirty prisoners. During the night further progress was made by us between the Somme and the Ancre. Our new positions in this sector were improved. Several prisoners were taken by us. Hostile raids were repulsed in the neighbourhood of Lens and Merris. Enemy artillery developed considerable activity during the night in Albert sector.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

Canadian Press:

PARIS, May 9. — Heavy artillery fighting on both sides of the Avre River on the front below Amiens is reported in to-day's official communication.

Spirited artillery fighting occurred last night north and south of the Avre. German patrols attempting to approach our lines in the region of Campelle Staignan were repulsed.

Twelve Socialists Were Convicted Of High Treason

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, May 9. — Twelve Dresden members of the Independent Socialist party of Germany, have been convicted of high treason by the Imperial Court at Leipsic, a despatch from that city to the "Vorwaerts" of Berlin, reports. They distributed pamphlets last year advocating the overthrow of the German Empire and helped to bring about the strikes of last summer, advocating them as a means of obtaining peace. They were sentenced to penal servitude for terms varying from eighteen months to eight years.

THE NON-CONSCRIPTION FUND IS GROWING

Special to The Examiner:

DUBLIN, May 9.—The attendance of Irish Nationalist members at the Maurice debate in the Commons this afternoon is unlikely, it was reported here to-day.

It was officially announced that the non-conscriptionist fund totals $280,000.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

THE CALL TO "B" MEN.

In connection with the drafting of farm labourers and farmers' sons, it would seem that the situation would be appreciably relieved if the military authorities postponed as long as possible the calling out of men from the farms who have been placed in Category B by the medical boards. Young men in this category are now being drafted and included, in their number are many bonafide farmers. The war situation, Lloyd George's recent appeal for reinforcements, the heavy lists of British casualties, all indicate the need of Category A men, fit for the firing line, but so far the government has failed to show any pressing reason for calling out men for non-combatant service. If the Forestry Battalions and the Railway Construction units are so badly in need of reinforcements as to require the drafting of all the Category B men in the first class, it would be a surprise to many people in view of the recent statement that the forestry corps is "ridiculously over-manned." In any case, whatever may be said about the relative value to the State of a young man on the farm, and the same young man in the firing line, certainly it seems reasonable conclusion that a man who has been brought up on a farm and has been continuously engaged in farm work could do more effective work in producing food than he could accomplish working in a saw mill in England or France, or employed with pick and shovel in a labour battalion. For the present at least it should be possible to secure all the non-combatant recruits needed from among the Category B men without drafting genuine farm labourers who come in that category.

COL. LABATT'S CASE.

The celebrated case of Col. Labatt, who is the possessor of a $5,000 a year government position as well as a total disability pension, was before the special committee on pensions at Ottawa the other day. The more the public hear about this matter the less they understand the system which makes such a condition possible. Col. Labatt was appointed to command the 4th Canadian battalion at Valcartier camp. It is stated that he was not in good health at the time. He, however, accompanied the 1st Canadian contingent to England, and in December went into an English hospital for treatment. The statement is made that he only visited the 4th Battalion once after that time, and the unit went to France in command of Lieut.-Col. Birchall, leaving Col. Labatt in England. In the 2nd battle of Ypres, Col. Birchall was killed and the command of the battalion was given to Col. Rogers, who left Peterborough in charge of the 3rd Prince of Wales Dragoons (note). In May, 1915, Col. Labatt went to France and took over the battalion from Col. Rogers. He was only there a few weeks when he gave up the command and was invalided to Canada.

It was shown before the committee that the Medical Board had found that Col. Labatt was suffering from heart trouble due to service, and he was recommended for and received a disability of 100 per cent., which, according to his rank, and including the allowances to his children, entitles him to $2,130 a year. In addition he is now a member of the Board of Pension Commissioners so that his few weeks' service in France have gained for Col. Labatt a total yearly revenue of $7,130.

It was pointed out at the investigation that "the amount of pension awarded a man is determined by his capacity to earn a living on the general labour market." In view of that contention how is Col. Labatt entitled to a total disablement pension when he is considered capable of filling a government position at $5,000 a year?

If not disabled why a full pension? If disabled 100 per cent. why a $5,000 a year appointment?

The private who has served many months in France, who is in receipt of a pension of $8 or $12 a month because the medical board has decided that his earning capacity has not been greatly interfered with and who notwithstanding this expert opinion, cannot return to his old position or find suitable new employment, is doing considerable thinking these days over the case of Col. Labatt. He may not object to a pension or to the position, taken separately, but when the two are enjoyed by a man whose active service consisted of only two or three weeks, the average war veteran is at a loss to follow the logic of the rulers at Ottawa.

AN EMPLOYMENT BUREAU.

The question of the converting of Canada's army back into civilian life is a serious and vital one. Already with the bulk of the Canadian forces still overseas, the problem is becoming more and more prominent as each transport from England brings to our shores another shipload of wounded and invalided soldiers, unfit for further service. To see that these men, as soon as possible, are assimilated into the business and industrial life of the country, placed in positions where they can maintain alike their self respect and their families should be regarded as a solemn obligation on the part not only of the State, but of the municipality to which these soldiers belong.

So far in Peterborough, the municipal authorities have paid no attention to this important question. It must be taken up sooner or later and some policy of assisting these men to become useful, self-supporting citizens adopted. With an investment of several thousand soldiers engaged in the war, Peterborough should regard these men when they come home as assets to be developed. If a manufacturer came along and offered to build a factory that would employ 75 or 100 hands, there would be little hesitation in accepting the offer and making concessions to the concern. And yet with hundreds of citizen soldiers coming back to their home town there is no municipal effort to see that they are placed in positions. If seventy-five of them cannot find employment here and have to go elsewhere, the loss would just equal the gain made by the factory mentioned.

There is a chance for the city to accomplish something along this line. The Great War Veterans' Association have under consideration the question of an employment bureau at their new headquarters, but are confronted at the outset with the financial difficulty of the problem. As the Association stands at present they have, out of their slender working fund—made up almost entirely of members' fees for the tag day collections are only used to relieve cases of distress, and cannot be touched for anything else—to pay the rent and other expenses in connection with their new rooms. In this respect they are different from the majority of other branches of the G.W.V.A. in Canada, most of whom have been lucky enough to have free headquarters provided. The drain on the treasury makes it almost impossible to pay a competent man to take charge of the proposed labour bureau and in order to make a success of the department it would be necessary to have an official continuously on hand.

As a business proposition the City Council might investigate the possibilities of such a labour agency. Handicapped as they have been by lack of a permanent official, the Veterans have been successful in placing in good positions a large number of returned men. Their efforts with a regularly organized employment office in charge of a capable manager would undoubtedly be much more successful. If such is the case, financial assistance from the City Council would be a good investment. If any institution such as is proposed could show results, and there is no reason why it should not, a grant from the city would be money well spent, for it would come back manifold.

Peterborough's returned soldiers were refused any municipal aid in establishing their headquarters, and therefore are not likely to approach the Council in regard to the problem referred to in this article. As a matter of fact such a step has probably not entered the minds of the officers of the Association and the suggestion that the idea is one well worthy of investigation by the aldermanic board is made without consulting any of the members of the G.W.V.A.

The whole question of employment for the returned man is one that cannot permanently be shelved by any municipality. If $400 or $500 can produce results in the temporary relieving of the situation in Peterborough, the Council would do well to give the matter careful consideration.

THE BACK YARD GARDEN.

There are people who scorn the possibilities of the back yard garden. These critics claim that the money and time spent on such gardening operations do not measure up to the results achieved. Such criticism should, however, not be allowed to interfere with the movement. It is the simple truth that the more vegetables are grown and used, the less wheat and meat will be consumed, and these are the food supplies that must be conserved for shipment overseas where they are so badly needed.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley in "Good Housekeeping" has the following to say about the Backyard Garden:

Many persons have made light of the back-to-the-garden movement in this country. The attitude of scoffer is no criterion of the value of the scoffee. It is no longer fashionable to despise the day of small things. The United States Government, spending $40,000,000 a day, is glad to get a 25-cent subscription to the Thrift Stamps. The useful cultivation of back lots and gardens in the city is quite as small in proportion to our agriculture's crop as the newsboy's 25-cent stamp is to a four-billion dollar loan.

I am well acquainted with the objections made to the city gardens, namely, that the money that is expended in working them would buy many times over the foods which they produce. I grant for the sake of argument the truth of this statement; but I call attention to the fact that if nothing was done with the back lots they would produce no food. I call attention further to the fact that food is about one thousand times more important in this country at this time than money. I call attention further to the fact that money was never so plentiful in this country as now, and food was never so scarce. If it does cost a dollar to produce 25 cents' worth of vegetables on a back lot, the vegetables are produced. I don't know any better way to invest the dollar than the city man has to spend than in making it produce twenty-five cents' worth of food. But really nobody should hire a hand to work his garden or back lot. He should do it himself. His wife and children should help him. Then the food produced will be paid for only in spare time and healthful labour.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Duke of Devonshire must have enjoyed his visit to Peterboro—he is coming back for a short time this evening.

Whatever may be the opinion of General Maurice's judgment in starting the present political crisis, there can be no doubt of his moral courage in writing his famous letter.

Nerve is a necessary qualification for the position of dog catcher, and the present incumbent of that position seems to be well supplied. After working on "piece work" until all the stray dogs have been corralled, he calmly asks for a regular salary.

Many people might favour the latter proposition if the official duties were extended to include the impounding of wandering hens.

Many Veterans would waive their claims to pensions if they could obtain Col. Labatt's position.

"Is the Government intent on crowding the long-suffering farmers into a corner, or chasing them up a tree?" asks a contemporary, forgetting that any mention of such things by another journal would earn for the latter the designation of "the party press."

The second chapter in the "red triangle campaign of truth" would be even more exciting if Captain Burnham could secure General Sam Hughes to collaborate with him.

It is a dull day when the former Minister of Militia doesn't put something original on Hansard.

Aliens who were denied the franchise under the War Times Election Act, and were excused from military service on that account, are now being drafted.

"The trade question never figured in the campaign in any constituency," says a contemporary. Neither did the liquor question, and yet it was the first matter taken up after the election.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Information Needed.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

If it is well for the Government to regulate public utterances, why would it not be well, also, for it to supply, as far as in its power, information that would help to prevent the public mind from becoming unsettled, either through legitimate discussion based on misinformation or from private thought similarly inspired? Should there not be more information and more complete information forthcoming from official sources?

Not Lawyers' Work.

(Toronto Telegram.)

One Canadian bugler in Flanders can do more towards winning this war with his actions than Sir Robert Borden, Hon. Wesley Rowell, Hon. Arthur Meighen or other civilian lawyers will ever do with their advice.

War is not letigation.

Nor can the issues of war be determined by the advice of lawyers or the platitudes of politicians.

War is life and death.

And the issues of war must be determined by the actions of soldiers and the power of statesmen.

The German God.

(New York Sun.)

No wonder the Germans have found it necessary to postulate a God of their own—a special and peculiar Teutonic deity — to justify their acts of barbarity and sacrilege. To recognize the God which most of us worship would be to fortell their own doom.

Imperial Liars.

(New York World.)

Holland admits German sand and gravel trains to her trackage for points in Belgium, on the understanding that only civil use of the materials is contemplated. Does any one in Holland doubt that Germany is perfectly capable of using the sand and gravel in trench and dugout work, and lying about it imperially?

Killing Germans.

(New York Sun.)

Obviously, this is the hope and it is the plan of the Allies—to kill more Germans, many times more, than they themselves lose; to let the superb German armies cripple themselves, then to strike back against the diminished enemy with all the power they have reserved to match fresh strength against overtaxed weakness. If this is in the future, in the making as well as in the planning, then all is well in Northern France.

Just Imagine.

(Brantford Expositor.)

If you have any doubts as to the value of the "Red Triangle" ministrations to the boys overseas, just imagine what would happen if the army authorities should issue an order excluding all Y. M. C. A. workers from the front! Fortunately such a thing is impossible, because the military bigwigs, from General Foch downward, would no more think of an army without the Y.M.C.A. than they would think of an army without a transport service.

Women's Work.

More than nine-tenths of all the manufacture of shells in Great Britain, declares Winston Churchill, head of the Imperial ministry of munitions, has been done by the women of England. Here is an example worthy of emulation by the women in the overseas dominions.

Speedy Times.

(New York Herald.)

It is difficult to believe that only ten years ago to-day the Wright brothers made their first short flight with a heavier-than-air machine on the beach at Kitty Hawk, N.C. To-day the skies over the battle fields of Europe are filled with airplanes fighting each other and from great heights dropping bombs upon the enemy, and workmen are preparing for the inauguration next week of the regular carriage of mails in the air between Washington, Philadelphia and New York. Truly these are speedy times!

Premier Makes Emphatic Statement

Sums Up Situation in Relation to Cancellation of Exemptions

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

OTTAWA, May 9.—"If a scattered and broken remnant of our Dominion troops, overwhelmed because it was not reinforced, should return to Canada, it would profit little to tell them that while they were being decimated our production had been largely increased." In these words, in the course of a statement to-day, Sir Robert Borden, Premier, sums up the situation at the front in relation to the order-in-Council, cancelling all exemptions in Class One, between the ages of 20 and 22. The statement gives no ground for the slightest hope of further exemptions.

Price Of Meat On The Increase In Peterborough

In spite of all efforts put forth by the local butchers, the price of beef will be advanced in a few days two cents a pound. This rise is not to be confounded with the former rise of several days ago, but is another distinct advance in price.

The present quotations run from 30 to 40 cents for the different classes of beef cuts, and before the end of the week, according to the Toronto forecast, these quotations will be jumped by two cents. The reason for the rise is given as the increase in the live stock prices, which are said to be higher now than at any previous time. Pork, veal and lamb prices will not be affected by the coming rise.

Romantic Leader of Sinn Feiners

THE slender figure of Eamonn de Valera, Sinn Fein leader, is thrown against the horizon in Ireland these days. The Sinn Feiners won several elections last summer, and there has been considerable disorder in various parts of the island. John Redmond's steady advocacy of the war cause, though now ended by his premature death, had a steadying influence, while the denunciation of Sinn Feinism by Cardinal Logue last December was thought to be a potent move towards a settlement. Cardinal Logue, the Primate of All Ireland, issued a pastoral in which he poured out his anger against "a dream no sober man can hope to see realized, namely, the establishment of an Irish republic, either by an appeal to the potentates of Europe at the peace conference, or by hurling an unarmed people against an empire of five millions under arms — a thing which would be ridiculous if it were not so mischievous and fraught with so much danger to an ardent, generous, and patriotic people."

Meantime, who is de Valera, whose leadership seems so to inspire and inflame so many of the youth of Ireland? He is member of Parliament for East Clare, elected last summer, and is described as an "American-Spanish-Irishman."

"He is most frequently described nowadays by others than his own following as 'the Stormy Petrel of Sinn Fein,' " says the Chicago Tribune. "Even before de Valera had won his sensational election victory in East Clare, where he captured for Sinn Fein, by a majority of 2,975, the seat that the late Major William Redmond, a popular hero, had held for the Nationalists, it had been predicted that this perfervid advocate of Irish republicanism pure and simple would soon supersede the venerable Count Plunkett as leader of the 'Ourselves Alone' party. This on the ground that extreme movements always advance at the gait of the quickest marchers.

"Now that in direct consequence of de Valera's triumph following the victories of Sinn Feiners in South Longford and North Roscommon, there is talk that the Irish Nationalist party may resign in a body and let the country as a whole express its opinion on the Sinn Fein policy, Count Plunkett's supersession by his younger comrade is virtually certain. That kindly, elderly insurrectionist simply cannot stand the pace set by Eamonn de Valera, the darling of the Jacobins of to-day in Ireland. De Valera will not even consider what, in England, is thought the Count's one cogent idea of an independent Sinn Fein representation at the world conference which is to endeavor to establish firmly the foundations of peace after the World War.

"De Valera's idea is that of an entirely independent Ireland, the world forgetting if not by the world forgot. In the contest that resulted in Eamoon de Valera's being elected to represent East Clare in the Imperial Parliament, the Sinn Feiners made no secret of their aims. They are out, in the first place, to smash constitutionalism, for which the Parliamentary party stands; and, in the second place, to wage war, until, as they themselves have put it, 'sovereign independence has been won by Ireland.' They claim, and the result of the last three elections shows that there is some foundation for their claim, to be the strongest political party now in Ireland. Unrepresented by choice at the Irish Convention, they will decline to be bound by any decision at which it may arrive.

"Eamonn de Valera, the new republican chief, was one of the few active Sinn Fein leaders who escaped the penalty of death after the Easter-week rising in Dublin in 1915, where in the disposition of battle he was commandant of the ringside area. As picturesque a figure as the romantic Countess Markievicz, he was condemned, like her, to penal servitude for life, and, like her, released in the general amnesty to Sinn Fein prisoners.

"De Valera's Irish patriotism appears to be all the more intense by reason of the fact that he was born in New York, and that his father, Vivian de Valera, was a Spaniard. His mother, however, whose maiden name was Kate Coll, came from County Limerick. America did not hold Eamonn long, as at the age of two he was taken to Ireland and dwelt with his mother's folk.

"As he grew into boyhood he took every advantage of the somewhat limited schooling available, and afterward he went to Blackrock College, where he was esteemed as much for his athletics as his scholarship. From Blackrock he gained a mathematical science scholarship for the National University. Mathematics is not romantic, but it had an overpowering attraction for the romantic de Valera.

"A more violent passion than mathematics, however, seized upon him when he took up the study of the Gaelic tongue. It became with him an obsession, which was not lessened by his marriage in 1910 to Miss S. O'Flannigan, one of the most capable and enthusiastic propagandist members of the Gaelic League.

"De Valera joined the Irish Volunteers when they were first formed, and later, when the split occurred, took sides with the intransigeants against the constitutional body, which followed John Redmond. Gaelic was then put aside as a central interest and de Valera took up military matters with the fiercest energy.

"Eamoon de Valera is thirty-four years of age. In appearance he has the ivory sallowness and deep, passionate eyes of his Spanish descent. He is very tall, very muscular, and full of nervous vitality."

Gardener Advises Citizens To Grow Small Vegetables

"Grow small vegetables, carrots, beets, parsnips and so on in the city, we haven't the help nor the time to do it ourselves," said a market gardener this morning, expressing the opinion that the country growers were not paying much attention to these crops. Last year, he said, they produced the usual supply but found themselves loaded up with small vegetables, due to the fact that their former customers had grown all they needed for themselves. They will, of course, raise some quantity of these vegetables, but it will be much less than last year. And the city gardeners are expected to make up the deficiency.

LICENSE OFFICIALS SEIZE LIQUOR

(Special to The Examiner.)

TORONTO, May 9.—The liquor license officials throughout the province have seized all the liquor that was left in the express offices after the first of the month. In some cases where the liquor has been seized the express company found that they did not have time to deliver it but in many cases it is believed that the liquor was being shipped to parties who were not entitled to receive it, and they failed to make any claim for it. Although the liquor has been seized by Government officers, they cannot confiscate it until they receive the right to do so from the local magistrate.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

15,000 Persons In This City The Estimate Of The Registration

Although the date of the registration of the men and women between 16 and 60 years has been fixed for Saturday, June 22nd, it is expected that a large part of the work will be done during that week. The employees of factories and stores, church members and other citizens will be given every opportunity of registering prior to the 22nd, and the bulk of the work should be completed before that day, thus avoiding congestion and confusion, and at the same time enabling the deputy registrars to make the work as thorough and as valuable as possible. It has already become evident to the first volunteers, the principals and male assistants of the Normal School, Collegiate Institute and Public Schools who met Ald. Dobbin last night, that the set of questions which each person must answer cannot be quickly disposed of if the full fruits of the registration are to be obtained. An estimate of the number of registrants within the city limits was placed last night at 15,000. This does not include the residents of the suburbs, those sections of the townships immediately adjoining the city, and virtually part of it. The information which each person must give cannot be disposed of in a few minutes, and it is believed that the assistant workers will do well if they can each register six or eight persons an hour. To facilitate the work, many booths will be provided throughout the city, and an army corps of workers will be mobilized, probably with a reserve force to be despatched to places where the registrants are reporting in numbers greater than were anticipated.

Ald. Dobbin, the registrar for West Peterborough, has lost no time in getting into action. He has not only made a preliminary survey of the city, but has also outlined the rural work, and should gradually enlist an efficient organization in this district.

No Commission To Munitions Board On Shells For U.S.

TORONTO, May 9.—Local munition manufacturers express surprise at, some even discredit, the statement in the House by Col. Currie, that Canadian munition firms obtaining orders for U. S. munitions, were required to pay 7 1-2 per cent. to the Imperial Munitions Board.

"We are just completing a contract for U. S. munitions and there is no such provision attached," stated a big munition firm in the city. "I don't think there is anything in the statement," said the manager.

"We get all our contracts through the Munitions Board, and we don't know anything about the matter," said Mr. Inglis of the John Inglis Co.

OTTAWA, May 8.—Canadian manufacturers who accept munitions orders from the United States are compelled to pay a commission of 7 1-2 per cent. to the Imperial Munitions Board, was the startling statement of Col. John A. Currie (North Simcoe), in the course of the debate upon the Budget, which was resumed in Parliament to-day, following a sharp clash between the Speaker and Sir Sam Hughes, who defied the presiding officer of the Commons to "name him." Col. Currie declared that he had been informed that a prominent Montreal man had a shell order from the United States, but before he could accept it he was compelled to pay a tax of 7 1-2 per cent. to the Imperial Munitions Board. "Nobody in this country has a right to impose such taxes except the Parliament of Canada," said Col. Currie.

Boards Called "Stoplogs."

He attacked the boards and commissions of the Government, characterizing them as "stoplogs" in the current of trade," and declared that the policy of the Imperial Munitions Board was driving Canadian manufacturers to the United States, several having already moved their machinery to the Republic and established plants there.

Don't Scold, Mother! The Cross Child Is Bilious, Feverish

LOOK AT TONGUE! IF COATED, CLEAN LITTLE STOMACH, LIVER AND BOWELS.

Don't scold your fretful, peevish child. See if the tongue is coated; this is a sure sign its little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with sour waste.

When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, indigestion, diarrhoea, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul waste, the sour bile and fermenting food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well and playful child again. Children love this harmless "fruit laxative" and mothers can rest easy after giving it because it never fails to make their little "insides" clean and sweet.

Keep it handy, mother! A little given to-day saves a sick child to-morrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages, and for grown ups plainly on the bottle. Remember there are counterfeits sold here, so surely look and see that yours is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Hand back with contempt any other fig syrup.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

THE POTATO PATCH.

Every prospective gardener must concentrate on potatoes this year. The most suitable soil for the tubers is a rich, deep, friable, warm, sandy loam with good natural drainage, a constant moderate supply of moisture, and an adequate supply of decayed or decaying vegetable matter. The warmest and best drained soils that can be obtained should be chosen for the early potatoes and the sets should be planted shallow so that they will get the advantage of the heat from the surface soil.

May 18th is time enough to plant your potatoes but in the meantime be preparing your soil. Get it as mellow as possible. While forking it over, add some stable manure. To obtain enough food to produce twenty or thirty bushels of tubers a small patch of ground must take up and evaporate through the leaves tons and tons of water. This water holds the plant food in solution. Your soil does not hold water and it should be your task to make it do this. The more like a sponge you can make it the better, providing the water in it does not become stagnant. If you add plant food to a physically fit or sponge like soil, good growth is bound to result. The value of stable manure is that it makes the soil physically fit and supplies some food at the same time.

I had no trouble in giving them to my baby and they have promptly cured her of constipation." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

HUGE CONCENTRATION OF TROOPS ON THE WESTERN FRONT

Mackensen is in Command of the German Armies in the Amiens Region—Germans Ready to Strike—A Curtain Raiser

Ten O'Clock Despatch.

(By William Philip Simms.)

With the British Armies in France, May 9. — One of the biggest concentration of troops ever assembled on any battlefield lies to-day inside the great bulge in the line which sags down past Arras, Amiens and Montdidier.

North of this, in the salient pointing toward Hazebrouck, is a secondary concentration, but proportionately important, mile for mile.

These are ready to strike.

Facing them are gallant French, imperturbable British and a vanguard of eager Americans, waiting for the show to begin.

Will Hindenburg hit against the Flemish hills?

Will he make another smash toward Amiens?

Will he hit southward toward Compiegne?

Or will he suddenly swerve to a totally different scene?

THE FUTURE.

The future will settle these questions, but the bulk of his army now appears to be opposite the two theatres named.

Apparently, there has been a shift in the German command. The indications are that Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria now commands only the fourth and the sixth armies down to near Arras. Mackensen is reported opposite the British right flank and is seemingly sandwiched in between Rupprecht and Crown Prince Friedrich Wilhelm of Prussia. All are plentifully supplied with cannon fodder.

THE STRENGTH.

Von Armin has some nineteen divisions (228,000 men) between Ypres and Bailleul (a front of about 8 miles) in the line and in reserve. Von Quast has thirty divisions (300,000 men) between Baileul and Lens (roughly, a 25 mile front). Von Bulow has fifteen divisions (180,000 men) between Lens and Bapaume (about 20 miles.) Von der Marwitz has thirty divisions (360,000 men) between Bapaume and the Avre river (about 25 miles). Von Hutier has thirty five divisions (420,000 men) from the Avre to the Noyon region (about 35 miles.)

These total about 65 divisions (720,000 men) in the line, and some 60 divisions (700,000 men) in reserve.

Simm's despatch would indicate that Mackensen, the conqueror of Serbia, and director of the last big Italian drive, is in command of the German armies in the Amiens region.

Under Mackensen, as field commander, apparntly is Von der Marwitz, whose control extends from Bapaume to the Avre.

Opportunity For Peterboro' Girls

Special Course Will Open in September Next

Mr. F. M. Dela Fosse, librarian, has received the following letter, which may be of interest to prospective librarians in Peterboro. The letter follows:

Department of Education.
Toronto, May 8, 1918.

Dear Sir: I am instructed by the Minister of Education to write to the Libraries in order to ascertain the probable number of Librarians and assistants that will attend a training school for librarianship, should one be organized, for 1918. The period to be covered in the event of the Minister's decision being in favor of a school, will be September 9th to November 9th next. The course will be similar to the one given last year. There will be no fees; supplies will be furnished free; railway fares to and from Toronto will be paid to those who complete the course. All candidates should have at least four years' High School training.

The Minister recognizes the great possibilities of the Public Library as an educational institution, and is of the opinion that its success depends largely upon the qualifications of librarians and assistants; therefore, he is anxious to encourage professional training by establishing a school for 1918, provided that the libraries are willing to send a sufficient number of students to justify the opening of a school of instruction.

Will you favor me by writing, before May 15th, stating whether or not your library will send one or more prospective appointees to a departmental school, if one should be organized

Yours truly,
W. O. Carson,
Inspector of Public Libraries.

Preparations Being Made For The Registration Of Man Power In Peterboro'

Teachers and Ministers Are Being Drafted Into Service ---Meeting Will Be Called For Saturday---Registration On June 22nd

The general work of organization for the registration of man and woman power of the Dominion in this district is going on now. As the work will be done largely by voluntary workers, and with as little disturbance to those engaged in occupations, a large number of people will be asked to volunteer services.

As was expected, and pointed out in the preliminary instructions to registrars, the school teachers of the city have come forward most loyally and will take up a material share of the work. On Wednesday evening the heads of staffs of the city schools, of the Collegiate and Normal school, met and broke the ice in a general way. Registration places will be opened in each of the schools, both Public and Separate, to be used both before and on the day of registration, June 22nd. Further on a list will be published giving definite directions as to these and other registration places.

Meeting Called.

On Tuesday evening, 14th, a meeting is called to be attended by the employers of labour in our larger industries. A serious responsibility is thrown on the employer owing to the requirement that he is personally responsible that all the employees on his pay list are registered. Certain penalties follow on non-registration, and these penalties fall alike both on the employer and on the workman. In the case of the workman, or any one, neglecting to register, he or she will be prohibited from going to work, to receive wages, to ride on rail way trains, to be received at hotels, etc. So it is of the utmost importance that the position in regard be fully recognized. At the meeting details will be stated with regard to the registration. In order to facilitate, and to avoid the loss of time by men engaged in these employments, registration places will be opened at factories, and registrations taken during the week preceding the 22nd June. This, it is expected, will assist in relieving the crush on registration day.

Ministers Drafted.

The Ministerial Association is being drafted into service. With the consent of the President of the Association a meeting will be held on Saturday afternoon, 11th, at which a part that the association and the churches can play in the general work will be outlined. The proposition is to have registration places opened in each church, that is in the Sunday school or other available place. These places will be in charge of church people, assigned to the duty, and it is expected that many will prefer to register at their own church instead of at the public places.

Then a further meeting is called to secure the assistance of workers whose services will be available on registration day. From this meeting a capable committee will be named to assist in the organization of the city, which will be an onerous task. The work will be very much more complicated than that, for instance, as obtains at a municipal or even general election, so far as the actual work of the day is concerned. Instead of marking a ballot, the applicant has to give, or afford, answers to thirteen questions. This feature will be referred to at length in further publicity.

Ladies' Will Aid.

The aid of the ladies has been bespoken. An able committee will look after the organization of meetings, of which it is proposed to have several, at which speakers from a distance and whom are working under the auspices of the Canada Registration Board, will address the public. Probably meetings will be held for women, to place before the sex a claim as to its duty in the lines of economy, production, food saving, etc. For men to urge a loyal and hearty co-operation in the objects of the registration.

From a computation supplied by the assessor, Mr. W. Henry, who has a very good idea of such matters, it is taken that nearly 13,000 registrations will have to be made in the city alone. The registration district, under organization and which includes the city, follows, in this instance, the limits of the West Riding of Peterborough, as defined for purposes on a Dominion election. Possibly, in city and county nearly 30,000 will have to register. All persons over the age of 16 years are included. Further on the figures by wards, in the city, and by townships, in the country, will be published. Based on the ability of the people who will work at the registration places to handle in the fifteen hours allotted to accomplish the work, it looks as if it would call for from 150 to 200 places. In the ordinary election these never exceed 40. So some idea can be had of the extent of the work that has ben placed in the community.

Full publicity will be given from time to time as to progress made. All arrangements will be made public to the end that things shall run as smoothly as possible and cause as little inconvenience as possible.

The Food Question Was Discussed By Mrs. W. R. Morris

Mothers' Club Met Yesterday and Listened to A Very Interesting Address.

RYE FLOUR

The food question was thoroughly discussed and looked into yesterday at the Mothers' Club of the Y.M.C.A. when Mrs. W. R. Morris gave a most interesting address dealing with the relative food values of different substitutes for flour, and ways and means of conservation. Mrs. Morrison, president of the club, occupied the chair.

Mrs. Morris said that in food conservation much depended upon the mothers of the nation. It is a difficult thing to reach every home in the country to ascertain the waste, so the situation really hangs upon the honour of the people. No matter how small the saving to-day, it can't help but do good.

Rye Flour.

Mrs. Morris spoke at length on the virtues of rye flour which she herself has used in bread, pastry and general cooking and found to be a most acceptable substitute. She quoted concrete cases of substitution where rye had been used and the consumers unaware of this difference, had been satisfied with the results. At Eaton's in Toronto, the chef, after experimenting for months, had produced pastry and cakes which the customers bought in greater quantities than ever before, unaware that they were composed of the once despised rye. The present crisis, she said, has educated us into a knowledge of the real value of what we once despised and considered useless for general cooking.

Reports Read.

The reports read were very satisfactory and showed great success. The recent rummage sale had netted $60 for Red Cross work.

Establish New Circles.

In the fall new Mothers' Circles will be established in the various schools of the city. The Queen Mary Circle, which is the only one at present in existance, has proved a great success, and the school was especially complimented by the Duke on the splendid way in which it was equipped.

Two Months' Work.

During June the Mothers' Club will endeavour to do two months work on their Red Cross allotment, thus leaving the summer free.

SUNDAY REFRESHMENTS.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: "Close the ice cream parlours on Sunday," but what about the workers? Have they got to be deprived because a man don't think it looks nice to have a refreshment on the Lord's day?

Well, then, does it look any better for the richer class of people to go joy riding on Sunday, and come home to their gallon of ice cream in the cellar, or their mint julip?

"A money making scheme." Well, give the man all the money you can, he earns it.

Given a second consideration, might it not be well, in the interest of the citizens of Peterboro to grant the privileges complained of? Yours faithfully,

Acids In Stomach Sour The Food And Cause Indigestion

"Pape's Diapepsin" fixes sour, gassy, upset stomachs in five minutes.

You don't know what upset your stomach—which portion of the food did the damage—do you? Well, don't bother. If your stomach is in revolt; if sick, gassy and upset, and what you just ate has fermented and turned sour; head dizzy and aches; belch gases and acids and eructate undigested food; breath foul, tongue coated—just take a little Pape's Diapepsin to neutralize acidity and in five minutes you wonder what became of the indigestion and distress.

Millions of men and women to-day know that it is needless to have dyspepsia. A little Diapepsin occasionally keeps the stomach sweetened, and they eat their favourite foods without fear.

If your stomach doesn't take care of your liberal limit without rebellion; if your food is a damage instead of a help, remember the quickest, surest, most harmless antacid is Pape's Diapepsin, which costs only fifty cents for a large case at drug stores. It's truly wonderful—it stops food souring and sets things straight, so gently and easily that it is really astonishing. Your stomach will digest your meals if you keep acids neutralized.

MILLBROOK EPWORTH LEAGUE MEETING

Encouraging Reports Presented at the Annual Meeting

Millbrook, May 9. — The annual meeting of the Millbrook Methodist Epworth League was held this week.

Carefully prepared and encouraging reports were received from the retiring officers. The secretary's report showed an average attendance of 31 for the senior league and 21 for the junior league.

Amount sent to Forward Movement for missions was $62.

The general feeling of those present was one of gratitude to God for his blessing upon the services of the past year.

Resolutions of thanks were carried to all who helped forward the work of the league during the past year, and especially to Miss Hampton for her untiring devotion in connection with the "ministry of the flowers," and to the editor of the Mirror for the very material support given by him in granting us room from week to week to announce our services and to reach the members overseas with a report of the meetings in this very convenient way.

A resolution was also carried expressing the sympathy of the Leaguers with the friends of the late Mr. W. D. Nugent, who was a much-respected honorary member of the League.

The following officers were elected for the coming year:

Hon. Pres.: Rev. Wm. Higgs.
Hon. Vice Pres.: Rev. Jos. Wilkes.
Pres.: Miss Stella Hetherington.
1st Vice Pres.: Mr. Irwin Hatherly.
2nd Vice Pres.: Miss Alice Stewart.
3rd Vice Pres.: Miss Stella Pethic.
4th Vice Pres.: Mr. Basil Richards.
5th Vice Pres.: Miss Burnham.
Rec. Sec.: Mr. Lloyd Byam.
Corr. Sec.: Mr. Bruce Dawson.
Treas.: Mr. Frank Alcorn.
Musical Director: Miss Ella Elson.

The service next Monday evening at 8 o'clock, is under the Missionary Department. Letters will be read from our own Dr. W. E. Smith, West China, and from Miss Hawken, who is labouring among the Ruthenvenjans in our Canadian northwest. There will be special music. Everybody welcome.

DON'T BE DYSPEPTIC.

The dyspeptic has thought only of the stomach when the real source of trouble is the Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills thoroughly cleanse and purify the digestive and excretory system and in this way put the organs of digestion into splendid working condition. A little patient urging on of the organs when sluggish will restore the habit of healthful digestion.

OTTAWA, May 8.— Out of 373,184 men who registered in Class 1 under the Military Service Act, 118,772 were found to be medically unfit for active service in the trenches and were placed in a medical category lower than A. This information was given Parliament to-day by the Minister of Militia, in response to a question by Mr. MacNutt. This means that a little over thirty per cent. of Canada's unmarried men between the ages of twenty and thirty-five might have some difficulty in passing the eugenic test.

93rd MAN IS KILLED IN ACTION

Pte. E. Peters, a former member of the 93rd Battalion, who was transferred to another Canadian battalion in France, is officially reported killed in action. His relatives live at Glenalda, Ont.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Pte. J. D. H. Wiskin, late of the 93rd Battalion, who was killed in action, May 9th, 1917:

We think of him in silence,
And his name we often call,
But there's nothing left to answer
But his photo on the wall.
We could not stand beside him
To hear his last farewell,
And not a word of comfort
From those who loved him well.
Often we pause and think of him,
And think of how he died;
To think we could not say good-bye,
Before he closed his eyes.
—Inserted by his sorrowing Father and Mother.

In loving memory of Driver David Eavens, who was killed in the Battle of Langemarck, May 9th, 1915:

And o'er the land where once the lilies shed
Their sweetest fragrance in the glowing sun,
Now rest the bones of those heroic dead,
Who gave their all that Freedom should be won,
Oh! brave Canadians, ye have reached the goal
Where Heaven's touch hath smoothed thy long repose,
Yet in the annals of Time's muster roll
Thy fame, they Mother keeps, O Lady of the Snows.
—From His Wife and Family.

In loving memory of Sergt. Walter Wagstaff, who was killed in France, May 9, 1917:

You are not forgotten, son and brother dear,
Forever you will be,
As long as life and memory last—
We will remember thee.
—Mother and Sister.

In ever loving memory of Sergeant Walter Wagstaff, killed in action on May 9, 1917:

I mourn for you, dear husband,
But not with outward show.
For the heart that mourns sincerely
Beats silently and low.
One of the best that God could lend,
A loving husband and true friend.
—Gone but not forgotten, by his wife and child.

Production To Give Way To Need For More Men

Premier Issues Statement Showing Necessity For Reinforcements and Killing All Hopes of Farmers and Others of Getting Exemption

A DECIDING FACTOR

Ottawa, May 10.—The Prime Minister in a statement issued, sums up the situation at the front in its relation to the order-in-council cancelling the exemption of Class 1 men between 20 and 23 years of age, inclusive. The statement reads:

Since the passing of the order-in-council of the 20th of April, 1918, empowering the Governor-in-Council to call out men of specified ages regardless of exemptions granted or claimed numerous representations have been received by the members of the Government expressing the view that the proposed action will prejudicially affect production in certain industries. Such representations have been received from those engaged in agriculture, in mining, in the production of munitions of war, in shipbuilding, in other similar activities that are important, if not essential for war purposes. The government weighed most carefully all these considerations before entering upon the policy above set forth. With a view to interfering as little as possible with production, and of providing men who would be most readily available and would be most efficient for reinforcing the Canadian army in France, it was decided in the first instance to call out men from 20 to 23 years, both inclusive.

ADEQUATE REINFORCEMENTS NEEDED.

The importance of production in the various essential industries and especially in agriculture, in munitions and in shipbuilding is fully recognized, but all such production is of no avail unless the Canadians' forces in France are sustained by adequate reinforcement. If such aid is not afforded the line cannot be held; and if the line is not held our production will in the end go to the advantage of Germany rather than the allies.

More than 100,000 Canadians are exposed to attack by overwhelming numbers and they will be exposed until the termination of the terrific struggle which began on the 21st of March last, which will probably continue for months, and which may be decisive of the war. If a scattered and broken remnant, overwhelmed because not reinforced, should return to Canada, it would profit little to tell them that while they were being decimated our production has been largely increased.

Those who have not been closely in touch with the purpose of the German offensive may fail to realize the tremendous development of submarine warfare which would undoubtedly take place if certain Channel ports should pass into German occupation. What portion of our production could then find a market in Europe would be wholly problematical.

There has been undue and unexpected delay in the operation of the Military Service Act from causes upon which it is unnecessary to dwell. If the Government does not strictly maintain the policy of abolishing exemptions in the ages called out from time to time, there will be renewed and perhaps fatal delay; for exemptions cannot be granted except after hearing and investigation will correct appeals, and all the loss of time resulting therefrom

The enemy nations are throwing into this war their entire available man-power, which has been organized for this purpose during the past 50 years and which is now concentrated upon the western battle front, chiefly against the British forces, which are under attack by an enormous superiority of numbers. In the midst of that titantic struggle the Canadian nation cannot discharge its duty unless its goverment provides the certain means of speedy and sufficient reinforcement. The enemy nations will not await our convenience; and their fierce onset is not stayed by any consideration of hardship, loss or sorrow entailed upon us by their effort to dominate the world. Supreme effort and sacrifice are called for. If we fail in these we shall fail in all else.

Asquith's Motion For The Appointment Of Committee Defeated In The House

Premier Lloyd George Says General Maurice Was as Responsible as Anybody For the Figures Given Out by the War Office—Figures Used Were Not Inaccurate.

QUOTED WAR OFFICE PAPERS

LONDON, May 10. — Ex-Premier Asquith's motion for the appointment of a select committee to investigate the charges made by Gen. Maurice was rejected by a vote of 293 to 106.

Lloyd George said if Mr. Asquith's motion prevailed he (Mr. Asquith) would be responsible for the conduct of the war.

"General Maurice was as responsible as anybody for my figures from the War Office," declared Premier Lloyd George, in replying to former Premier Asquith, when the Maurice charges were debated in the House of Commons yesterday afternoon. "General Maurice's action was unprecedented," continued the Premier. "He didn't act fairly. He should have made his charges before the Cabinet."

Premier Lloyd George was cheered loudly when he arose to speak.

Figures Used Were Not Inaccurate.

Denying that the strength of the British fighting forces had been misrepresented as stated by Gen. Maurice, Mr. Lloyd George asserted the figures which he had given were taken from official records at the War Office. Since that time he had made inquiries on this point, he added, and the figures were not inaccurate.

"Field Marshal Haig and also the War Cabinet, were reluctant to extend the British line in France, which was done in response to the very great pressure from France," continued the Premier.

"General Maurice made a flagrant breach of discipline," Lloyd George declared. "Mr. Asquith should have deprecated it. If this motion is carried, Mr. Asquith will again be responsible for the conduct of the war."

Quoted War Office Papers.

Lloyd George quoted a document from Maurice's department issued nine days after the Premier's speech confirming that the combatant strength of the British army was greater in January, 1918, than in January, 1917.

Regarding the extension of the front, the Premier said, Maurice was at Versailles, although not present in the chamber. The extension was never discussed there, Lloyd George said it being already an accomplished fact.

Lloyd George said the statement regarding three British divisions being in Egypt was made at a Cabinet meeting. Maurice, he said, was present, but did not correct him.

Asquith Responsible for Attacks.

The Premier intimated that Asquith was responsible for the persistent press attacks since he (Lloyd George) had undertaken the conduct of the war.

The demand made by Mr. Asquith for a select committee was characterized by the Premier as without precedent in the history of the House.

During the time Gen. Maurice was in office and when he had access to information and to the Ministers themselves, Mr. Lloyd George said, he never challenged statements of the Ministers.

WAR GARDEN BULLETIN

Practical Daily Guide For Vacant Lot and Backyard Gardeners Enlisted in Greater Production Campaign.

The GARDEN TRENCHES.

To sow a row of seed quickly, evenly and thinly requires care and practice. The beginner is very apt to be prodigal in his use of seed and to sow indiscriminately. This not only entails waste but causes overcrowding and corresponding injury to the plants. The top of the seed packet should be torn off and the packet held between the thumb and forefinger. By gently swaying the packet from one side to another the seeds will drop out. Another method of seeding is to place the seed in a tin dish and gather as many seeds as possible between the thumb and forefinger. A gentle rubbing motion of the thumb on the forefinger releases a few seeds at a time. Coarse seeds may be placed individually with the fingers. After the ground is fully prepared for planting a piece of board or a line may be used to make straight even rows.

In the garden trenches this year Canadians are going to give very real and substantial aid to their kinsmen in the trenches of Flanders. It is anticipated that $60,000,000 worth of vegetables will be grown in the vacant lots and in the backyard gardens of Canada this year, or twice the amount grown last year.

GRAIN MARKET

The options market closed strong in oats and corn. May oats at Winnipeg closed 1 1-2c up from Wednesday's close and July 1c up. At Chicago May oats closed 1 3-4c up. There was talk of a renewal of export enquiry for oats and spot premiums were firmer which probably accounted more than anything else for the present upturn in the market. July corn at Chicago closed 1 3-8c up. Local trade continues very quiet, and while Manitoba oats are quoted higher, Fort William basis, Ontario oats are weaker, and are quoting 1c to 2c lower. Ontario barley is also weak, and quoting 1c lower.

The Woman Who Changed

Simple Home Pleasures Allure

CHAPTER LXIII.

How the days flew. Nearly every one in town called to see me, and while I was flattered and pleased at their interest and welcome home yet I begrudged the time given them because it took just so much from the home folks.

David and I raced to the top of Brundel's hill, and of course he reached it first. Then he sat down, and waited, laughing, because I was soft, and "puffed like an old wheezy engine." I played blackgammon with dad, and auction with the older boys. I sat for hours talking with mother, while she mended the linen or while we both darned socks.

"There are always socks where one has boys in the family," mother used to say when callers came in while we were busy with the homely task.

All my favorite dishes were remembered and cooked for me. The church had a social, one night, and Mrs. Brundel—her husband owned the hill—told mother that the ladies had decided to have it that time because I was back home.

It was all so simple and homely; all so different from my life with George. Yet I loved every minute of it. Perhaps had I gone back for always I should have missed many things; the quiet village life might soon have palled. But it seemed to me that I never was so happy—so satisfied—as during that short visit home.

CITY CLOTHES ARE ADMIRED.

My clothes were very much admired—those which had not been made in Moreland. I had done as I planned and brought only two or three dresses, but my hats and coats were borrowed and copied by the girls with whom I had been intimate before leaving home. And the dear old dressmaker who made my clothes copied the dresses, I standing while she draped me in her tissue paper.

I told them all of my lovely home, decribing everything as best I could; of my cars and the servants.

"My, Helen, what do you do with five servants?" Olga Thornton, one of my girl friends, asked. "I should think they would be under your feet all the time."

"No—they are trained servants, and do their work very quietly. I hated it at first; but now I am quite used to it, and rather like it. My husband is very particular; he has been used to living in that way all his life, and it is a comfort to have the house go along smoothly."

I told them of the dinner party I gave, and of the other that George and Mrs. Sexton gave. But of Mrs. Sexton herself I said nothing, save only to mother. One rainy morning when she and I were alone I told her all about her. I told of how I hated her; how belittled I felt; then how I began to like her better when George left me alone with her.

"I understand, dear. But in a way I think George is right. You see, we have always lived so plainly; our home is so simply managed that, naturally, you were not quite capable of managing a home such as he has always been accustomed to. It was hard for you; but dear, you should always be very willing to do what you can in return for all he does for you. Not many little country girls have the luxuries that you have."

"I hated them, too, at first. It seemed as though I never would learn to please George. He made me feel so ashamed, so small. I tried hard, too. But I guess I tried the wrong way," I added with a laugh as mother looked worried. Then I told her of my little experience with the etiquette books.

MRS. MILNER IS AMUSED.

How mother laughed.

"You poor child!" she said finally. "I don't wonder that you were discouraged. These books may perhaps help an older person who knows how to discriminate; but to follow them blindly would make a girl very stilted."

"But I wanted so to please George. And I hated the thought of having Mrs. Sexton. It was just as though I were a child and needed to go to school again."

"Well, that's all over now, and I can see that you have improved in many ways. I notice it especially in the way that you greet the neighbours—in our poise when in company."

"Don't use that word!" I exclaimed. "If there is a word in the entire English language that I hate, it is the word 'poise.' It has been dinned sound of it."

"But it is necessary that you acquire it dear," mother went on, now talking seriously. "You have married a very rich man, a society man. It is your duty to make yourself a helpmeet to him. Just as necessary as if you had married a poor man. Had you, you would have expected to go without a maid, to do all the things the wife of a poor man usually has to do. Why doesn't a rich man deserve the same consideration? Think it over, dear."

To-morrow: Is youth an asset or a disadvantage?

A PRACTICAL JOKE.

Sir Sam Hughes Had Veteran Discharged as Punishment.

Sir Sam Hughes was accosted as an alien by a member of the Dominion Police at the Toronto Union Station several weeks ago, and held up for several minutes by an insistent demand that he produce his registration card. Sir Sam carried the argument, and the policeman, the length of the rotunda and down through the arcade, before the hapless plainclothesman realized that he had been made the victim of an ill conceived practical joke. As a result of the incident Constable W. Cook, who was in charge of the station squad sent there to detect defaulters and round up aliens, was summarily dismissed from the service to satisfy the wrathy knight, and Constable Kerr, who was the one to accost Sir Sam, is under reprimand. Cook is a first contingent man, and had seen actual service in defence of his country.

It is said it was suggested to Kerr that the fine martial figure of the ex-Minister of Militia resembled an alien and should be challenged as a suspect. Kerr made ready to make his capture, and as Sir Sam stepped into the rotunda accosted him and demanded that he produce proof that there was no Teuton taint in his family record. Sir Sam, shocked beyond speech for a moment because of the signal failure to recognize him, quickly recovered his poise, and with a power of speech seldom heard so clearly in a public place, drove a rebuke at the policeman and declared that he would carry his case for redress to the highest authorities. By the time the pair had reached the front gate some inkling of the true nature of the situation dawned upon the policeman, and he made profuse apologies as Sir Sam stepped into a car and drove off.

Inspector Thomas Flanagan, who went to England with the 186th Battalion, immediately discharged Constable Cook from the service through an order served by Inspector Taylor at the Union Station for "negligence in the performance of his duties." At the Dominion Police headquarters it was declared that the "joke" was inspired by somebody outside of the service and an expression of regret that a member of the service had fallen into such error was made.

PRODUCING FATS.

Great Scarcity Leads to Curious New Industries.

Scarcity of fats of every description has caused the creation of new industries in all European nations for the production of fats of every kind from sources hitherto considered unpromising. In Malmo, Sweden, a new corporation has been organized named the Aktibolaget Fedtindustri, with a capital stock of $1,340,000, to produce fats from bones or any other material that yields fat good enough for soap and other industrial purposes.

A corporation named the Hoganas-Billesholm Aktiebolaget is investigating an invention for producing aluminum out of the clay found in the vicinity of Hoganas, Sweden. A new factory will probably be built near Troilhattan, which will be able to utilize economically about 6,000 horse-power from the large waterfalls at that place.

For several months there has been an agitation for the production of dye stuffs in Sweden on a large scale. It is reported in Swedish papers that a corporation has been formed with a fully paid-up capital of $3,216,000, under the name of Aktiebolaget Svensk Fargamneindustri. The new works will have the service of a former representative in Boston of a large German dye stuffs establishment. The new corporation will be supported by a number of existing institutions in Sweden that sell and consume dyes and other chemical products.

One of the industries developed by the war is the Svenska Elektron, which was organized at the end of 1915 with a capital of $53,600. The capital is now being increased to $268,000 to carry on the additional business that is constantly developing in the silver and other metal specialties made by the company. — Commerce Reports.

Recognition.

The picture was Neptune with his trident.

Telegraphing.

In overhead telegraph systems, under practical conditions, it is found that about 400 miles is the greatest length of aerial wire that can be operated by means of double current Rey-Morse apparatus. The highest permissible voltage in use is 120.

Sleep Standing.

The elephant, apparently invariably, and the horse, commonly, sleep standing. Cattle usually sleep lying down, and during many hours of the day lie down.

Silver More Valuable.

The rise in the price of silver has given to the Peruvian sol a value in bullion greater than the value it has in coin and the result has been the disappearance of the coin from circulation.

Forethought and Good Judgment Used

Travellers show preference for Scenic Route; Busy Men use Night Trains

Nowadays, forethought, and a lively sense of public appreciation play an important part in the construction of a railroad. The Canadian Northern made a happy choice in the selection of its route between Toronto and Ottawa: skirting the shoreline of Lake Ontario and the Bay of Quinte; over the height of land between Napanee and Sydenham; and through Rideau Lakes region, adds zest to the daytime journey in Spring or Summer. Comfortable day and night trains, stopping at principal intermediate stations, have made the route very popular.

TO SUFFER FROM HEADACHES
Makes Life Miserable

Headaches seems to be habitual with many people. Some are seldom, if ever, free from it, suffering continually with the dull throbbings, the intense pain, sometimes in one part, sometimes in another, and then over the whole head, varying in its severity by the cause which brings it on.

The varieties of headache most common are sick or bilious headache, nervous headache, headache from constipation, debility or indigestion and periodical and spasmodic headache, and undoubtedly the cause must be removed before permanent relief can be had.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that has been on the market for over 40 years, removes the cause of the headaches, and not only does this but also restores the entire system to healthy action and buoyant vigour.

Miss Emily Smith, 204 Bellwoods Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Burdock Blood Bitters. For two years I was greatly troubled with violent headaches, particularly in the morning. I tried everything to cure me until a friend recommended B.B.B. I tried it, and now I am completely cured."

Petrograd Wine Cellars.

The Imperial wine cellars underneath the Winter Palace at Petrograd have been sacked, and nothing remains of what was the largest and finest collection in the world of the very best wines of the choicest growths of the most famous years. A great deal had been quietly stolen during the last six months by enterprising patriots, and in the end the soldiers on guard obtained possession of the cellars, and were joined by a huge mob recruited from the dregs of the populace. Tens of thousands of bottles were destroyed, and the floors of the immense cellars were knee-deep in liquor, the end of the orgies being that muddy water from the Neva was pumped into the cellars, after which the mixture of wine and water was pumped back into the river. Thousands of bottles were fired upon to facilitate the destruction. Numbers of the rioters are reported to have been drowned, as they were lying dead drunk on the floors of the cellars in heaps.—London Truth.

Rules for War Horses.

The acting commanding general of the Sixth Army Corps in Breslau in an order now made public has forbidden the keeping of horses for pleasure. The order forbids, for the territory in which the corps is located, the possession of all horses which are not actually needed in connection with war industries, in trade, business, manufactures, or farming, and especially those which are kept merely for convenience or pleasure. The order does not apply to horses under four years of age, however, because up to that time edges of horses' front teeth have not begun to rub together; it does not apply to horses used exclusively for breeding purposes, to riding-school horses which are used as a means of livelihood, or to race horses whose worth in times of peace is entirely beyond the price possible to allow for them.—Deutsche Tageszeitung, Nov. 23, 1917.

OUR DEFENSE

In the spring we may be attacked at any moment. Toxic poisons pile up within us after a hard winter, and we feel "run-down," tired out, blue and discouraged. This is the time to put our house in order—cleanse the system and put fresh blood into our arteries. You can obtain an alterative extract from Blood root, Golden Seal, Stone and Queen's root, Cherry bark, rolled into a sugar-coated tablet and sold by most druggists, in fifty-cent vials, as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This blood tonic, in tablet or liquid form, is just what you need for "Spring Fever," for that lack of ambition. It will fill you full of vim, vigor and vitality.

LINDSAY, ONTARIO.—"When my little daughter was five years old her liver was so sluggish that I feared she might be troubled with habitual constipation. I had read a great deal about Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and decided to try it with her, giving her small doses. I found that it not only helped her liver but it also proved to be a splendid tonic, as well. It was such a splendid medicine that I would never hesitate to give it to her again if she needed it, and I take pleasure in recommending it to other mothers whose little ones seem to need a liver regulator and blood maker."—Mrs. LOUISA BEACH, Box 113.

Gallant Young Italian Caught Teutons Napping And Scored a Triumph

At about the time the invading Austro-German army reached the Piave river, the Germans had their newspapers say that the Austrian navy was going to do something, and more specifically, that two battleships which had been in the harbor of Triest for so long that grounding on their own beef bones seemed imminent, would really come out and help the Huns take Venice.

Just how that was to be done was not explained, nor was it made clear in what way the much more powerful Italian dreadnoughts, which were still persistently lingering in the vicinity of the port, were to be disposed of. The two ships selected for the task, the Wien and the Monarch, were sister vessels of 5,512 tons each, built in 1895; but this pair having never done anything were well preserved, and while they both could, of course, be easily annihilated by the Italian Giulio Cesare, for example, long before they could get near enough to the Cesare for their guns to reach her, still they might be formidable against gondolas.

Meanwhile the Italian aviators in going to and from their regular daily job of dropping bombs on the Austrian ships in Pola and Fiume had observed that the Wien and the Monarch were in a slip between two of the three long piers which jut into the harbor of Triest, that not only were they protected by mine fields and fortifications, but that no less than eight steel cables were stretched across the entrance of the slip. Furthermore, to these cables were connected mines liable to blow up if the cables were unduly jarred by collision with them.

Then followed not only the most daring single naval episode of the war, but an achievement of distinct military importance, and not to be dismissed solely with the usual tributes to personal gallantry. A dark and misty night was selected for the work. From the division of Italian torpedo boats which silently stationed itself in front of the port, two small, recently built and very swift craft were chosen. Lieut. Rizzo, a Sicilian, but thirty years old, was given command of both.

A little after midnight, the boats crept into the harbor mouth. The mist dimmed the Austrian searchlights, and the small draft of water of the vessels enabled them to avoid mines which would have been fatal to heavier ships. One of the side piers was reached without detection and found unguarded. Even with the powerful tools provided, it was a dangerous thing slowly to cut cables which if unduly shaken, might explode a whole series of mines. Nevertheless, this was done, even when it became necessary to grapple five of the hawsers which were under water, bring them to the surface and divide them strand by strand.

At length the cables gave way, the mines and nets supported by them sank to the bottom and there was open water straight to the Wien and the Monarch. The boats sped into it. A moment later two torpedoes from Rizzo's boat struck the Wien, which sank instantly. His quick signal to the following boat released two more, which wrecked the Monarch.

The explosions suggested to the Austrians that there was trouble somewhere. It could not be in the harbor, because of the impregnable cables and the mines. Therefore, they argued it must come from the air, as usual. Then the heavens were lit up with the glare of countless electric beams and light bombs, and the airship guns shelled the clouds, and the other Austrian vessels in the harbor, not seeing anything to fire at, enthusiastically bombarded the Adriatic.

But all this was harmless to Rizzo and his men. As the torpedoes struck home, Rizzo's crew shouted. And as their boats ran out of danger, they sang as only Italians can.

HOW THIS NERVOUS WOMAN GOT WELL

Told by Herself. Her Sincerity Should Convince Others.

Christopher, Ill.—"For four years I suffered from irregularities, weakness, nervousness, and was in a run down condition. Two of our best doctors failed to do me any good. I heard so much about what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for others, I tried it and was cured. I am no longer nervous, am regular, and in excellent health. I believe the Compound will cure any female trouble."—Mrs. ALICE HELLER, Christopher, Ill.

Nervousness is often a symptom of weakness or some functional derangement, which may be overcome by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as thousands of women have found by experience.

If complications exist, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for suggestions in regard to your ailment. The result of its long experience is at your service.

Grow More Potatoes.

Following the announcement made by Sir William Hearst some time ago that the farmers of Northern Ontario would be encouraged to grow potatoes for seed the first shipment of five carloads of New Brunswick potatoes is on its way. Observations made by the experts of the Ontario Agricultural College show that the best seed potatoes are grown in these northern districts. Representatives of the Department of Agriculture have gone through Muskoka, Parry Sound, Rainy River, Thunder Bay and Nipissing districts and the settlers have agreed to co-operate.

The plan is to have a number of settlers in each locality get together to insure the delivery of seed potatoes in carload lots, and to these groups the potatoes will be furnished by the Department at cost.

Heart Beat So Fast

Could Not Sleep

HAD TO SIT UP IN BED

Heart trouble has of late years become very prevalent. Sometimes a pain catches you in the region of the heart, now and then your heart skips beats, palpitates, throbs, or beats with such rapidity and violence you think it will burst. You have weak and dizzy spells, are nervous, irritable and depressed, and if you attempt to walk upstairs or any distance you get all out of breath.

There is no other remedy will do you so much good, restore your heart to a natural condition, build up your strength and give you back vigor and vitality as Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. A. Russell, Niagara Falls, Ont., writes: "At nights I could not sleep, and had to sit up in bed, my heart would beast so fast.

"When I went to walk very far I would get all out of breath, and would have to sit down and rest before I could go any further. I was advised to get Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and before I had used two boxes I could sleep and walk as far as I liked without any trouble."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

A Public Man With Ideals

WHAT manner of man is William F. Nickle, the Kingston M.P. who introduced the resolution in the House of Commons asking that in future no hereditary titles be conferred in Canada, "or any title of honor that will be held or can be used by, or which will confer any title or honor upon, any person other than the person in recognition of whose services the honor or title has been conferred," and who succeeded in drawing from Premier Borden an announcement that practically all he asked for had practically been put into effect by order-in-Council? asks the Toronto Star, a Liberal paper.

William Folger Nickle is a mixture of Sir Galahad, Don Quixote, and a shrewd small-town lawyer, if we may apply the first title without offending him. This is not intended in any derogatory sense. In spite of his forty-eight years — which are more than he looks—and in spite of his experience in law and in the Legislature of Ontario, he still has ideals; ideals of public service; ideals of the rights of the public and the duties of the public's representative; and ideals of public morality which he refuses to subjugate. He is a bit Quixotic in that he has always an eye alert for suitable adversaries and will ride as hard against an iniquitous bake-shop law as against the highest windmill in the land. But he has no Sancho. He rides alone.

Born in Kingston in 1869, he set about at an early date to find wherewithal he might engage his energies. His father was William Nickle, a Scotch Canadian. His mother was Ellen Mary Folger, of American abstraction. The dogged tenacity of the one and the fruitfulness of the other were commoned in him in rare proportion. All his education he obtained in Kingston, except his law studies at Osgoode Hall following his course at Queen's. He subdued the law sufficiently to make it support him. He assailed city politics and became a councillor. He became governor of the hospital, governor of the School of Mining and Agriculture, a member of the School Board, and finally a member of the Ontario Legislature. His seat in that place he held between 1908 and 1911.

Being a man of family, with a wife and children, with a great flower garden and a pigeon-loft, and a carriage and pair for going to church on Sundays, he began to take a keen interest in all legislation affecting babies and mothers, and homes. The Government appointed a milk commission, and Nickle was one of the busiest members on it, gathering information and making deductions that would prove useful to milk producers and milk consumers alike. Meantime Toronto bakers had been coming in conflict with the law in regard to the varying weights of loaves of bread. The law was not clear, and Nickle proceeded to have it made clear. He introduced and secured legislation fixing the weights of loaves so that people could always tell just what they were getting for their money. Having done this, and voted for whatever measures he thought were not good, he returned to Kingston, and stood for election to the House of Commons in the fall of 1911, and was elected.

Since then his field of operations has been Ottawa and the sweep of his vision wider. When the Finance Minister proposed reimbursing Farmers Bank depositors, Nickle rose from the benches behind the Minister and denounced the Minister's course! Yet it had all been fixed in the caucus. It was part of the party program, and as such should have been supported by every Conservative —according to the rules of the political game.

He also caused a sensation at Ottawa by openly opposing the late Government's grants to the Canadian Northern Railway, after he had unsuccessfully tried to defeat the proposal in party caucus. And he went after Mackenzie and Mann without gloves, denouncing them as wealthy plutocrats who "dared to lay their hands upon the throats of the representatives of the people and tell them what they must do." He was a new type of politician who put what is best and most desirable for his country before party loyalty. It was only natural that such a man should have resigned his nomination as Conservative candidate prior to the last election, and should have urged upon the people to forget their past differences, and unite in selecting a man who commanded the support of all, who would place first the promotion of the war and the enforcement of the Military Service Act. And it was likewise only natural that the Liberals and Conservatives of Kingston should decide that Mr. Nickle was the best man in sight for the job. Consequently he was nominated as Union candidate, and elected by a tremendous majority.

New Knitting Needle.

The newest sort of knitting needle is a strange-looking contraption that would have bewildered great-grandmother, one feels sure; but then she probably never dropped stitches. She had plenty of time to turn off the family mufflers, eartabs and socks, whereas her great-granddaughter, having hurried through the process of learning to knit, feels that she must accomplish several sweaters and other knitted garments every month to keep up with the fashionable war-time pace.

The new knitting needle is a sort of boomerang affair — it curves around and ends at its starting point. In other words, it is circular, its pointed ends meeting where the circle is cut through. The needle is made of amber composition, and is extremely flexible. One knits perfectly easily with the ends while the stitches, pushed around the circle as one proceeds, are never in danger of slipping off and being "dropped."

NOISES IN EARS, TWITCHING NERVES

Told of the Exhausted Condition of the Nerves—Indigestion and Weak Heart Action Were Other Symptoms.

KINGSTON, Ont., March 22.—There are few people in this city who are not acquainted with the exceptional restorative power of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Reports have come from almost every street of the Limestone City telling of cures effected by this treatment, and the druggists have been surprised at the enormous demand for this great nerve restorative.

This is not to be wondered at when cure is effected in such extreme and complicated cases as the one described in this letter

Mrs. M. A. Couling, 61 Stanley street, Kingston, Ont., writes:

"For a number of years I suffered from a rundown condition of the system, due to overwork. I could not sleep and was restless and worried. I had pains through my back, buzzing in the ears and twitching of my nerves and muscles. I had indigestion and my appetite became poor. I would get drowsy after eating and frequently suffered from great weakness. My circulation was poor, my hands and feet always cold and my heart action weak. I consulted doctors, but they could do nothing for me. Whilst in this condition I decided upon a trial of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. After taking eight boxes of this medicine I am relieved of all the symptoms from which I suffered before, and in general I feel like a new woman. I used to be very constipated so I took Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in connection with the Nerve Food, and am completely cured of that trouble, too."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50c. a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.75, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Rubbing It In.

Harry Lauder turned up for supper at a Chicago club with a rose in his buttonhole. "Is that a new thistle you've got there, Mr. Lauder?" said a humorist. "Hoot, mon," said the Scot, "ony flower is a thistle to a donkey." When the mughter had died down, the humorist said: "After such a nasty one as that, Mr. Lauder, you might give me the flower." "Hech, what's the use?" said Lauder. "Ye'd only eat it."

Jesus faces the Cross: Mark 10:32-52.

Golden Text: He humbled himself, becoming obedient even unto death, yea the death of the cross. Phil. 2: 8.

1. Verse 32. May we or not arrive at a condition in this life when no event will be able to "amaze" or make us "afraid"? Why?

2. Why should you say or not, that Jesus knew from the beginning of his coming rejection by the Jews; and why did he not refer to it until the last year of his ministry?

3. Verses 33, 34. Did Jesus plan to have them reject him or did he do his best to have them accept him? Why?

4. Verse 35. Why is it that really good people sometimes manifest a spirit of selfishness in their prayers?

5. Verse 36, 37. Why is there any danger or not, that God will ever answer a prayer that would be hurtful, if prayed by a good man?

6. Verse 38. Why was the prayer of James and John impossible of answer?

7. Verse 39. Would you say or not, and why that suffering is just as certain to-day as in that day if we would be true disciples of Jesus

8. Verse 40. What class of people will sit the nearest to Jesus in the kingdom of heaven?

9. Verse 41. Were the ten blameworthy or not, and why, for being so much displeased with James and John?

10. Verses 42-44. Why has a bishop or a popular pastor, or an extensive employer of labor, any right to feel that he is a superior being to the humblest good man in the community?

11. Verse 45. What would you say is the chief characteristic of Jesus, and why?

12. Verse 46. It is a crime to beg in most civilized countries; does that imply and why that the state is under obligation to support those who cannot support themselves?

13. What good reason is there why any man in this country, in health, should be in a condition of want?

14. Verse 47. What is our limit (if any) in asking God to supply our needs? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

15. Verse 47. What is the ground for assurance that God in some gracious way answers every persistent prayer?

16. If Bartimaeus had stopped praying with his first petition, is it likely or not, that Jesus would have called him?

17. Verse 49. What lesson may we learn from those who tried to stop the boisterous petitions of this blind man, and when his prayer was answered, congratulated him?

18. Verse 49. Of what service are merely formal prayers?

19. Verse 50. When our prayers are for a life and death matter, like the salvation of our souls, what should we be willing to "cast away" in order to have our prayer answered?

20. Verse 51. The Lord knows all we need, but why does he generally require us to present our specific wants to him before he supplies them?

21. Verse 52. When our prayers are answered what effect does that have upon our attachment to Jesus?

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE TRINITY CHURCH LADIES' AID

Officers Were Elected For the Year—Secretary's Report Indicates Substantial Progress

At the annual meeting of Trinity Church Ladies' Aid Tuesday afternoon the following officers were elected:

President—Mrs. Cruikshank.
Vice-Pres.—Mrs. Robt. Neill.
Secretary—Mrs. Watts.
Treasurer—Miss Mathers.

The society expressed deep gratitude to the retiring officers for their faithful services, namely: Mrs. Morley Lyle, for three years as president; Mrs. R. F. Downey, two years as secretary and Mrs. Mary B. Lyle, retiring after twenty-five years of very faithful and efficient service as treasurer.

The secretary and treasurer gave their reports of the year's work.

Report By Secretary.

The Ladies' Aid of Trinity Church reaches to-day the second milestone in its history.

During the year the regular meetings were held each month with an average attendance of eighteen members. At the beginning of the year the membership roll registered 110 names; to-day we have 114. To old and new members we wish a prosperous and busy new year in the work of the Aid.

Owing to the dark cloud hanging over our country, our city, and our church, we have become a more sober, serious and thoughtful people and hence the Aid dispensed with the usual round of social functions. Nevertheless, quiet, earnest work, in which every member stood shoulder to shoulder has a reward of a substantial war time treasury.

A sale of second hand clothing with a tea room as an annex was held in April. The Thanksgiving canvass supplemented by a sermon from our pastor Dr. J. P. Wilson, and energetic workers showed the Aid, that its work was appreciated.

Our president represented us at a tea given by the Local Council of Women and Mrs. Stevenson of the Council addressed the Aid on "Equal Franchise."

We bade farewell to two of our members, Mrs. Frowde and Mrs. Howard. Both of these ladies are very much missed but we feel sure that our loss is gain to some other Ladies' Aid.

A unique and novel evening was enjoyed when the Cafeteria Tea was given. The gentlemen very kindly assisted us and showed their ability to serve as well as to be served.

"Lonely hearts were cheered" by flowers sent, accompanied by a message of love and sympathy.

The "Shut-ins" of the church were especially grateful for their Christmas greetings and plant. To us who are comparatively well these are little things, but oh, how much they mean to those who are in sorrow and pain. We are sure that not one member of the Aid would wish to deprive any of these little gifts of cheer and some hearts are very sore just now.

Reverently we speak of the mantle of bereavement that has spread its folds over the Aid. The silver chord has snapped and only the sweet memory of Mrs. Mathers and Miss Benson remains. Just two broken links in our membership roll but alas! how many of our members have been bereft of dear ones "Somewhere in France." Without further words let us commend the sorrowing and the anxious ones to the care of our loving Heavenly Father.

"They have wandered into an unknown land,
And left us dreaming how very fair;
It needs must be, since they linger there."

I thank you ladies, for the honour of being your secretary for the past two years.

Annie M. Downey.

MULE SHOE ROUTE

Gravity Scheme Invented by Miners of Tennessee.

Devise Mountain T-Rail Toboggan Which Takes Them to Shaft Openings in a Hurry.

A queer gravity railroad scheme is in use among the miners in the Inman district of Tennessee, not far from the town of South Pittsburg. The region has, by the way, more different kinds of means of transportation than any other in the world. The range is from the steeply inclined cable road that runs up Lookout mountain, not so many miles away, to the idea that the miners evolved for themselves after watching section bosses use gravity cars for coasting down the mountains.

The mines nestle in a valley at the foot of a series of hills, and the railroad track winds its tortuous way from the mine openings up to the heights that lead to the outside world.

Many of the miners live in the settlements on the hills, and it is a long way to the shaft openings. One day some bright genius discovered that a mule shoe would fit over the top of the T-rail that marked the course of the railroad.

It was but an inventive step to attach the shoe to a short board and then slip the mountain rail sled over the track, says an exchange. Then all Mr. Miner had to do was to balance himself, pick up his feet and transport miner, pick and dinner bucket down the mountain to work. Of course, it was one way traffic for which the road got no money, but there was no conductor, no strap hanging and no stopping to buy tickets on the mule shoe route.

Early any morning the stranger may see the miners come along with their mule shoe toboggans, calmly take a seat and begin the descent.

A pick handle, stick or the foot serves as a brake to regulate the speed of the incline railway. As the shoes wear smooth from contact with the rail they pick up speed, and at times a couple of daring coal diggers will race on opposite rails from the top to the bottom. But as a rule they take the trip carefully and earnestly so as not to interfere with the rights of the road that may belong to a neighbor before or after them.

The scheme, of course, will not work up hill, and the road has to bring the men back on crowded cars that are not so comfortable or exhilarating as the individual coasters that come scooting down the mountain in the morning.

The number of missing mule shoes when the idea first got vogue was perplexing, and it was some time before the company storekeepers found out why the stocks were being depleted by such odd lots that no amount of shoeing extravagance could account for it.

But the miner in those parts is a law unto himself; since he rose up twenty years ago and put a forcible end to the convict system of working the mines, and the owners mindful of the fact that the state of Tennessee had to keep a standing army for two years to keep the peace at that time, do not intend to let a little thing like a mule shoe create any disturbance.

England's Hungry Birds.

In gardens where no bird-table attracts its feathered pensioners the silent absence of bird-life is almost oppressive; but the birds did not depart before necessity compelled, observes the London Times. Sometimes grim fate stalked in the thin shrubbery whence now and again the household cat has emerged; but more often your garden birds have migrated afield because they had exhausted the possibilities of their home. See down the length of the garden wall a footwide space had been absolutely cleared of dead leaves by blackbird and thrush, who had tossed them to one side in their search for wintering insect life. Look closer and you will see that probing bills have worked a little crevice all the way between the earth and the wall. See, every square inch of uncovered frozen ground is dusty from the innumerable pecks of hungry little beaks.

India's Famines.

Famines in India are growing in number and in intensity. After a careful study of the problem, Sir William Digby says in his "Prosperous British India" that there were in India two famines in the eleventh century, one famine in the thirteenth, three in the fourteenth, three in the sixteenth, three in the seventeenth, four in the eighteenth up to 1745. And under British rule seven famines from 1760 to 1900. And in the nineteenth century thirty-two famines. In the first quarter of the nineteenth century there were five famines, with 1,000,000 deaths; in the second quarter, three famines, with 500,000 deaths; in the third quarter, six famines, with 5,000,000 deaths; and in the fourth quarter, eighteen famines, with 26,000,000 deaths.

THE CASPIAN.

Many Unique Features of Great Sea In Russia.

It was Hamlet who said "Twas caviare to the general," meaning something above the taste of the common people, and, it is more than likely that the phrase has its origin in the great caviar trade of Russia's Caspian Sea. Here are caught the countless sturgeons which go to make up the caviar industry of the greatest inland sea in the world. The industry is rivaled only by the petroleum output of the immense oil fields round about the Caspian port of Baku.

Lying between Russian Caucasia and Turkestan, on the direct water and rail route to the Far East, the Caspian, which the ancients knew as the Sikim or Jurpan, spreads itself amid immense flat expanses of territory and vast, untouched material resources. Russia has never more than scratched the surface of them, and the Caspian teaches the true object lesson of Russia in the Near East, that she is still the foremost undeveloped country on the face of the globe. But if Russia comprises merely a thin coating of half-educated humanity spread over an illimitable surface, the Caspain has long given promise of the New Russia, with all its incalculable potentialities, which is in process of development. But only a promise. On its shores one seems to be forever wobbling between the Russia of yesterday and that of to-morrow. But what the morrow may bring forth, no one apparently knows. With Europe's granary of the Ukraine in German hands it may, of course, be possible for the German to control and exploit for himself these vast oil fields of the Caspian. He has merely to get on the train at Odessa and skirt the eastern territory of Caucasia, and, presto, he will be able to get all the oil he may want for guns, factories, and explosives, and cotton to clothe his people and supply his textile industries. Will he, however, attempt it? There's the rub!

One of the curious features of the Caspian is that its tideless waters contain both seals and herrings, and thereby hangs a wondrous geological tale. The Caspian is now many feet below the level of the Black Sea, but in ancient times, long before the Parsees; or fire worshipers, from Persia as pilgrims to Baku, to worship the flaming gas fountains rising from the ground, and build their now ruined temple, the shores were, in some places, hundreds of miles farther inland than at present. In fact, the Caspian was once a huge body of water connected with the Sea of Aral, and probably with the Arctic Ocean and the Black Sea.

Baku was a Persian town down to the eighteenth century, when the Russians took possession. They definitely annexed the place in the nineteenth century, adapting the modern name. The notorious quarter known as "black town" is simply the petroleum refining district, the oil being piped to it from the wells. The famous petroleum wells of Baku go down to depths of from 700 to 1,700 feet, and yield the oil from which kerosene is distilled. The heavier residue, called mazut, is used as lubricating oil, and also for fuel in the locomotives of the Transcaspian Railway. The lighter oil is conveyed to Batum, on the Black Sea, in pipes, and is there shipped for export; the heavier oils reach the same port and Poti, also on the Black Sea, in railroad tank cars. It is this circumstance that gives color, if any, to the anticipation of a possible German control of the oil fields. The oil, to be useful to the allies, would have to be conveyed by the long Archangel route, since it cannot be diverted through Persia to Bagdad or the gulf; but, with a Bolshevist Government in power, there seems to be every likelihood of a first-come-first-served policy being pursued in favor of the German invader.

There is a large steamship traffic between Baku, or Petrovsk, and Krasnovodsk, for conveying the raw cotton from Ferghana, in Turkestan. Another port is Astrakhan, which, however, is back from the actual shore line about sixty miles, on the Volga.

The Russians have a small naval flotilla on the Caspian, and by a long-standing treaty prohibit all other nations from employing similar defences. At various times since the days of Peter the Great schemes have been mooted for cutting a canal between the Volga and the Don, and so establishing unrestricted water communication between the Caspian and the Black Sea, but there are Russians who dream of canals which will restore the Caspian, in a measure, to the dimensions of those early times when the Caspian waters were an entire ocean in themselves. — Christian Science Monitor.

The First Coffee-House.

The first coffee-house really deserving to bear that name, which was opened in the metropolis, was established in 1562 by Pasqua, a Greek, who was servant to Mr. Edwards, a Turkey merchant, and the taste for the new beverage increased so rapidly that coffee-houses became common in London at the date of the Restoration of Charles the Second. It is recorded in "Evelyn's Diary," on May 10th, 1637, that "there came in that year to the College of Balliol, in Oxford, one Nathaniel Conopios, out of Greece, who was the first that ever I saw drink coffee, which custom came not into England until about thirty years later."—Family Herald.

Flags In Battle.

Flags have been carried in warfare since the earliest times. Each company of the ancient armies of the Egyptians had its own standard, and the task of bearing it in battle was esteemed a high honor. The Persians bore an eagle fixed to the head of a lance, and the early Greeks a piece of armor on a spear. The dragon was the military symbol of the ancient peoples, including the Chinese, Parthians and Dacians. Flags as we know them did not come into use until the middle ages.

COMB SAGE TEA INTO GRAY HAIR

Darkens Beautifully and Restores Its Natural Colour and Lustre at Once

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea, with sulphur and alcohol added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is troublesome. An easier way is to get the ready-to-use preparation improved by the addition of other ingredients, a large bottle, at little cost, at drug stores, known as "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," thus avoiding a lot of muss.

While gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does it so naturally, so evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning all gray hairs have disappeared. After another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant and you appear years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

WAS THANKED BY KING

YOUNG KENTUCKIAN WENT TO FRANCE IN C.E.F.

He Was Wounded and Received a Distinguished Conduct Medal—He Describes Visit of British Monarch to the Hospital to Express Gratitude of the British People.

SERGT. ALEX. M'CLINTOCK is a young Kentuckian who joined the 87th Battalian, Canadian Grenadier Guards. He was seriously wounded and soon afterward was awarded the Distinguished Conduct Medal "for conspicuous gallantry in action. He displayed great courage and determination during the raid against the enemy's trenches. He rescued several wounded men at great personal risk."

Sergt. McClintock was discharged from the Canadian army and is now a member of the U. S. A. Reserve Corps. He has recently published a book, "Best o' Luck," which not only described methods in present day warfare but gives many interesting anecdotes and incidents in the young soldier's career. An extract from the book is here given:

If it were possible, I should say something here which would be fitting and adequate about the English women who nursed the twenty-five hundred wounded men in General Hospital No. 5, at Rouen. But that power isn't given me. All I can do is to fall back upon our most profound American expression of respect and say that my hat is off to them. One nurse in the ward in which I lay had been on her feet for fifty-six hours, with hardly time even to eat. She finally fainted from exhaustion, was carried out of the ward, and was back again in four hours, assisting at an operation. And the doctors were doing their bit, too, in living up to the obligations which they considered to be theirs. An operating room was in every ward, with five tables in each. After the fight on the Somme, in which I was wounded, not a table was vacant any hour in the twenty-four, for days at a time. Outside of each room was a long line of stretchers containing patients next awaiting surgical attention. And in all that stress I did not hear a word of complaint from the surgeons, who stood hour after hour with their skill and training for the petty pay of British army medical officers.

On Dec. 5 I was told I was well enough to be sent to England and, on the next day, I went on a hospital ship which every medical officer in our army ought to have a chance to inspect. Nothing ingenuity could contrive for convenience and comfort was missing. Patients were sent below decks in elevators and placed in swinging cradles, which hung level no matter what the ship's motion might be. As soon as I had been made comfortable in my particular cradle I was given a box which had engraved upon it: "Presented with the compliments of the Union Castle Line. May you have a speedy and good recovery." The box contained cigarettes, tobacco and a pipe.

When the ship docked at Southampton after a run of eight hours across the channel, each patient was asked what part of the British Isles he would like to be taken to for the period of his convalescence. I requested to be taken to London, where I thought there was the best chances of my seeing Americans who might know me. Say, I sure made a good guess. I didn't know many Americans, but I didn't need to know them. They found me and made themselves acquainted. They brought things, and then they went out to get more they had forgotten to bring the first trip. The second day after I had been installed on a cot in the King George hospital, in London, I sent fifteen hundred cigarettes back to the boys of our battalion in France out of my surplus stock. If I had undertaken to eat and smoke all the things that were brought to me by Americans, just because I was an American, I'd be back in that hospital now, only getting fairly started on the job. It's some country when you need it.

The wounded soldier, getting back to England, doesn't have a chance to imagine that his services are not appreciated. The welcome he receives begins at the railroad station. All traffic is stopped by the Bobbies to give the ambulances a clear way to the station. The people stand in crowds, the men with their hats off, while the ambulances pass. Women rush out and throw flowers to the wounded men. Sometimes there is a cheer, but usually only silence and words of sympathy.

The King George Hospital was built to be a Government printing office and was nearing completion when the war broke out. It has been made a paradise for convalescent men. The bareness and sick suggestion and characteristic smell of the average hospital are unknown here. There are soft lights and comfortable beds and pretty women going about as visitors. The stage beauties and comedians come and entertain us. The food is delicious and the chief thought of every one seems to be to show the inmates what a comfortable and cheery thing it is to be ill among a lot of real friends. I was there from December until February, and my recollections of the stay are so pleasant that sometimes I wish I was back.

On the Friday before Christmas there was a concert in our ward. Among the artists who entertained us were Fay Compton, Gertrude Elliott (sister of Maxine Elliott), George Robie and other stars of the London stage. After our protracted stay in the trenches and our long absence from all the civilized forms of amusement, the affair seemed to us the most wonderful show ever given. And, in some ways, it was. For instance, in the most entertaining of dramatic exhibitions, did you ever see the lady artists go around and reward enthusiastic applause with kisses? Well, that's what we got. And I am proud to say that it was Miss Compton who conferred this honor upon me.

At about three o'clock on that afternoon, when we were all having a good time, one of the orderlies threw open the door of the ward and announced in a loud voice that his Majesty, the King, was coming in. We could not have been more surprised if some one had thrown in a Mills bomb. Almost immediately the King walked in, accompanied by a number of aides. They were all in service uniforms, the King having little in his attire to distinguish him from the others. He walked around, presenting each patient with a copy of "Queen Mary's Gift Book," an artistic little volume with pictures and short stories by the most famous of English artists and writers. When he neared my bed he turned to one of the nurses and inquired:

"Is this the one?"

The nurse nodded. He came and sat at the side of the bed and shook hands with me. He asked me what part of the United States I had come from, how I got my wounds and what the nature of them was, how I was getting along and what I particularly wished done for me. I answered his questions and said that everything I could possibly wish for had already been done for me.

"I thank you," he said, "for myself and my people for your services. Our gratitude cannot be great enough toward men who have served us as you have.'"

He spoke in a very low voice and with no assumption of royal dignity. There was nothing in the least thrilling about the incident, but there was much apparent sincerity in the few words.

After he had gone one of the nurses asked me what the King had talked about, and I told her he had asked me what I thought about the way the war was being conducted, and I said I'd drop in and talk it over with him as soon as I was well enough to be up.

There happened one of the great disappointments of my life. She was English. She gasped and glared at me, and I think she went out and reported that I was delirious again.

A Plea.

"I ain't kicking at these meatless days, ma'am, you understand."

"Well, then?"

"Only let's have a pruneless day, too, once in a while."

The Fuel Situation.

The fuel situation in the province of Ontario shows no signs of becoming less acute as the season of 1918 progresses; indeed timely warning is now being given that conditions next winter will be such that the utmost care and economy will have to be practiced if hardship is to be averted. The order of the Fuel Controller that only 70 per cent. of the normal requirements of any householder in excess of six tons are to be delivered at any one time may help somewhat, but as it is pointed out that there is no prospect that any more coal will be mined during 1918 than was mined in 1917, the shortage will have to be made up in other ways.

The Ontario Government is tackling the problem vigorously. Large supplies of hardwood are available in the provincial forest reserves. Municipalities are being invited to secure permits to cut firewood in Algonquin Park or on other crown lands free of charge. At the same time farmers and others who have wood lots are being urged to assist at this time by making provisions for their fuel supply from these lots.

SPECIFIC FOR BRONCHITIS.

The turpentine used in Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine is not the ordinary commercial article, which is little used because of the unpleasantness of taste, but is specially extracted from tamarac and spruce gum and so combined with other valuable ingredients as to be at the same time pleasant to use and wonderfully effective in the cure of affections of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs.

SUNKEN SHIPS BEING RAISED

War Brings Day of Resurrection for Many Vessels for Years Listed as Discarded Wreck.

Certainly the day of resurrection has come, for ships. Hulks long since sunk, all but forgotten, rise in their very bones, take on renewed bodies and with the rhythmic heart-beat of new engines feel the blood coursing in their veins once more, observes the Boston Transcript. Abandoned coal barges, hulls of whale ships, of little cargo carriers that have lain at dismantled wharves for half a century, struggle from their graves in the ooze, feel again the measured clink of caulking iron, lift proud topmasts and shout with joy from the very diaphragms of their swelling sails as the forefoot thrills to the blare of blue water. Wrecks of the ancient side-wheelers rise as well and with a vigor of engine life such as did not exist in their day, go down to the sea.

The sea shore is probed for these, and the very lakes send their quota. At Ashland, Wis., for instance, on Lake Superior, the side-wheeler Emerald, sunk at the slip 24 years ago, is on her way up. The ore-carrier Sevona, which broke in two on a shoal six years since, is to be raised and put together again. And so the reports come from slip and shoal the world over.

If the war, with all its menace and its heartache, can give up once more a mighty merchants marine and revive the proud traditions of American seamanship, as it bids fair to, it will have done one great thing for the country.

That's the Question.

"Chancellor Hertling's reichstag speech in answer to President Wilson began well enough, but it had a nasty sting in its tail." The speaker was an American wit. He went on: "It reminds me of the chap who said to the girl who had just rejected him: 'I shall never marry now—never—never.' The girl blushed and bridled. 'Foolish boy, why not?' she murmured. 'If you,' he snarled, 'won't have me, who will?'"

Hon. Arthur J. Balfour As a Religious Thinker Occupies a High Rank

THERE are some persons who think that the fame of Hon A. J. Balfour as a philosopher will endure even longer than his fame as a statesman. This fact has recently been drawn to the attention of the world by the publication of a book by Wilfred M. Short, who was Mr. Balfour's secretary for twenty years. In this book Mr. Short calls attention to some of the work done by Mr. Balfour as a thinker, a literary man and a critic. He reminds the world again of Mr. Balfour's famous essay "In Defence of Philosophic Doubt." Mr. Balfour was thirty-one when he wrote the essay in which, with an entirely constructive intention, he reminded inquirers that definite and rational certainty is not likely to be obtained unless we first pass through a stage of definite and rational doubt. This fresh setting forth of the Socratic commonplace gave the writer a quite undeserved reputation for agnosticism. Several moons had to wax and wane ere the misapprehension attached to Mr. Balfour's academic and pince-nez period was disposed of. When, in 1894, he wrote his famous "The Foundations of Belief" his skeptical mode of search was not in abeyance, but his religious affirmations were more articulate. The third of his important deliverances in philosophy, the "Theism and Humanism," is still more explicit in its avowals. Mr. Balfour long ago perceived that the decisive battles of religious creed are fought beyond the frontiers of theology, and there are few laymen of our time who can be said to have sought more earnestly an intellectually satisfying way of holding to the essentials of faith. There is a naturalism that denaturalizes religion, and against that tendency of Positivism the British statesman has spoken earnest words: "Love, pity, and endurance it may indeed leave with us; and this is well. But it so dwarfs and impoverishes the ideal end of human effort that though it may encourage us to die with dignity, it hardly permits us to live with hope." The life-long predilection of Mr. Balfour goes well with all that has been told us of his rearing in the Presbyterian Church of Scotland and with the charming pictures which have been given us of the Whittingame home where Lady Blanche Balfour's gifts of mind were applied particularly in the task of religious education. As for churchmanship, Mr. Balfour shares with his King the advantage of being a Presbyterian in Scotland and an Episcopalian in England, and of having—as Mark Twain might have said—friends in both places.

Take "Cascarets" If Headachy, Bilious And Constipated

Best for liver and bowels, bad breath, bad colds, sour stomach.

Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, coated tongue, head and nose clogged up with a cold — always trace this to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months.

Ontario Has a Claim.

In the price which the people of Canada will be called upon to pay for the equity in the common stock of the Canadian Northern Railway the Ontario Government is going to have something to say. Before the Board of Arbitrators now sitting at Osgoode Hall the Government has presented a claim for $213,204 for timber dues, fire-ranging and other charges for which the railway is in default. The Government has also stated that the railway company cannot establish that the land grant offered in 1909 as a subsidy for the construction of the line from Sellwood to Port Arthur is an asset. The company, in the first place, failed to enter into an agreement with the Government under which the grant might be made, and accordingly the land grant has not been earned. On the other hand there is a provision in the statute that if at any time the railway was taken over by the Government of Canada any subsidy given should be returned to the province.

Canadian Cattle In England.

On March 6 the question of the British embargo on Canadian cattle was raised in the House of Lords. The London Times report of the debate which followed reads:

"The Duke of Marlborough, replying for the Board of Agriculture, said under special conditions animals might be allowed to come to this country, but he did not believe that those conditions had ever been put into operation, except in the case of animals for exhibition. The Act of 1896 was quite drastic, and embodied the principle of total prohibition, except for slaughter, of stores at the port of entry. Since 1896 it had been urged by Mr. Rogers, he representative of the Canadian Government, that Canadian store cattle were free from disease. Mr. Prothero had said there was no ground for excluding Canadian cattle on the ground of disease, and Sir Robert Borden had said that was absolutely certain. What conclusion must be drawn from their testimony? Surely it was this, that so far as contagious disease was concerned, there was no justification on the part of the Government for refusing to allow Canadian stores born and bred in Canada to come into this country. This conclusion was supported and endorsed at the Board of Agriculture by those competent to express an opinion on the veterinary side of the question. Mr. Prothero never gave a pledge that because stores were required in this country they must be imported from Canada. In the opinion of the Board of Agriculture, supported by the representatives of Canada and fortified by veterinary experts, Canadian cattle were entirely free from disease. Mr. Prothero had pointed out that store cattle might be of assistance to the agricultural community in this country. No promise had been made, however, to permit the entry of store cattle into these shores. He could not promise that no act would be passed permitting the importation before the end of the war, because he did not know who might be in the position to decide, but no change could take place until the Act of 1896 had been repealed. Ample opportunity would be afforded all concerned to represent their views to the Board of Agriculture.

Crushed Possibilities.

Jones, the cub reporter, was fat, but he looked as melancholy as a fat man can when he entered the city editor's office.

"Why was my story killed?" he asked gloomily.

"An act of mercy," said the editor. "You fell down on it first."

Lord Shaughnessy Has Erected in Dominion Monument to Himself

THE head of the Canadian Pacific has spent himself without stint in the building up of a vast and successful railway and steamship organization—perhaps the greatest in the world. No one suggests that Lord Shaughnessy's life work was undertaken chiefly for the money reward. The recompense that comes to men like J. J. Hill, Van Horne, Sandford Fleming, Joseph Hobson and others who have been born railway builders and engineers is the growth to completion and to prosperity of the railways that first existed in their minds, as the picture first exists in the mind of the artist, or the statue in the imagination of the sculptor. The satisfaction of useful work well done is greater than that of all the hoarded gold in the world.

In the formative days of the C.P.R., when Mountstephen and Van Horne were planning and building, and Wm. Whyte was graduating as a railway diplomat, Lord Shaughnessy, then a young railway operator, whose birth in Wisconsin did not conceal his Irish origin, was turned loose upon the operating problems of the road. He was just thirty-one when in 1884 he became assistant to the general manager of the as yet uncompleted C.P.R. For thirty-three years he has had his finger on its pulse. He can intuitively discover the least irregularity in the pulse-beat of the wonderful organism that has grown out of the germ of those early days. Van Horne was very human when he was not dreaming dreams or studying ceramics. Shaughnessy never had much time for side lines. The task of working out the details of his chief's dreams was a great and engrossing one. Those who remember the two in the late eighties as they travelled about together shaping by negotiation the C.P.R. system as we know it to-day can still recall how the intractable Van Horne, balked in some favorite plan by what he regarded as the silly objections of a board of aldermen, would turn in disgust to the drawing of random sketches, and caricatures of his critics, while the more self-controlled Shaughnessy with the cold, blue eyes and air of finality, tok up in incisive speech the uncompleted argument. He knew the details of local situations far more thoroughly than many of the local people, and won his way by accurate knowledge where sometimes Van Horne failed because he could not make others see with his eyes or project themselves into the kingdom of his dreams.

That experience of getting down to solid earth and basing his case on facts that could be handled without breaking did much toward making Shaughnessy one of the greatest railway operating chiefs that this continent has yet produced. What Van Horne planned Shaughnessy built up on solid foundations. He has done a great work for the shareholders of the C.P.R. and also for the passengers and shippers along the company's lines. In the face of proficiency Lord Shaughnessy's eye can become very hard and cold, and there is still ruthlessness in abrupt decisions when disagreeable things have to be done.

He is not yet an old man. Except for troublesome eyesight Lord Shaughnessy is still in middle life. His mind is not old, and his bodily vigor is but little abated. He has become a great citizen of the Empire, although born under another flag, and he stands to-day as a national figure in Canada. When his work is finished, he will leave behind him an efficient monument of steel.

COAL GAS FOR AUTOMOBILES

Fuel Costs Only Twelve Cents for Charge Equal in Power to One Gallon of Gasoline.

Arthur H. Jackson, an English mechanical engineer, who arrived in New York from London on his way to Hong Kong, said that the high price of gasoline in England, where it sells at $1.10 a gallon, has caused motor power experts to experiment with compressed coal gas for motor trucks and automobiles. The point in its favor is that the gas fuel costs only 12 cents for a charge equal in power to a gallon of gasoline.

"The ministry of munitions," Mr. Jackson said, "favors the coal gas fuel, as its manufacture increases the output of by-products needed for explosives. The Glasgow corporation has ben advised by a special commission that coal gas is practicable for commercial motor vehicles. Any engine can be fitted for its use in a few hours without interfering with the use of gasoline, should any change be desired. In closed cars and motor trucks the gas is carried in containers on the roofs, and in open cars it may be carried on canopies running the length of the body. Containers now in use hold only 250 feet of gas, which is about equal to a gallon of gasoline, and that is one of the objections to its use."

"Manchester Souls."

A correspondent of the Manchester Guardian writes, with reference to the late Canon Knox Little's oratory: "I remember many years ago he was addressing an audience in the Free Trade Hall and alluded to them as 'my dear Manchester souls.' A witty dignitary of the church whispered to me, 'Vox et preterea Little,' and I wonder whether if we had been in Cork he would have addressed us as his dear Cork souls!"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Irish Eyes

By HILDA MORRIS

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

When Bob Ellison was very young he had an Irish nurse. She was a pretty colleen, that nursemaid, her big blue Irish eyes fringed with lashes as black as the glossy braids of hair. Little Bob idollized his Maggie, and years afterwards, when she was but a memory, the sight of blue eyes rimmed with black would recall her dancing feet, her merry voice, her tales of goblins and the "wee folk." He never hoped to see Maggie again, of course, but he did hope, in some vague, subconscious way, to meet eyes like hers, in a face like hers, sometime, somewhere. All of us cherish ideals whether we know it or not, and most of them have curious foundations. No one could have been more surprised than Bob Ellison at the suggestion that the ideal of the girl he wished to marry was patterned after the bewitching Maggie of his nursery days. Nevertheless, it was so.

Bob went through school and college with none of the love entanglements from which his fellows suffered. There were girls, of course, some of them very nice girls with whom he liked to dance and swim and occasionally flirt, but—none of them looked like Maggie. The Irish ones were red-haired, or their eyes were brown, or they had too many freckles. It was not until Bob was twenty-six years old and a lecided "catch" that he saw a girl with Irish eyes and blue-black hair, a girl whom even Maggie might have envied.

It was at a dance that he met her, a debutante affair to which his mother had bade him go with particular injunctions to meet Miss Wayne, "the Miss Wayne of Boston." Bob's mother was not unaware of the fact that her son was clever enough and handsome enough to marry whom he would, and she liked to fancy an alliance with some old aristocratic family. After Bob had gone to the dance, his mother sat at home, picturing to herself a daughter-in-law, tall, distinguee, a little aloof and awe-inspiring.

As for Bob, however, he shook off his mother's injunctions as soon as he had left the house. Miss Wayne of Boston, indeed! He knew all about those Boston girls: he had had them for teachers. They were mostly thin and wore spectacles and liked to talk about the English essayists. He had no intention of seeking an acquaintance with Miss Wayne.

And as soon as he reached the ballroom he saw the girl with the Irish eyes. She wore blue, a misty floating blue that matched the blue of her eyes, and her sleek hair was black as the twinkling slippers on her trim little feet. Some one called her "Maggie-Rose," Maggie-Rose, of all lilting Irish names! Some one introduced her to Bob and they danced off together. Maggie-Rose Flynn! He did not care who she was or where she came from, except that she seemed to have come from his land of dreams, his shrine of ideals. She danced divinely, and when she spoke her voice was divine, too, a merry musical voice such as only Irish maids may have. She was his Maggie to the life, only far more lovely. But of this Bob was entirely unaware. He had forgotten Maggie; it was only her essence that survived to weave the fabric of his heart's ideal.

Maggie-Rose seemed to like him, too. They danced together a great deal that evening, they had supper together, they sat for a dreamy half-hour in the conservatory. She talked a good deal, but Bob was not really conscious of much that she said; it was the sound of her voice that enchanted him, the curve of her red lips when she smiled, the blue of her eyes. If she told him anything about herself he was not aware of it, she remained to him a mysterious fulfillment of a long-cherished dream, a bewitching embodiment of all that was most charming in women.

Later some one else claimed her for a dance, and Bob watched her from the shelter of a doorway until some one reminded him that he ought to be dancing with another girl. Reluctantly he turned away his eyes from the graceful form of Maggie-Rose, and the girl with whom he danced found him very silent and stupid and a very bad dancer; in fact, she said that he never would look where he was going, but insisted on gazing over the heads of people as if he were looking for some one, which seemed to her very rude.

Afterwards he tried to find Maggie-Rose, but she had vanished. No graceful shape in floating blue appeared on the ballroom floor, that is, no shape that was graceful according to Bob's idea. Maggie-Rose had apparently disappeared as completely as if at the stroke of 12, her fairy godmother had changed her into another form.

"What's become of that Miss Flynn, the one in blue?" Bob asked several of his friends, but no one seemed to know. He hung about the place until almost the last guest had departed, but there was no further sign of Maggie-Rose. Stranger still, no one seemed to have even heard the name.

"Flynn?" they would ask. "Why no, I don't remember meeting any Miss Flynn."

Bob forebore to ask his busy hostess—a close friend of his mother's. He could do so later if he had to, but he resolved in the meantime to conduct his own search for Maggie-Rose Flynn.

After Bob reached home that night he looked up all the Flynns in the directory and marked the ones he thought most likely to be related in some manner to Maggie-Rose. Next day he tried calling them up from a public telephone booth, in each case asking casually for Maggie-Rose, and in each case being misunderstood, maligned and disappointed. By mid-afternoon he had ascertained that she did not belong to any of the Flynns listed in the directory of his native city. Perhaps she lived with an aunt, or perhaps—horrible thought, she had left town, gone back to some faraway place which she honored by her residence. There seemed but one thing to do—go back to his hostess of the night before and ask for full particulars regarding Miss Maggie-Rose Flynn, divulging, if need be, his reason for wishing to know.

Mrs. Banning herself was not at home that afternoon, but the debutante daughter was; peals of laughter from the library told that she was entertaining some young people at tea. Perhaps she could tell him about Maggie-Rose. Perhaps—

But as he entered the door the first person Bob saw was Maggie-Rose herself, sitting by the fire, her blue eyes blue as the shimmery frock she wore, her smile more bewitching than ever.

"Why, Mr. Ellison;" exclaimed little Miss Banning, much flattered by this visit. "Do come in and have some tea with us. I suppose you met Miss Wayne last night, didn't you? Maggie Rose has been telling me about some nice man who took her out to supper and from her description I couldn't think who it could possibly be but you. Now was it?"

"It was," confessed Bob, "only I didn't know—Maggie-Rose—was Miss Wayne—"

"And I didn't catch your name, either," confessed Miss Wayne. "Wasn't it stupid? I thought all the time that your name was Murphy because you look like a boy I used to know, years ago, whose name was Timmy Murphy. He had brown eyes and a nose like yours—"

"Good gracious, Maggie-Rose," broke in Miss Banning, "Mr. Ellison isn't Irish!"

"Well, I am," declared Miss Wayne, making a charming moue, "that is one of my grandmothers was. For the rest I'm plain American but I'm glad of a little Irish to balance the Puritan part."

"So am I," declared Bob Ellison devoutly. "I was wondering, Miss—Maggie-Rose, whether you wouldn't like to take a walk in the park this afternoon, or some time—"

At dinner that evening Mrs. Ellison, who had permitted herself to indulge in dreams of daughters-in-law for several hours during the day, asked her son what was, to her, a burning question.

"Did you meet Miss Wayne last night, the one from Boston?"

Her son looked slightly confused, as though roused suddenly from dreams of his own.

"Eh? Oh, Maggie-Rose? Yes, I met her last night. I meant to tell you—"

"Maggie-Rose! I mean did you meet Miss Margaret Rosebrough Wayne the Miss Wayne of Boston?"

"—s met her," he nodded. "Her name's Maggie-Rose, and she's the sweetest girl in all the world, and we're going to be married. I was just trying to tell you, mother."

Cinemas in Strange Places.

In Moravia, the capital of the negro republic of Liberia, there is a cinema in the house of representatives. The pictures are shown on two evenings a week, and they are invariably attended by the president, whose presidential chair is set aside for him as a free seat.

The "picture" craze has reached the Arctic regions, for at Haparanza, a little township in the extreme north of Sweden, and just on the Arctic circle, there is a handsome little cinema, patronized by Laplanders. It is frequently snowed up and unable to open.

The South Sea Islands, another inaccessible part of the globe, have likewise succumbed to the lure of the "movies." In the island of Tahiti there are no fewer than three cinemas. The South Sea islander will sell his shirt or his girdle for the price of a ticket for the "pictures."

The Model TOWN

the paint protected town

THE finest town buildings soon get to look "dingy" if they are not kept painted.

Worse still, the omission of the Spring painting leaves them open to weather-attack and time's decay.

And—with materials so high as to make every building worth double today what it was worth in 1913—you are making a mistake if you let a building "go to seed."

Have your town a "model" town—have it fresh with paint—have it protected with a paint that affords real protection—

B-H "ENGLISH" PAINT
70% Pure White Lead (Brandram's Genuine B.B.)
30% Pure White Zinc
100% Pure Paint

If this paint were sold at a price half as high again as any other (which it isn't) it would still be the economical paint to use on your house. In sheer covering capacity it has no equal. A gallon of it goes so far that you'll buy less of it and yet do more with it. Paint with B-H "ENGLISH" PAINT this spring—and your house is protected for years, where a coat of ordinary paint will last but a few months.

The difference lies in the above formula basis. What other paint is so correct in this respect that its makers guarantee it? What paint can a dealer furnish you that has anything like the quantity of white lead in it that has B-H "English"?

This was the formula when lead was lower in price—this is the formula still; even though lead is extremely high in price. It HAS to be the B-H formula; because the guarantee that calls for it, is printed right on the B-H cans. We could not cheapen B-H "English" Paint even if we wanted to. So it's your safe paint as to quality, your sure paint as to covering capacity, your dependable paint as to durability. Find the B-H dealer in your town. He's the man to buy from.

A DARING EXPLOIT.

Here Is a Plane Tale From the Skies.

"During the first months of the war a Belgian biplane containing pilot and observer experienced motor trouble while behind the German lines and was compelled to come down. Pointing her nose toward home, the two officers hoped against hope that they might glide without power back to their own territory. But it was soon discovered to be useless, for the wind was dead against them.

"Leaning over the edges of their cockpits, the Belgians saw the earth rising nearer and nearer, while the speed of their craft continued distressingly slow. Everybody seemed firing at them.

"The German trenches appeared, and they crossed them less than thirty feet above the enthusiastic riflemen below. Their own trenches were two hundred yards distant. The machine struck midway in "no man's land" and stopped. Ducking through the hail of bullets, both men succeeded in escaping to their trenches, thanks to their comrades' fire, without a scratch. Unhappily, though, they had had no time to set fire to their machine.

"Two days later Capt. Jaumotte, the pilot of the stranded aeroplane, learned that his machine was still there. For two nights the Belgian soldiers had so carefully guarded it that the enemy had been unable to reach or destroy it. Jaumotte determined upon a rescue.

"Securing an armored motor-car, Jaumotte took along his two mechanics and two gunners and suddenly appeared in front of the abandoned aeroplane. While the gunners worked their machine-guns, Jaumotte and the two mechanics, protected by the armored car, busied themselves with the disabled engine.

"The German soldiers, stupefied by this incredible audacity, could only watch it through their periscopes. Every time a head appeared, the motor-car gunners raked the trench with their machine-guns.

"In fifteen minutes the work was completed. Climbing into his seat, Capt. Jaumotte signaled the mechanic to turn over the propeller. The engine roared, and with one wave of his hand, the audacious pilot swept away over his own cheering trenches, while the mechanics clambered back into the motor-car with their tools and returned home to their aerodrome.

"For this feat Jaumotte received a citation from the Belgian army."—Lawrence L. Driggs, in Century.

Canaries Are Heroes.

Not only are the stars in their courses fighting the Kaiser, but such "stars" of other kingdoms as trained dogs, carrier pigeons and army mules are also helping to make the world unsafe for autocracy, says a writer in the New York Herald.

And now the canary comes to the front as a soldier of democracy. This feathered music box acts as a gas barometer in the firstline trenches. No instrument has been devised so sensitive to the first taint of poison in the air as these susceptible songsters, who keel over in their cages while the atmospheric enemy is yet a great way off and give the men waiting to give the devil his due time to adjust their gas masks.

When it is remembered that every canary gassed probably means lives saved, the quality of sacrificial service thus rendered is seen to be worthy of honorable mention. Certain death awaits the commandeered canary, but these birds meet their fate with mirth and song.

There should be service flags for bird-cages and gassed soloists should be buried with full military honors in order fitly to commemorate the martyrdom of the song birds who go to death chanting battle hymns.

One by one everything of sweetness and light throughout the world is being arrayed against the Potsdam demons, and the swan song of every canary adds a new note to the requiem of Wilhelm and his wild-cats.

TERRIFIC ARTILLERY ACTION AT SEVERAL POINTS ON THE WESTERN BATTLEFRONT

The Air Fighters Are Busy—Enemy is Putting Up a Stiff Fight—Little Ground Fighting.

WEATHER IDEAL

(United Press Service.)

(By William Philip Simms.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, May 10.—(3 o'clock despatch)—The most amazing air fighting is going on in the entire battle region.

For three days the weather has been ideal, and the pale blue skies are literally alive with fighting squadrons of all nations.

The late Baron Richthofen's famous "circus" with a new commander, is busy east of Amiens, where 25 or 30 enemy machines are trying to block the Allied scouts from the back areas along the Somme.

NEW TACTICS.

The number of German machines is increasing and new battle tactics are being employed. The enemy is putting up an exceedingly stiff fight.

There is little ground fighting. The artillery keeps pounding heavily in spots.

There was a terrific cannonade between 8:30 and midnight south of Arras, on a single corps front, while the harassing fire was unusually bitter in the region of Lens, Bethune and Hazebrock.

The operation by which the British gained in a counter attack the small portion of north of Albert, which the Germans had captured, while a small one, was important. The positions in question lay on high ground which had been hotly contested ever since the Germans stormed their way into Albert.

Military News

(Kingston Whig.)

No man called up for service with the Depot Battalions in Military District No. 3 will be allowed a second medical board in future, according to a new order from headquarters here. The order will affect chiefly those men who have undergone examinations and have been allowed exemption for a limited time. These men will not now be given a second examination.

Exemptions Cancelled.

The Military Service Council confirms the report that registrars have received instructions to cancel all exemptions granted to men between the ages of 20 and 22 who have hitherto been exempted from combatant service on account of having been disfranchised. Such men are now ordered to report. It is pointed out, however, that the act only exempts these classes from combatant service. They are now being ordered to report for non-combatant service.

A Big Draft.

About 150 men came into the city on the early Wednesday morning trains for attestation with the Depot Battalion. They are from all sections of the district.

Discharge "E" Men.

Draftees who upon being taken on the strength of depot battalions are categorized as "E" will be discharged.

DEPARTMENTAL HEADS WILL VISIT ENGLAND TO CONFER WITH AUTHORITIES

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, May 10.—While neither the Minister of Marine, nor that of Militia and Defence, will be represented at the opening of the conference of Imperial representatives to be held shortly in Great Britain, it is the intention of both Major-General Mewburn and Hon. C. C. Ballantyne to later visit England and to confer with the authorities there regarding important details of administration, etc.

WANTED HERE.

At the present time the imposition of the new Military Service regulations demand the presence of the Minister of Militia in Canada. As for the Minister of Marine and Fisheries, preparations for the inauguration of rolling mills for the manufacture of Ship plates require his presence here for the present. Both, will cross the Atlantic later in the season.

Price Fixing Is A Failure

Chairman of Canada Food Board Issues a Message to the Women of Canada

PRODUCE MORE

PARLIAMENT BUILDINGS, Toronto, May 10.—In a letter written to the Women's Auxiliaries of Ontario, Henry B. Thompson, the chairman of the Canada Food Board, says that price fixing is a failure. He says:

"As for price fixing—a question that seems to bother the housewife a good deal—it has failed wherever it has been tried. The price of milk was fixed in New York. Waht happened? The milch cows were killed for beef and there was a milk famine in a short time."

Can Do Much.

Mr. Thompson says that the Women's Auxiliaries may do much to clear up misunderstandings. He advices the women to garden, farm, raise chickens, keep pigs, fowl, rabbits or bees. He says that the question of compulsory rationing is not feasible to Canada at the present time and that it would lead to no end of complications.

Waste of Energy.

"It would be a waste of energy to put drastic rationing regulations into force in Canada now," he said. "If conditions get worse, it might come to that, but if Canada produces to the limit then I trust that it won't be necessary. That is the ethical view of the matter. Is it not more or less of an insult to the women of Canada to suggest that with an abundance of food all around them they are unable to keep their hands off it unless some one stands threatening over them."

Growth Of Wheel Business Shown In Past Decade

Getting Back to Open Air Popularizes Bicycle

Many improvements, of course, have been made, and the tremendous drop in the prices of bicycles since the old days has probably had a lot to do with bringing the bicycle within the reach of a greater number of riders, but it is nevertheless true that there is an actual growth in the bicycle business taking place at the present time, compared year by year in succession, in the past ten years. The 1916 record entry list for the Dunlop trophy race bears out this view. There seems to be a tendency to get back more or less to the idea of regular exercise in the open air, which, of course, the bicycle, next to walking, affords better than any other known vehicle. For this reason, it is not an uncommon thing to find that sons of well-to-do men are asking their father from time to time to get out of their automobiles and mount the bicycle with them. Somehow or other the boys favour doing a certain amount of "limbering up" in connection with sports, and riding a bicycle affords just the opportunity.

Lieut. Morrison Presented With Cigarette Case

Peterboro' Soldier Was Invited to Meet the Duke of Devonshire

Lieutenant David E. Morrison, of the R.A.F., received a telegram from Colonel Hon. Harold Henderson asking him to be at the station when the Vice-Regal party stopped off last evening. Lieut. Morrison drove the second car in the parade when the Duke visited the city on Monday. Last evening he was presented with a beautiful silver cigarette case lined with gold. On the cover was the Duke's crest, under which was the letter "D."

Lieutenant Morrison enlisted in the first contingent as a private. At Valcartier, owing to his knowledge of all kinds of cars, he was selected to drive Sir Sam Hughes' car. Lieut. Morrison drove for Brigadier General Brooke, the Duke of Connaught for headquarters of the 4th Canadian Division, and also in the King's parade at Aldershot. He has driven all the best makes of cars. In the Flying Crops he has had many narrow escapes. Once he lost control of his machine, fell out and landed in a tree, practically unhurt. He has driven from the headquarters of the 4th Canadian Division to the port of Boulogne. He is now home on leave until June 1. He is a son of the late Alexander Morrison of Bridgenorth, and is now staying at the home of his brother, Robert Morrison, 599 Bolivar street.

HUN NAVAL BASE AT OSTEND BLOCKADED BY BRITISH NAVAL FORCES IN ANOTHER RAID

Attacking Forces Loaded the Old Cruiser "Vindictive" With Concrete and Sank Her Between the Piers Across the Entrance to Ostend Harbour—British Casualties Were Light

ONE MOTOR LAUNCH LOST

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 10.—British naval forces again raided the German naval base at Ostend, on the Belgium coast, blockading the entrance to the harbour, by sinking the old cruiser Vindictive, which participated in the recent raid on Zeebrugge, it was announced to-day.

"The Ostend-Zeebrugge operation, designed to close the ports, was completed last night," the Admiralty declared.

The obsolete Cruiser Vindictive was sunk between the piers across the entrance to Ostend harbour.

Since the attack on Zeebrugge, April 23, the Vindictive had been filled with concrete.

MOTOR LAUNCH LOST.

"Our forces returned to their base with the loss of one motor launch. It was damaged and was then sunk to prevent it falling into the enemy's hands. Our casualties were light."

The previous raid, which was carried out early on the morning of April 23, was conducted simultaneously against Ostend and Zeebrugge. The latter port is believed to have been completely blocked through the sinking of two concrete filled cruisers in the channels. The mole also was damaged by the blowing up of an old submarine filled with explosives and through the planting of bombs by a boarding party.

Wind Frustrated Raid.

The raid on Ostend however, was frustrated when a high wind dispelled the smoke screen protecting the British ships and permitted German shore batteries to sink the blockade ships before they gained their objective.

One British destroyer, two motor boats and two launches were lost at Zeebrugge and the casualties were exceedingly heavy. In last night's attack, only one motor launch was sunk, the Admiralty said and the British casualties were light.

Canadian Press:

LONDON, May 10.— The German submarine base of Ostend, on the Belgian coast, has been blocked as the result of a new raid by British naval forces, the Admiralty announces. The obsolete cruiser Vindictive, filled with concrete, has been sunk across the entrance to the harbour. The British lost one motor boat. Their casualties were light. Apparently the British have carried out another raid on the German submarine bases on the Belgian coast similar to the one on April 23 when so much damage was done to the harbour and works at Zeebrugge. The Vindictive was damaged severely in action at Zeebrugge. She was built at Chatham in 1897 and displaced 5,750 tons, and her complement was 456 men.

Official Statement.

"Operations designed to close the ports of Ostend and Zeebrugge were successfully completed last night when the obsolete cruiser Vindictive was sunk between the piers and across the entrance to Ostend harbour. Our light forces have returned to thir base with the loss of one motor launch, which had been damaged and was sunk by orders of the Vice Admiral to prevent it from falling into the hands of the enemy. Our casualties were light.

Ostend is located on the North Sea eight miles east of Westende, where the battle lines touch the coast. It is sixty-one miles from Dover and 115 miles from London. Zeebrugge is 13 miles east of Ostend.

Both Ostend and Zeebrugge are connected with Bruges, the principal submarine base in Belgium by canals.

Bruges is 13 miles directly east of Ostend. Unlike Zeebrugge, however, Ostend is not protected by a big, armed mole, such as defends the former city from the west and north. Two short jetties project out on both sides of the entrance to the channel.

The channel is about 100 metres wide and 100 metres long. At the point where it joins the canal, there are several roomy basins on each side. The town, which has a population of about 45,000, lies on the west side of the canal.

Was the "Flagship."

The old cruiser Vindictive, which was sunk last night in the Ostend channel, was the "flagship" of the previous raid on Zeebrugge and landed the boarding party on the mole. She was built in 1897 and had a displacement of 5,750 tons. She yas 320 feet long had three funnels and carried a complement of 480 men. Her main battery consisted of ten six inch guns.

Secret Well Kept.

DOVER, Eng., May 10.— The decision to send the Vindictive to Ostend was made a few days after her return from the Zeebrugge raid, and the task of filling her with concrete was begun immediately. As in the joint raid on Zeebrugge and Ostend, this latest British naval exploit was kept a well guarded secret. As evidence of this it is recalled that after the battle-scarred cruiser returned from Zeebrugge, an urgent request was made that she be sent up the Thames to London for public view. The authorities did not encourage the proposal, however, and the agitation subsided. All this time she was being overhauled for her last voyage.

Heard the Guns.

DOVER, England, May 10.—Some of the participants of the naval raid on Ostend returned here this morning and were greeted with the greatest enthusiasm. The engagement lasted from a minute after midnight until three a.m. The guns were plainly heard.

BRITISH OFFICIAL

The British Have Re-captured Trenches From the Germans—Hostile Artillery Activity

FRENCH OFFICIAL

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, May 10.—The British have recaptured a small portion of the front trench northwest of Albert which the enemy gained yesterday, it is announced officially.

THE STATEMENT FOLLOWS.

The small portion of our front trench northwest of Albert gained by the enemy as a result of his attack yesterday morning, was recaptured by us during the evening by a counter-attack. We took prisoners. The hostile artillery was active last night in the valleys of the Somme and the Ancre rivers, and at different points on the Lys battle front.

FRENCH OFFICIAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, May 10.—French troops yesterday captured Grivesnes Park, five miles northwest of Montdidier, the War Office announces.

"Yesterday Lieut. Rene Fonck brought down six German bi-planes in the course of two patrols. He downed the first two in ten seconds, the third five minutes later, and the other three in the course of the second patrol. Lieut. Fonck's achievement of yesterday has never been equalled. He is the great French air battler since the death of Captain Guynemer.

The French took 258 prisoners. They organized their new positions, notwithstanding the German resistance. The official announcement follows:

"After brief and intense bombardment, French troops yesterday afternoon took possession of the Park at Grivesnes, an important part of which had been occupied by the Germans. In this operation we took 258 prisoners, including four officers, and also a considerable amount of material. Notwithstanding the vigorous German artillery fire and attempts of enemy patrols to approach our new line, our infantry maintained the positions which had been captured and organized them.

"On the right bank of the Ailette, in the Champagne, near Massiges, north of Rheims and in Lorraine at Ailly Wood, the French carried out successful local attacks or repulsed German raids. In these operations we took thirty-six prisoners, including one officer."

No Parade Necessary

It is not necessary to do more than mention the extraordinary values in shoes that the spring bargain sale at the Peterborough Shoe Store offers, to convince prudent buyers that this is their opportunity. It is a most remarkable list of bargains that is contained in their large advertisement on another page, and, considering the continual rise in shoe prices, must appeal to all who appreciate a most unusual chance to save money. By all means call at the store, 291 George Street, opposite the Opera House, and see for yourself.

VICTORY FOR GOVERNMENT

The Maurice Incident is Seemingly Closed So Far As It Affects the Government — Organized Opposition to Present Government

PRESS COMMENT

(By Ed. L. Keen.)

LONDON May 10.—(10 O'clock Despatch.)—"With Premier Lloyd George's victory, the General Maurice incident is seemingly closed, in so far as it affects the government, adding another to the string of the Premier's political triumphs. The chief feature outstanding is the evident appearances for the first time during the war of organized opposition to the government.

Turning Point.

Some of the newspapers supporting Lloyd George declare it marks the turning point in the war relations of the parties. They think an open political war has been declared, and see the whole affair as a plot to oust the government. They regard the vote on Herbert Asquith's motion for the appointment of a Parliamentary committee to investigate the charges against the Premier and the Chancellor of the Exchequer as a rout for the former Premier. The same notes ran through Lloyd George's defence of himself and his ministry.

Evaded Issue.

The Opposition press asserts that Lloyd George evaded the issue, sidestepped an inquiry by withdrawal of the offer of a judicial investigating board and won a parliamentary victory by legardamain on the floor of the House.

The public is greatly interested in America's attitude regarding the Maurice affair. Long quotations from the American press are published in the London papers.

"Lloyd George turned the accusations inside out," the Evening News said. "When he had finished, there was not even a rag left. Asquith's performance was feeble."

Canadian Press.

Accept Statement.

LONDON, May May 10.— Action of Commons in turning down the Asquith motion by a large majority generally accords with the views of various newspapers, expressed previous to the Premier's statement in the House of Commons. The staunch supporters of Premier Lloyd George accept his statement without question and regard it as a complete refutation of the charges made by Maj.-General Maurice. Others differ.

Press Comment.

The Daily Mail says that not a rag of General Maurice's pretentious indictment is left and asks who again will ever pay the least attention to anything he says. It declares that former Premier Asquith was out-generalled and out-fought.

The Premier's answer, says the Daily Telegraph, was complete and overwhelming and showed that General Maurice had no shadow of justification for any of his charges.

The Daily Chronicle, voicing another view, declares the Premier's statement does not remove serious disquiet from the mind of the army.

The Daily News refers to the Premier's withdrawal of the plan of judicial inquiry as political jugglery and says he balked inquiry into the charges affecting British honour and the honour of Parliament.

The Morning Post says: Because the House of Commons proposed to be satisfied with Premier Lloyd George's statement, it does not follow that people outside the House will be equally pliable. In this matter, as in other, the Commons has ceased to represent the nation.

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS, May 10.—"We rejoice that the unprecedented conspiracy against Premier Lloyd George has failed," the Paris Matin declared to-day.

"Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unsurpassed."

FRIDAY, MAY 10TH, 1918.

THE NAVY AGAIN.

Once again the British navy has thrilled the world with a daring exploit, successfully and audaciously carrid out. The dashing raid on the enemy's submarine bases at Zeebrugge and Ostend a short time ago succeeded at the former port, but was only partially effective at Ostend. The navy, however, has scored again, and by the sinking of the old cruiser "Vindictive" squarely between the piers, has blocked the entrance to the harbour. The Empire will rejoice at this new proof that the spirit of Nelson still animates Britain's jack tars.

THROWS UP THE SPONGE.

Col. Labatt, the storm centre in the famous pensions case has according to a despatch from Ottawa, practically admitted that the agitation that has been stirred up has been justified. He has written to the Pensions committee of the House of Commons, offering either to resign his position as a member of the Board of Pension Commissioners or to have the amount of his pension deducted from the salary attached to that position. The adoption of one suggestion or the other will do away with the injustice of awarding a complete disability pension to a man who is considered capable of performing the duties of a $5,000 government job. The storm of indignation that this incident has aroused will, too, it is hoped, cause a betterment in the whole system of administering pensions so that the private soldier who has been incapacitated from earning a full livelihood will be remunerated in proportion to the full amount of his disability.

A SPLENDID SPIRIT.

The spirit which is being shown by many young men in Peterboro in regard to the call for military service, in an adequate guarantee that the morale of the Canadian army will not be deteriorated by their addition to its ranks. The nineteen year old youngsters are not waiting for the official call to the colours but are voluntarily enlisting in large numbers. During the past few days many of these have travelled down to Kingston, and have enlisted, waiving any chance they might have for exemption, if they waited until their class was called out. Many more will go in the course of the next few days, and by present indications when the nineteen year olds of the city are formally summoned it will be found that most of them are already wearing the army khaki.

CONTRASTS IN PENSIONS.

Col. Labatt's case about which there has been so much agitation recently, although apparently the worst that has been uncovered, is not the only one that needs investigation. Sen. Col. George Bradbury, former conservative member for Selkirk, Manitoba, and now a member of the Canadian Senate, took a battalion overseas and after a short stay returned to Canada, where a medical board recommended him for a pension based on 80 per cent disability. This in spite of the fact that the Board's report stated that "this officer's age, and probably high blood pressure was a predisposing cause of his condition."

It was stated a little while ago that Canada's pensions are the highest in the world—in the case of these two lieutenant colonels, neither of which saw actually any service, they may be conceded as rather too high. Col. Labatt receives a total disability pension and a $5,000 a year salary on the Board of Pension Commissioners. Col. Bradbury draws down an 80 per cent. disability pension and a $2,500 a year berth in the Canadian Senate.

Just as a contrast, the Examiner would ask its readers to consider the case of an Indian member of the 21st Battalion. This young Indian, a resident of Hiawatha at that time but now living in Peterborough, enlisted with the 21st Battalion in the early months of the war. He served at the front for many months, being with the Eastern Ontario unit in much of its hardest fighting, and finally was invalided to England and then to Canada suffering from collapsed arches. He was discharge in June of last year and did not received one cent of pension—not even a gratuity, the Medical Board finding that his condition was not due to service. To-day, eleven months after his discharge, this private soldier is still suffering as the result of the condition of his feet and is unable to walk only a short distance.

How any Board could find that the disability was not due to service is a mystery in view of the fact that shortly before the war this Indian soldier was a competitor in the Examiner Lakefield to Peterborough road race, covering the ten miles in fifty-eight minutes, which can be taken as conclusive evidence that there was nothing wrong with his feet then. Furthermore, comrades of this soldier at the front recall that he marched with the 21st Battalion on its forced march with full equipment, from St. Omer to Dranoute without falling out, which is more testimony to the fact that the condition in which he is now in must have been caused by his service.

The contrast between the treatment accorded the two colonels, one of whom is a brother-in-law of the Minister of Railways and Canals, and the other a former Conservative member of Parliament, and that tendered the private soldier from Hiawatha is very striking.

It is no wonder that in reference to the Col. Labatt case that Mr. H. H. Stevens, M.P. for Vancouver Centre, should feel constrained to write as follows to Hon. N. W. Rowell, who is chairman of the special committee of the House of Pensions:

"Dear Mr. Rowell,—Referring to the attached questions and answers in the Hansard of March 20, you will observe that Col. Labatt is in receipt of a total disability pension and is also in receipt of a salary of $5,000 a year as a member of the Pensions Board.

"I cannot conceive that such a condition should be allowed to exist with the knowledge of the Government, and I feel it is but necessary to bring it to your attention to have it dealt with. I am writing you as Chairman of the Pensions Committee of the House of Commons, and I not only ask that this case be considered and rectified, but that the Pensions Committee should recommend such amendments to the regulations as would prevent the recurrence of any such case as this.

"Briefly, I may state that either Col. Labatt is in receipt of his position by virtue of misrepresentations or undue favour through powerful influence as it is clear that he is not suffering from total disability at all, and if the Pensions Board is to be swayed by influence from the outside in the granting of pensions, I warn you, as a prominent member of the Cabinet that it will result in destroying your influence as a Government, because such injustice will not be tolerated by the people."

It is surely not illogical to point out that the Indian who went overseas as a soldier, and was given a vote under the War Times Election Act, should be permanently enfranchised as a reward for his service.

SOLDIERS' INSURANCE vs. PENSIONS.

There is one matter of public policy for America at war about which there seems to be no disagreement and no inclination to debate; and that is the decisio to protect soldiers and their dependents against suffering resulting from sickness or injuries incurred in military service by means of insurance rather than pensions. The old pension system was expensive and in many ways unsatisfactory. The new system is very much more business-like, and will work far better, both for the government and for the soldiers and their families.

On June 30, 1916, there were on the roll of the pension office 235,536 names of widows of Civil War veterans. The total number of pensioners of the government at that time was 709,572.

The total amounts paid to pensioners of our various wars have been as follows: Revolutionary War, seventy million dollars; war of 1812, forty-five millions; Indian wars, thirteen millions; the Mexican war, fifty millions; the Civil war, up to 1917, $4,765,075,020; and the Spanish War and the Phillipine insurrection, fifty-three millions. Thus more than five billion dollars has been paid out in pensions for military service.

When the United States took up arms in defense of the peace of the world in this greatest of all wars, it was apparent that a better system must be devised and put into early operation. In October of 1917 a law was passed by Congress and approved by the President, by which $141,000,000 was appropriated for military and naval family allowance, $12,150,000 for compensation for disabling injuries, and $23,000,000 for life insurance. The care of the soldiers' dependents is now assured by process of law, and full provision is made for the sare of soldiers rendered helpless by sickness or wounds. And the soldier may buy $5,000 worth of insurance af $3.25 a month if he is 21, $3.45 a month if he is 30, and at corresponding rates for other ages. He may, if he so desires, take out a policy as high as $10,000. A five-thousand-dollar policy yields a monthly payment to the beneficiary of $28.57, almost equal to the highest amount that used to be paid in a pension to the relative of a private soldier.

General Pershing's army in France took out policies aggregating at least $900,000,000. The men in service at home also took advantage of the opportunity to insure their lives; at Camp Dix 98 per cent. of the officers and men took out policies. Edward N. Teall, in St. Nicholas.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There will be general satisfaction at the action of the British House of Commons in turning down the Asquith motion. The members are evidently satisfied with Lloyd George's statement and regard it as a complete refutation of General Maurice's charge.

It is announced that Hon. Albert Sevigny, former minister of Inland Revenue, is not being "provided for." What is going to do to satisfy his love for Victrolas now?

The statement that during the first three months of the present year over 860,000 tons of shipping has been constructed in allied and neutral yards, is disastrous to the enemy's submarine campaign.

Puts It Up to the Judge.

One of the city judges, who was up for re-election, made a speech in New York, and after he had touched on patriotism and the various questions of civic virtue and the keeping of a good man on the bench, he said at the close of his speech that he was ready to answer any question propounded. At this point one of the members of the club arose. "Judge," began the questioner, "there's one thing that has always bothered me, and I hope you can settle it for me so that the other members of this club will see that I am right. This is it: Does or does not a straight flush beat four of a kind under any and all circumstances?"

German Salmon Bred in Thames.

Some good things come from Germany, and one of them is the German salmon, which is now being bred on a large scale in the Thames and has the advantage o being non-migratory. At least it is non-migratory in its native waters, but it may change its habits here, says a London correspondent, as happened with the English and American brook trout which were planted in New Zealand. In English waters the brook trout is never migratory, but in New Zealand they rapidly developed into confirmed sea rovers, and have now become a fine and healthy race of sea trout, affording excellent sport and attaining unusual size.

Prussic Acid In Beans.

Mr. A. McGill, Dominion analyzist, has advised the Government to exercise care in connection with the importation of beans grown in warm climates because of the dangerously large amount of prussic acid they contain. His recommendation, which has been acted upon, forbids the delivery of any beans found to yield more than twenty parts of prussic acid per one hundred thousand. Of 532 samples of beans recently examined, 240 samples contained no prussic acid, and all other samples a small quantity. Only nineteen samples, however, contained more than twenty parts of prussic acid per 100,000. A number of cases of illness have resulted from the use of beans containing prussic acid. "These beans," says the report, "are mainly entered at the west seaboard and are finding their way eastwards, already practically monopolizing the markets as far east as Manitoba."

Funeral Expenses On The Increase

Local Undertaker Says It Costs 60 Per Cent. More to Die To-day Than Before the War

Not only has the high cost of living advanced, but there is now a higher cost of dying. "It costs," a local undertaker stated yesterday, "about 60 per cent. more to die to-day than before the war. A coffin bought 3 years ago for $90 is now $125, due to the increased price of material and labour." This timely warning may serve as an incentive to greater production, which is supposed to be a healthy occupation. As yet there has been no Order-in-Council prohibiting the hoarding of coffins against a further rise in price.

Local Dealers Instructed To Make A Report

Revenue Officers Are Busy With New Excise Taxes

Whether watches are personal adornments or useful articles, is a controversial point to be settled by experts in connection with the new excise duties imposed upon jewellry, and other articles.

Mr. William Buller, the local Inland Revenue Collector, has instructed the jewellers in making their inventory of the stock on hand of jewellry, to add a foot note stating that this does not include watches which he has in addition to the above list to the value of $.... The government will then make a fair decision whether the watches will or will not be taxed.

EXCISE OFFICERS BUSY.

Since the new Excise Duties have been imposed officers have been sent out from the head office, Peterboro to the district covered by the office, Haliburton, Northumberland, Durham, Victoria and Peterboro.

The officers have merely asked for an inventory on all stock on hand of graphophones, records, and all parts of graphophones, jewellry, autos, etc., and of all tea on hand of 1000 lbs., and over.

ADD EXCISE DUTY.

On goods coming in the ten per cent duty will be collected on the invoice, with the duty added. On payment of his new excise duty the Inland Revenue officer will give the dealer a certificate to release him at the customs.

On shipments made from the first of May the new excise duty will be paid at the point of manufacture.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL GAVE SOUVENIRS TO MAYOR AND OFFICIALS

During a short stay in Peterborough yesterday evening, the Governor-General, who had visited Lindsay during the day, received several of the city officials at his car, and again expressed his appreciation of the city's welcome to him on Monday. Those who had been invited to meet him were Mayor Duncan, City Clerk Armstrong, Chief of Police Thompson and also Lieut. D. E. Morrison who drove out in the automobile in the tour of the city on Monday. As a souvenir of his visit, His Excellency presented an autographed photograph of himself to the Mayor, and the Duchess of Devonshire gave her picture to Mrs Duncan. The token Chief Thompson received was a scarf pin, an embossed gold letter D with crown; Lieut. Morrison, a silver cigarette case, and Mr. Armstrong, a gold pencil, both engraved with the Devonshire monogram. During the evening the Governor-General went for a motor ride with the city officials, but the rain cut it short. They used Dr. McKenty's Willys-Knight, Lieut. Morrison driving. The Vicëregal party left for Ottawa at one o'clock when their coaches were picked up by the train from Toronto.

Special Music At St. Paul's On Sunday

Sunday being the 85th anniversary of St. Paul's Church, special sermons are being preached, both morning and evening, by Rev. A. B. Winchester, of Toronto. The music to be rendered by the choir will be of an exceptionally fine character. Mrs. Maurie Park (nee Miss Dorothy Allan), formerly soloist of the church, will sing "Love Eternal," by Stephen Adams, at the morning service, and Captain Park will sing "The Song of Lazarus," by Rhys Herbert. In the evening Mrs. Park will sing Rovie's "Lead thou me on," and along with Captain Park will sing Lohr's beautiful duet, "The Day is Done."

The choir, under the leadership of Mr. John Allen, will sing Henrich's "Grant us Thy Peace," the solo parts being taken by Mrs. Park, Captain Park and Mr. Douglas Carlisle. Ambrose's anthem, "O come to my heart, Lord Jesus," solo part by Mr. Carlisle, and Myles Foster's very beautiful anthem, "O for a closer walk with God," the solo and obligato being taken by Mrs. Park.

SINGING IN ENGLISH

An inherent part of the great fetish of Continental music has been the taboo put upon the English language as a medium of song.

Because a few misguided Englishmen have written trashy ballads in their own language, and because these ballads have been falsely advertised and circulated as characteristic English music, the impression has become general that every song in the English language is necessarily cheap and uninspired, and hence that English is per se incapable of high artistic musical expression. Nothing could be farther from the truth. But since practically every known opera is written in Italian, French, or German, and since the great majority of the European singing teachers are of those nationalities, the English language has been kept in the background and greeted with a storm of invective and ridicule every time it has tried to come forward into the limelight.

The time has come when all these mistaken notions are to be swept away forever, for the control of the world's music no longer is in the hands of continental nations, but of the English and Americans. And in this case there will be no question of forcing a language upon other nations as was done in the early days of Italian opera. Rather will it be the natural acceptation of that which is inherently good and proper.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

MUST DISPOSE OF HIS BUSINESS AND SERVE

LOUIS BACHRACK OF TORONTO, GIVEN UNTIL JULY 1ST TO ARRANGE HIS AFFAIRS.

Toronto, May 9. — "A $100,000 stock is not to be laughed at," said Louis Bachrack, 337 Sherbourne steet, who is managing a boot and shoe business for his brother Harry, who was conscripted, and is now in khaki, and who appeared before Judge Denton's tribunal.

"There is a big family. You can let one of your brothers run the business," said Mr. Snow, military representative.

"None of my brothers understand the shoe business. Three of my brothers are in New York in the dry goods business; one is in khaki; another reports on the 17th; and my other brother is in Class B, and liable to be called."

"That's all right; you've got lots of money, and out of seven none of you have volunteered."

"I'm not trying to get out of it, Judge; I am willing to go. All I want is a little time to wind up the business. We have a $100,000 stock, and we pay $10,000 rent. I'm sacrificing something!"

"How much time do you want?" asked the Judge.

"Six months," was the reply.

"Well, I'll tell you what I'll do," said the Judge. "I'll give you a little time to wind up this business, you swear you won't ask for any more time?" asked the Judge.

"No, Judge; I won't ask you for any more time."

"All right then, I'll give you until July 1, 1918.

Big Deputation To Visit Ottawa Tuesday Next

Will Protest Against the New Military Service Regulations

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 10—The united farmers of Ontario, who are coming to Ottawa in big force on Tuesday next to protest against the new military service regulations, are to be reinforced by deputations from certain counties in the Province of Quebec. It is stated this morning that the Eastern townships which already protested some days ago, will have delegates here. In addition representatives from other Quebec rural constituencies will be present and will co-operate with the members of the big deputation in pressing their cause.

It is probable that the gathering will be too large o be accommodated in any of the committee rooms and there is a move on foot to have the Commons chamber thrown open to it even though the House is normally in session all day.

This is the second attempt that has been made to deprive the Bank of Commerce of one of its awnings.

Food And Health

ARTICLE II

In the last article on this subject, we discussed the two-fold purpose of food, the five food principles and examples of each.

In this article we purpose bringing to your attention the value of mineral matter in the diet.

It is found that when rats were fed on food free of mineral matter, the animals lived only a couple of weeks. We conclude, therefore that mineral matter must be necessary for life.

An outbreak of scurvy during the South African war when investigated, was found to be due to the exhaustion of the supply of fresh vegetables.

There are three mineral products in food that the diet is apt to lack unless care is taken. If these are omitted, perfect health is impossible. These are iron, phosphosus and calcium.

We will first consider the iron. The adult body contains only three grams of iron, yet it is very necessary. It is chiefly found in the red corpuscles of the blood and its work is to assist in carrying oxygen to the different part of the body. Without the iron, the body will be deprived of oxygen, and without oxygen we cannot live.

KINDS OF IRON

There are two kinds of iron—inorganic and organic. The inorganic iron is given in medicines, and has to be changed before it can be used by the red blood corpuscles. It is useful as a stimulant and is of more value when food is rich in organic iron. It is also only an intermittant stimulant. If taken continuously it ceases to act. The organic iron is found in the food, and is in the form nature intended us to use iron.

Since iron is, therefore, so important to life, the diet should contain it in abundance.

Some examples of foods rich in iron are—entire wheat flour meat, fish, yolk of egg, any green vegetable (spinach and lettuce particularly) and dried vegetables.

Another mineral material important in the food is phosphorus. It is necessary for growth and is found chiefly in such foods as milk, eggs, wheat, oats and dried vegetables.

Calcium plays a large part in relation to the health of the body.

It has been seen that if an animal is given food deficient in calcium, the bones seldom used soon become perforated. The calcium had been withdrawn from these to supply the need elsewhere. The teeth are not properly formed and this prevents proper mastication and digestion.

Lack of calcium is much more evident in growing children than adults because so much is then needed for the rapid formation of bone. If not given, diseases like Rickett's is apt to result. Growth is arrested and abnormal conditions often appear.

Children are often given lime water to supply the calcium. It would be well if it were realised that one glass of milk contains more calcium than the same amount of lime water, and therefore would be of more value to the child because it contains not only the other important mineral constituents, but also all the other food principles.

Five Years For Bank Manager

Canadian Press:

TORONTO, May 10.—Five years in Portsmouth Penitentiary was the sentence imposed to-day on Louis Maynard, a former branch manager of the Dominion Bank here, who pleaded guilty to the theft of $53,000 bank funds. The restitution of $3,200 has been made. Maynard blamed gambling on horses for his downfall. He concealed the thefts by manipulating customers' accounts.

Young's Point Items Of Interest

YOUNG'S POINT, May 10.—Miss J. Phelan, of Peterborough, is spending the week, the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. E. Kearney.

Visitors to the village on Sunday were: Dr. and Mrs. Gibson, of Lakefield; Mr. Con. Young and Mr. Leo Young, of Peterborough; Messrs. S. Perdue and John Young, of Ennismore; Miss Mollie Young, of Peterborough; Misses Clara Young and Agnes Scollard, of Ennismore; Miss McNamara, of Peterborough; Dr. J. C. Smith, of Lakefield, and Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Morrison, of Lakefield.

First Trip.

The steamer "Empress" made its first run of the season to-day with a load of freight from Lakefield to Mount Julian.

Miss A. Phelan, of Peterborough, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Jas. Kearney, for a few days this week.

Mr. Stanley Hockaday has gone to Kingston to report for duty.

Mr. Knox, of Peterborough, was in the village during the week.

The tug "Ajax" made its first trip of the season from Lakefield to Young's Point to-day with two scows in tow.

Mr. and Mrs. Jos. McArthy, of Peterborough, spent the week-end visiting friends in the village.

Only Two Arrests By The Dominion Police In City

Several arrests have been made by Mr. John Eva in his combing of the local factories for military delinquents. Others had neglected to arm themselves with marriage certificates or exemption cards and were ordered to report at the police station, presenting their passports which they said they had left at home. On the whole the Peterborough men have shown a comparatively fine record. Last night the De Laval factory was visited, one gate was closed, and the employees filed through the other, showing their "papers" as they passed out. To-day the following factories were covered: The Brinton Carpet, G. Walter Green, Wm. Hamilton Bonner-Worth, Peterborough Lock Company, and at five o'clock the C.G.E. plant.

Mr. Eva, who like the other Dominion police sent here, is a returned man, has been considerate and courteous in the performance of his duty. He remarked that the men should carry their exemption cards all the time, especially if they are travelling from one place to another.

Omemee Man Arrested.

An example of this was shown this afternoon when Detective Newhall and P. C. Wigg held up a young man from Omemee who maintained that he had left his exemption sheet at home.

"There is no alternative but to take you around to the station," said the Detective, and P. C. Wigg marched the young man off.

Mr. D. Hunt, of the investigating branch of the Dominion Police, is also working in the city.

KILLED 45 ENEMY AVIATORS.

French Suffer Loss in Death of Three Famed Air Men.

PARIS, May 9.—French aviation has suffered a great loss in the death within a few days of three aces, who between them had accounted for more than 45 Germans. Lieut. Chaput, with 16 Germans to his credit, was killed Tuesday, while Sub-Lieut. Demeuldre, with 13 victories, was killed in the region of the Somme yesterday. Captain Mieffre met death while directing an infantry attack from a very low altitude. He was struck by a machine-gun bullet fired from the ground.

HIGH TREASON.

Twelve Dresden Socialists Were Sentenced.

AMSTERDAM, May 9.—Twelve Dresden members of the Independent Socialist party of Germany have been convicted of high treason by the Imperial Court at Leipsic, a despatch from that city to the Vorwaerts of Berlin reports. They distributed pamphlets last year advocating the overthrow of the German Empire, and helped to bring about the strikes of last summer, advocating them as a means of obtaining peace. They were sentenced to penal servitude for terms varying from eighteen months to eight years.

HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES.

Never sweeten a war bread.

Custard can be sweetened with honey.

Apples will form the basis of almost any jelly.

Use raisins for sweetening in rice pudding.

Any banana can be used for making marmalade.

Good salads can be made of potatoes and salt mackerel.

Try browned bread crumbs and cream for a breakfast food.

Stale bread can be used as a basis for many great dishes.

Uneaten cereals can be used to thicken soups, stews or gravies.

Alkali In Shampoos Bad For Washing Hair

Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else, that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

An Open Evening Is To Be Held In Queen Mary School

Interesting and Instructive Event Will Take Place One Week From To-night

THE PROGRAMME

On Friday evening, May 17th, the Parents' Circle and staff of the Queen Mary school are holding an open evening in the school, to which parents and adult friends interested in the school system are invited. An informal musical programme will be provided by the pupils of the school, also several orchestra numbers by the violin pupils of Miss Logan, who are in attendance at the Queen Mary school. Addresses will be given by members of the Board and others.

The Object.

The primary object of the occasion is to give the public an opportunity of becoming familiar with the educational facilities of the city. The Queen Mary school was visited by the Vice-Regal party on Monday last and was very favourably commented upon. A feature of the evening will be an exhibition of first aid work inaugurated in the school by the Parents' Circle. A collection will be taken for the Red Cross Society.

Thousands More Chicks Produced By Poultry Men

The contribution of the Peterborough Poultry Association to the Greater Production Campaign is represented by many hundreds of chickens more than were raised last year. The members have been working their incubators to the limit, selling the young chicks to citizens, some of whom are venturing into this field for the first time. As a result there will be a greater number of hens for market and for the egg production during the coming winter and next spring. For example, the secretary of the Association, Mr. A. Breault, has already turned out over 1,500 chicks, and other members have done as well. Mr. George Paxman has added one hundred ducks which will be added to the city's meat fare in the early winter. When the Association decided some months ago to do their bit in the for greater production, they outlined a programme which they have faithfully followed, and the good work is still in progress.

Combing Won't Rid Hair Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this to-night, and by morning, most it not all, of your dandruff will be gone and thre or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

Board Of Works Will Grade And Gravel Chamberlen Street

Practically Decided on This Necessary Improvement In Yesterday's Tour of the City—Streets Are in Good Condition—Little Work Required.

The Board of Works in their annual tour of the city yesterday decided to grade and gravel Chamberlen street from Alfred to Park street. Last year it was dug up and severely mussed when the sewer was laid, and during the fall and spring has been in bad condition. Ald. Weir, chairman of the Board was the guide and pathfinder of the expedition which included Mayor Duncan, Ald. McIntyre and Edgar, City Clerk Armstrong, City Engineer Parsons and Street Commissioner Evans. Ald. Taylor was out for a short time in the afternoon, Ald. Langford made part trip in both periods, Ald. Worth covered the West Ward, and Ald. Dobbin arrived in time for dinner at the White House.

The streets were generally in good condition and a feature of the trip was the small amount of work that was ordered to be done.

The Henry Hope factory premises were visited, and it is likely that the company will be permitted to erect the fence which they have asked the city to approve.

The Boundary Road from Sherbrooke south to Chamberlen street is in good condition as a result of the grading in which the city and township of North Monaghan co-operated. The upper section would be the better of a similar treatment.

BRANTFORD CAR MEN WANT HIGHER WAGES

BRANTFORD, May 9.—Last evening the street railway men appealed for higher wages to the Brantford Municipal Railway Commissioners. A long conference was held, following which the announcement was made by Chairman Turnbull that the matter was under consideration and would be taken up again in a few days. Nothing further could be said.

With Other Councils

The Ontario Hydro Commission has been asked to make a survey of the Windsor street railway system, with a view to control of the lines being assumed in 1922, when the franchise expires.

JUDGEMENT DEFERRED

Judgement was deferred by the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board in the case of Malahide Township, which asked that it be relieved from the erection of a bridge. Chairman McIntyre said that the ratepayers had a strong case.

WILL SEND DEPUTATION

Farmers of Sidney Township are sending a deputation to Ottawa to present their views on the amendment to the M.S.A.

Joseph Mantell Celebrates His 108th Birthday

Mr. Joseph Mantell, a one-time resident of Peterborough, is celebrating to-day his 108th birthday at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. J. C. Edwards, 49 Rainsford road, Toronto, who formerly lived here on Charlotte street. Mr. Mantell has just finished planting his war garden, and this morning had more time than usual to devote to reading the war news. He is as keenly interested in the events of the time as ever. On December 7 last he cast his vote for the Union Government, and was one of the earliest voters.

He tells with glee of the wild experiences of the early days of voting in Canada. When living in London he had often walked thirty miles to Long Point to cast his vote. On other occasions he has loaned his boots to his friends to go to the polls, as often there were not enough good walking boots to go around. At Cobourg when he entered the polling booth, Grits and Tories would be lined up on both sides and the voter would be asked how he intended to vote. If there was a majority of his own party around him he was perfectly safe, but if not he was given a good thrashing, the men even resorting to the use of rails from the old rail fences.

Mr. Mantell was born in Edmonton, May 10, 1810, and was christened in the old church of Hendon, then near London, England, but now a suburb of the city. He remembers his mother telling the children that if they were not good Napoleon would get them and he remembers distinctly the battle of Waterloo. Eighty-two years ago he came to Canada, and walked along the shore from Quebec to Toronto. It took him three weeks to do this. He served at the time of the rebellion in 1837. Later he lived in London for a number of years, then in Ailsonburg, and finally in Toronto for the last ten years with his granddaughter, Mrs. Juvisor Edwards. His hearing is not good, but otherwise he seems to have possession of every faculty. He has one daughter and two sons living, seven grandchildren and six great grandchildren.

Mayor And Chief Accuse Each Other

Reciprocal Allegations of Inebriety Before Judge at Haileybury.

HAILEYBURY, May 9.—The investigation into the charges laid by the Mayor of Haileybury against the Chief of Police here has been concluded before Judge Hayward, but a decision has not yet been handed down.

The Mayor charged the Chief with inebriety, while the latter, in turn, denies the charges, and states in his evidence that he had been called to the Mayor's house and found the Mayor lying on the bed drunk and in possession of a revolver, and claiming to be neglected by other members of the household, in that they failed to get him what he wanted, his desire being, according to the evidence adduced, a glass of milk or a cup of tea.

A moment after shaking hands with the Mayor, the Chief of Police stated in his evidence, he was attacked from behind by E. C. Wright, a brother of the Mayor, whom he promptly knocked into the corner in a brisk fistic encounter. The Mayor, the witness declared, then endeavoured to interfere, but was pushed back upon the bed, after which the Chief says he left the house.

BOARD WILL ENCOURAGE USE OF FISH IN PETERBOROUGH

Special Fish Week Campaign Will Open on May 20th—Use More Fish.

FOOD SUPPLY

Ottawa, May 10. — In connection with efforts of the Canada Food Board (Fish Section) to increase the use of fish as a substitute for meats needed by the armies, and to help a national industry, arrangements have been made with the big Atlantic producers for largely increased supplies of all kinds of fish, including cod, haddock, skate, pollock, mackerel, herring, etc., each in season.

"We are encouraging the increased use of both lake and sea fish, but the ultimate aim of our motto, 'A Pound of Fish per week per Person,' can only be realized if sea fish are used more extensively," said E. O. Sawyer, Jr., of the Fish Section, in a statement to the Examiner's representative to-day.

"Through our efforts Atlantic fish are to be shipped direct from Canso to Toronto in express refrigerator cars, and will be distributed by the F. T. James Company of that city. Naturally this refrigerator service will result in shipments arriving in much better condition than would small isolated shipments sent to inland cities, where there is delay at transfer points.

FISH IN SEASON.

"With direct distribution, or as nearly direct as possible, sea fish with quality and flavor more thoroughly preserved, will be made available to the consumer at the lowest possible price considering the cost of production. Cod and haddock are in season at the present time and are being landed on the Atlantic Coast in large quantities, in fact more fish are received than can be consumed in Canada unless the present rate is rapidly increased.

"It is vital that we use these fish, and save other meats more easily shipped overseas for the armies in the field and for our Allies, whose food supply has been sadly depleted by the ravages of war.

"We are naturally a fish eating people when fish are available as is shown by the fact that Great Britain in normal times consumes 59 pounds of fish per capita per annum; Canada's normal consumption has been only 20 pounds, and that of the United States 16 pounds. The reason for this lies in the fact that a large percentage of the population is located at a distance from the sources of supply and refrigerator distribution has not been built up to meet the demand.

FRESH SUPPLIES.

"The Canada Food Board has spent a great deal of time and effort to better the situation regarding fish food, and is now being assured that an ample supply is available, distribution facilities are improved, and the rest is up to the consumer and the retail dealer. If the consumer will place orders in advance and use fish regularly excellent results will be forthcoming. Advance orders will enable the retailer to place his orders accordingly and will insure delivery of fresh supplies as needed and prevent loss through over stocking or delay caused by insufficient supply."

The Canada Food Board's fish cook book has been in so great a demand by consumers that the first edition has been exhausted and a second edition is now being prepared which will be ready for distribution within a short time. This book points out the necessity of using cold instead of warm water to thaw frozen fish and includes recipes for cooking all of the varieties of sea and lake fish which will be found on the market. Efforts of the Board to increase the use and reduce the price of sea foods have met with marked success throughout the Dominion. Pacific fish are now available at prices which enable them to be sold to the consumer at about 10c a pound as far east as Winnipeg, and Atlantic fish are available under similar conditions as far west as the western boundary of Ontario.

In cooperation with the F. T. James Company, the Canada Food Board is beginning a special Fish Week Campaign in Peterboro beginning on May 20th. Special fish widow cards have been sent to the Mayor for distribution, bearing the picture of a regular old blue-nose fisherman in oil skins, shouting "Ahoy, Canadians, are you eating more fish these war time days?" with the added injunction — "Use more fish and save meat for the fighters."

Labour Shortage In Manitoba

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., May 10.— Amendment to Military Service Act cancelling exemptions of farmers' sons, created a deplorable shortage of farm labour in Manitoba, J. A. Bowman, Provincial Supt. of Immigration declared to-day. Conditions are getting worse all the time, according to Bowman.

Government After Wheat Stocks

Special to The Examiner:

WINNIPEG, Man., May 10.—Canadian government agents began to-day a systematic search of western farms to secure stocks of wheat held by farmers estimated at twenty million bushels. Now that seeding is over farmers must give up their stocks. There are large quantities held by wealthy Russian and German farmers in Middle and Western Saskatchewan.

HOMES TO BE BUILT FOR SKILLED ARTISANS.

Brantford Concern Plans to Spend Nearly Half Million.

BRANTFORD, May 9.—A tract of land, some 35 acres, situated off Dufferin Avenue, has been secured by the Dufferin Parks, Limited, of which the Dominion Steel Products Company is the holding company. On this tract, which will be laid out on plans prepared by H. Dunnington Grobb, landscape artist and town planner, 100 new homes will be erected, with all conveniences, and at a minimum cost of $3,000 each. These homes will be sold to skilled mechanics who have been employees of the company for at least a year, on easy terms of payment, and at practically cost, plus carrying charges. The move is part of a plan to secure from 600 to 700 skilled machinists for the Dominion Steel Products Company by offering homes for the best type of artisan citizens. It will mean the spending of $450,000 on development, and as a partial result within thirteen months the sum of $2,000,000 will be paid out in wages from this plant. The houses will be built from twenty different designs, and will be constructed in some cases of brick and in other of tile and stucco.

The scratch team of more or less ancient cricketers that represented Peterboro yesterday clearly disproved the theory that evolved from Jim Jeffries' defeat that the vanquished never come back, especially at a certain shadow line of age. Some of the Peterboro men have long since passed into the deepening shade of decline, but they bowled, batted and covered the Grove campus yesteray as lithely and easily as they did in their prime. Walter Stocker and Fred Dela Fosse were in good bowling form; Dr. Young hit to all corners of the field. Mr. Whitehouse's score of 23, not out, led the list.

The Grove School boys will play the return game in Peterboro shortly. With Rev. Mr. MacKenzie they proved splendid hosts.

BIG LEAGUE STARS IN THE NAVY TEAM ARE SENT TO SEA

BOSTON, May 9.—Jack Barry's Boston Navy Yard team received a body blow to-day when orders were issued from Rear-Admiral Wood which detached six of the players from the command of Captain Rush at the Navy Yard.

"Rabbit" Maranville, "Mike" McNally, Herbert Penock, Lawton Witt, Leo Callahan and Del Gainor were sent to Admiral Wood's office. In case of other sailors this generally means sea duty at once. The Navy Yard team were having practice in the Harvard Stadium when orders were received. By noontime they were all enrolled. Several days ago orders came from Washington which authorized the detachment of baseball players as they became available for sea.

LONGBOAT YEARNS FOR A MILITARY MEDAL

NEW YORK, May 9.—In a letter received in this city to-day from Tom Longboat, the famous Canadian Indian says he is serving as a "runner" for the Canadian forces and that he craves to do two things before the Huns get him. "I would like to win a Military Medal to go with my track prizes," said Tom, "and I would also like to meet the man who impersonated me when enlisting in the United States army."

Longboat says he has been in the fighting and has been knocked over by the concussion of bursting shell's twice, but suffered no serious hurt on either occasion. Longboat's letter says that Teddy Wood of Toronto, the holder of the world's record for running fifteen miles, met death in the line of duty. He was in a dugout that was struck by a shell from one of the Boche "heavies" and was killed along with several officers for whom he was acting as an orderly.

TO CO-OPERATE IN RESEARCH

British Plan on Method of Bringing About Best Possible Results for Various Industries.

Realizing that many industrial firms are barred from the benefits of scientific research into their particular lines of activity by the great cost, reports Consul Franklin D. Hale, Huddersfield, England, the Committee of the Privy Council for Scientific and Industrial Research proposes the introduction of the co-operative idea. In this way a firm that is unable to bear the entire expense of research could contribute to the cost and share in the benefits accruing to an industry as a whole. It is planned to establish trade research associations in England to be formed as needed for each industry or group of industries, and aided by certain funds which the committee has in charge. One association is about to be organized for the cotton industry, and others will be formed as soon as possible for the wool, flax, oil, and photographic industries.

The work that has already been accomplished through the committee's efforts, according to Mr. Hale, includes the discovery of three kinds of optical glass, the investigation of light alloys for use in aircraft, and the production of a new hard porcelain from purely British raw material. Researches into the recovery of tin are expected to save that industry a very large amount each year.

BUILD SHIP IN FIVE MONTHS

Others of British Standardized Type to Be Turned Out in About Sixteen Weeks Time.

The first of the standardized merchant ships built to order for the British government recently went through successful trials of a very exhaustive character, says the Scientific American. The type has been designed to provide a good cargo-carrier, in the shortest time, and with the least expenditure of material. The keel of this trial ship was laid last February, and in less than six months the ship was completed, loaded and ready for trial.

The standardized vessels, which are of 8,000 tons capacity, are built in two types—one a single-deck for grain and the other a two-deck ship for general cargo. It is also intended to build two similar types, each of 5,000 and 3,000 tons carrying capacity. Not only the hulls but the engines are standardized. They have extra large hatchways to facilitate quick loading and discharging—a most important feature. The first vessel was built in five months' time, and it is expected that future vessels will be turned out in from four to four-and-one-half months.

Women as Jockeys.

Since jockeys from the race courses in England have gone, almost to a man, to the firing line, women have professed themselves as eager to take their places. Some already are trained for the purpose, among them not a few who, in more prosperous and less belligerent days, rode to hounds over English fields and meadows. Many of these, confident in their riding ability and skill, have petitioned the stewards of England's governing jockey club—the arbiters of the turf—to grant them jockeys' licenses. Recent reports bore the information that the stewards are giving the petition serious consideration and that there is strong probability of their granting it.

Knew Teddy by His Teeth.

Col. Theodore Roosevelt has objected at all times to being referred to as a one-time president; but that only by facial adornments is he known in some sections may be even worse. It was at a church, where he was on the program, that an elderly woman approached the doorman and asked if "that there man" was going to speak. "What man?" asked the attendant. "I can't remember his name," was the reply, "but it's the chap I always thought would make a good advertisement for a dentist. He's got wonderful teeth, and always shows them." "Yes," answered the doorman, "he's going to speak."

TOO MANY TONGUES

Language of the United States Is Urged for All.

Suggestion Is Offered That All of the Earth's People Learn to Speak English.

The next thing that must be done in the way of world efficiency is to get rid of a lot of languages that are floating around to the restraint of trade.

It will be the most difficult feat of all, but it must be done, just the same. This thing of every bunch of people across a river or over a mountain speaking a different language from their near neighbors is the biggest handicap the world has to contend with today, asserts a writer in the Los Angeles Times Magazine.

Moreover, this surplus of languages is the one thing, above all others, that has caused misunderstandings, wars, strategies, spoils, hell-raising, and hatreds generally.

The biggest bar against the friendly relations of one people with another has been the difference in their mode of human speech. It started with the building of the Tower of Babel when the Lord confused the people on purpose because of their wickedness, and he took the best way possible to accomplish the result of the divine will.

But, now that God's people have been making a fairly good stab at getting right with him again—all of us, and our fathers before us for centuries—it is reasonable to suppose that God will let us ditch that Tower of Babel stuff if we make a real good honest try at it.

America itself—the melting pot of nations—is a striking proof that the thing can be done. Here have they come from every land and all the seven seas, the children of all races, speaking every tongue known to man, and before they know it they are all speaking good United States.

Then, why not start a serious movement to get the whole world, here and elsewhere, speaking United States—or English, if that's a better way to say it?

It won't be easy, but it certainly can be done. And when it is done, this will be a happier, a more peaceful, and a more prosperous earth on which to live.

We recommend English—that is to say, the way we speak it here in America—as the universal language, because it is, without doubt, the best language of all, if only for the reason that it is made up of almost all the others.

In French, Russian, German, Spanish, Italian, and all foreign tongues it usually requires 17 words or more to say what we say in one. The Welsh, for instance, have a word with 19 letters in it that we can put in four letters. These other folks fog up their larynges and wear out their nasal passages saying things what we say better with a mere breath and a touch of the tongue against the teeth.

Unless you were born to it, or unless they caught you very young, you might as well try to learn to be a circus tumbler as to learn French or German and earn a living in the bargain. The thing will take up all your time while the potatoes go to pot and the cobwebs grow across the store door. And, in the end, you will find that you haven't learned these lines of talk, anyway.

The thing to do is to make yourself as nearly a master of English as possible, and then force the other fellows to speak our language for their own good.

Horse Breeding in Brazil.

Any project which has for its purpose the betterment of animal breeding is certain to attract attention in Brazil, since the country has come to realize its full possibilities in ranching and similar operations, writes Consul General Alfred L. M. Bottschalk, Rio de Janeiro. The development has been going on slowly and almost imperceptibly for several years. Some ranch owners at their own expense have imported various types of cattle and experimented individually with crossbreeding. Work in this direction also has been done by the National Society of Agriculture in Rio de Janeiro, seconded by state cattle associations and ranchmen's leagues.

Recently a commision appointed by the president of Brazil for the study and conservation of the national resources has been at work on a census of live stock, taken from the reports of municipalities.

Oil-Yielding Plants in Denmark.

At a large meeting of farmers' associations recently held in Copenhagen, there was much discussion about the planting of oil-yielding plants, such as flax and hemp. There has been a general tendency toward increasing the areas planted to grain, but on account of the growing scarcity of fats and edible oils, it now seems to be desirable to grow more oil-yielding plants, especially as the residue left after pressing out the oil (oil cakes) will help to supply the great deficiency in cattle feeds.

Curious Medals.

In Holland curio hunters are giving quite large prices for medals struck to commemorate events which, very inconsiderately, did not come off. This is a new hobby for Dutchmen provided by their neighbor Germany. The medals have either never been publicly issued or have been withdrawn upon the failure of the military operations they were meant to celebrate. One of them represented the capture of Verdun. It is not at all easy to obtain.

A Chinese Pen.

The Chinese pen is a brush made of soft hair, which is best adapted for painting the curiously-formed letters of the Chinese alphabet.

MALE OSTRICH BUILDS NEST

Sets on Eggs at Night During the Incubation Which Lasts Forty to Fifty Days.

After pairing, the ostrich begins to make his nest. It is the male alone that performs this duty. To do it, he squats upon the ground, and, balancing himself upon his breastbone, scratches up the earth with his legs and throws it behind him. When he has dug out enough on one side to suit him he turns round and begins to dig on another side, and continues this operation until he has made a hole large enough for him to sit in comfortably. A few days after the nest is finished the female begins to lay one egg every alternate day for eighteen or twenty days. She then rests for a while, which time varies from four to ten days, and then lays more. A pair of ostriches yield about forty eggs, though it is not unusual for a well-fed well-kept pair to yield fifty to sixty eggs. The eggs are placed so as to leave no space between them. The male and the female brood alternately. At night the male is always on the nest, as it possesses greater warmth than the female.

These birds perform their duties with the greatest skill, without any noise or breakage of the eggs. The incubation lasts forty-five days on an average, sometimes fifty days, but never continues beyond that. When the chicklings hatch out they can be heard trying to break the shell of the egg. Sometimes they succeed in doing so, but usually the father breaks the egg under the breast bone, tears the inside skin with his bill, and frees the chickling. Upon first reaching the air the chickling remains limp and weak. But the warmth of the parent soon revives it, and a few hours afterward it begins to run about, exercising its long legs, toppling over at each step, and recommencing again its stumbling journey. Four days after their hatching the chicklings begin to eat. They run after insects and swallow small pebbles. The father and mother do not help their little ones to find food.

Bluff of Foreman Failed.

Two of the nocturnal hosemen of the street cleaning department were engaged in wetting down the pavement near New York's busy corner at 45th street and 5th avenue. They were enjoying their work as usual, wetting no one and scaring everyone, when the foreman came strolling along and looked them over. A small group waiting for a bus hoped that the happy soakers were about to be scolded and the hope was gratified. "Well, well," called the foreman, testily, "you'se guys ought to be up to 46th street. What about ye?" "Aw, we got to wet it down, ain't we?" called the younger of the hosemen. "We ain't lingering around for the love of it." The foreman walked over to the speaker as his companion turned off the water. "Don't get answering me back," said the foreman. "If you want to get anywhere in this department, just do what you're told to do and say nothing." "Aw, forget it," answered the young hoseman again. "I ain't trying to get nowhere in this department. I been drafted. By the time you get to be a superintendent I'll be a general in the army. Roll your hoop, boss, you're talking like a hero."

Manchus Have Beans to Burn.

Bean-cake is cheaper than coal at Harbin, Manchuria, and the Chinese there are now using it as fuel, says the Japan Chronicle. Coal costs 90 kopecks a pood and bean-cake only 75 kopeks, while it is contended the latter throws out more heat. As all the bean mills have large stocks on hand and are increasing them daily, there is a tendency for its use as fuel to spread.

Plants That Resemble Sheep.

"Some of the most singular plants in the world," says a writer in the Wide World, "are the vegetable sheep of New Zealand. These are known to science as Raoulia eximia, and although they are of such a strange habit of growth they are members of the daisy tribes. The vegetable sheep grow at high altitudes, usually on some bleak mountain slope, which may be five thousand feet above sea-level. The whole plant is a compact mass of stems densely covered with small woolly leaves. So closely do the Raoulias resemble sheep that experienced shepherds will often climb a long way up the mountain thinking that they see some missing member of their flock huddled against a rock, only to discover that they have been deceived by a plant! During a recent exhibition at Christchurch, in New Zealand, some specimens of the vegetable sheep were collected for the show. The plants are often large and heavy, and it required the efforts of half a dozen strong men to secure some fine examples of the Raoulias.

FALL WHEAT A FAILURE.

Poor Showing in York, Simcoe and Peel Counties.

TORONTO, May 9.—C. F. Bailey, assistant Deputy Minister of Agriculture, has just returned from a tour of inspection of the farms of the counties of York, Peel and Simcoe, and states that the fall wheat situation is very serious. In a tour of 225 miles Mr. Bailey only saw about three good fields of fall wheat.

"Not more than 10 per cent. of the wheat sown will yield anything," said Mr. Bailey. "Many of the farmers have sown spring wheat, and others have ploughed up the ground altogether and are putting in oats, barley or some other grains."

Mr. Bailey accounted for the poor showing of fall wheat as due to the lateness in sowing it last fall, and adverse weather conditions.

"One fact is very noticeable," said Mr. Bailey, "and that is the response of the farmers to the call for increased production. In the distance travelled I never saw so many acres under cultivation.

Training for War.

If Englishmen considered the football field as the place to win their battles, Prussians have always held that the best way to prepare for victory is by training their young officers in the hunting field, notes a writer. Since medieval times the chase, especially on the continent of Europe, has been advocated by the school of warriors. In the old days, when men were only interested in fighting, and when there weren't really enough wars to keep a healthy feudal nobleman continuously occupied and happy, warring upon wild animals was discovered to be the next best thing to warring on humans.

Foch's Reserve Forces Includes 250,000 Italians

Violent Artillery Fighting on the Western Front—Russian Despatches State that Peace has Been Declared With the Ukraines.

SATURDAY MORNING BULLETINS

WASHINGTON, May 11.— Advices say Foch's reserve forces include two hundred and fifty thousand Italians.

PEACE DECLARED.

LONDON, May 11. — Russian despatches state that peace has been declared with the Ukraines. Hostilities have ceased on the Veronezh, Kursk and Briansk fronts, and peace delegations will meet within a few days.

AN APPRECIATION.

LONDON, May 11.—Field Marshal Haig has issued a special order of the day, conveying his appreciation of "the splendid service rendered by the Royal Artillery at all stages of the Somme and Lys battles, despite the difficult conditions of a defensive fight against greatly superior numbers."

BULK OF GERMAN FORCES ARE ON THE AMIENS FRONT

Indicating Probable Renewal of the Attack There—British Lost Heavily Since the Opening of the Offensive.

GERMAN PROPAGANDA REPUTED

LONDON, May 11.—"The bulk of the German reserves are still on the Amiens front, indicating a probable renewal of the attack there," a representative of General Radcliffe, Director of Military Operations, announced.

In the period between March 21, when the German offensive was begun, and April 25, the losses of the French were only one-fourth to one-fifth those of the British. Since April 25, there has been no reason to believe the losses of the French have been heavier than those of the British (the British losses since March 21 were estimated on May 4 by the British Military Mission at Washington at nearly 350,000).

This information was given out in refutation of German propaganda assertions that the French have been bearing the brunt of the battle.

CATTLE MARKET

Cattle prices have held firm all through the week at the present high record levels. The closing market for the week was as strong for all classes of cattle as at any time this season, and there is very little prospect that conditions will be any different for some time to come. While it is true that there are more cattle on the farms this season than there were last season at this time the demand for butcher cattle never was so great as it is now. With improving transport conditions, which means that the submarine menace is appreciably less than it was some months ago there seems no limit to the demand on the Canadian packing houses for fresh meats for the allied powers in Europe. So long as this condition lasts there s very little chance for lower markets in the live cattle trade. Should the present demands continue the supplies of grass cattle which will begin to come on the market in a month or six weeks from now will be entirely inadequate to effect any material lowering of the prices. The range of prices this week for butcher cattle has held steady to firm from $13 to $14.50 for anything choice, while choice heavy steers have still held their own anywhere from $14.50 to $15.65, and extra fancy quality yearling baby beef around $16.

The calf trade has been firm.

Sheep and lambs strong, but very small markets.

Hogs have again climbed to the high point of $21, fed and watered.

Marriages in England.

The war has resulted in 200,000 English people being married between August, 1914, and June, 1917, who in the ordinary course would not have married. The marriage rate for 1915 was the highest recorded, 19.4. These figures are given out by Sir Bernard Mallet, registrar general of births, deaths and marriages in England.

The Last Word.

Arthur Train, the novelist, put down a German newspaper with an impatient grunt. "It says here," he explained, "that it is Germany who will speak the last word in this war." Then the novelist laughed angrily and added: "Yes, Germany will speak the last word in the war, and that last word will be 'Kamerad!' "

OLD IRON ON BATTLEFIELDS

Metals That Are Supposed to Accumulate in Great Quantities Being Salvaged and Used Again.

Considerable speculation has been going the rounds as to the amount of scrap iron and steel that is accumulating on the battlefields of Europe, and how it is to be disposed of.

American companies which regularly deal in such old material have for some time been looking forward to the harvest to be reaped from these battlefields after the war, says London Tit-Bits. These hopes have now been rather rudely shocked by observers recently returned from the front, who state that this matter is now being handled by the respective governments.

According to the systems now established in modern warfare, it is stated, a salvage corps is daily going over all the ground near the battle front exposed to fire, and is gathering all the debris discarded by the contending armies. None of the scrap is neglected, with steel worth 1 pence to 1½ pence per pound, and copper and other metals in proportion. All the metals are taken to shops in the rear, and there worked into the various munitions that a modern army uses.

All the lead that is fired is practically lost, as a bullet traveling at a velocity of 2,000 feet or more per second hurles itself so deep into any object it hits as to be lost entirely. Other metals, however, such as tangled steel from wrecked motor cars, large pieces of shells, bits of copper, pieces of aluminum, etc., are carefully collected and later turned into usable condition.

Officer Ignored Orders.

Early in the war when Field Marshal John French and General Joffre were straining every nerve to hold back the German advance which they did finally at the Marne a French general, so the story goes, refused to open orders sent by an officer who had been promoted over his head. The message, like the dispatch in the Franco-Prussian war, was "lost" and a division, which was left without support, was almost annihilated. The story goes that the general was ordered shot.

Too Busy to Help.

Even in war times a heroine is often without influence in her own home town, writes a correspondent. A young woman nurse gave up a paying practice and offered her services to her country. She is now nursing "Jackies" in a naval hospital, and, finding how much pleasure the convalescents take in music, she wrote home to her father to put a notice in the local paper asking for records if anyone had duplicates or discards.

It is a place of about 8,000 inhabitants, but not one record did she receive in answer to her appeal.

"Probably they are all too busy with war work," she commented, humorously.

HOW TO BUY SHOES
and how to take care of them afterwards

MOST people could add ten per cent to the life of their shoes by buying the proper shape and the right size and then giving the shoes more care afterwards. That really means a saving of ten per cent. An ill-fitting shoe, for example, not only soon loses its shape and appearance but it does not wear well.

So, first of all, be sure to get a shoe that is the proper shape for your foot, take care that it is exactly long enough and wide enough. Take your dealer's advice about this. He sells thousands of pairs of shoes a year, and by experience can tell you the shape and the size of shoe you should have.

Each time you buy a pair of shoes, let your dealer measure your feet. Sometimes the size you think you wear is not the size that will give the correct fit, because sizes are not to be relied upon absolutely. There is bound to be some variation in sizes. The workman may stretch the leather occasionally a little tighter over the last when he is making a certain shoe, thus reducing the space inside the shoe slightly below the normal standard.

It is also wise when you are buying a shoe to consider the conditions under which you will wear it. If you will be tramping through the mud and slush, get a heavy shoe that we make for that kind of wear. If you want a stylish walking shoe for ordinary street or office wear, buy a lighter, more shapely A.H.M. model. If you are a farmer or an "outdoor" man, get a substantial boot made, especially for rough, hard wear.

It is true economy to have two, three or even four pairs of shoes. It pays to have shoes for wet and stormy weather—shoes for fine weather—shoes for winter and for summer. Shoes will wear much better and always look better if put away for a few days occasionally, preferably on a pair of shoe trees.

It is also true economy to keep your shoes well polished. Frequent polishing helps to maintain their smart appearance and keeps the leather soft and in good condition, thus prolonging the life of the shoes.

If your shoes get wet don't put them in a very hot place to dry, and don't at any time put them up against a hot radiator or stove. Such heat takes the life out of the leather. That is what causes shoes to crack and split. Put wet shoes on a pair of shoe trees, lay them on their sides so that the air can get to the soles, and let them dry slowly and naturally.

We are telling you these shoe facts because as Shoemakers to the Nation, we want you to get the utmost wear and value from every pair of shoes you buy.

Ames Holden McCready operate three large factories, where boots and shoes for men, women and children are made. We make all kinds of footwear, from the finest kind of kid and calf shoes for both men and women, to special heavy grades for the workman and the farmer. The shoes that bear our trade-mark are splendid value for the money, no matter whether you pay $6, $7, $8, $9, or $10.

The Woman Who Changed

By JANE PHELPS

Is Youth an Asset or a Disadvantage

CHAPTER LXIV.

I was so busy, the days so filled, that the time slipped by with lightning rapidity. David claimed much of my time. He had a new plan each morning.

"What shall we do?" he would say, and Carl would reply:

"Isn't it fine to be so young!" (that he was sarcastic, never worried David, who usually snarled to reply). But one morning I said:

"I don't know whether it is, or not, Carl. In Moreland, being young seems to be rather of a disadvantage. The older women know so much more—are so much more interesting than we younger ones—that we can scarcely hold our own," then I told them something of Madge Loring and Julia Collins, and of how both Evelyn Reeves and I disliked them, but how we had to compete with them in society.

"If you will be a grand lady, you'll have to do as the grand ladies do," Ralph remarked. Ralph thought more of position and money than the rest, so was not quite so sympathetic.

"Never think youth a disadvantage," Mother joined in the conversation. "You will will get old fast enough, and youth, once gone, never can be reclaimed."

"I know, mother, but it is hard to have to compete with women five or six years older and women who have spent their lives in the social environment of which I know so little."

"You'll come out top of the heap yet, sis, don't worry," David broke in. His boyish faith in me always comforted me.

The Last Night at Home.

I was to go back to Moreland the next day. We were all rather quiet until David rallied us.

"You'd think sis had died and we were going to bury her. Nice 'thinks' she'll have about her last night at home, if we sit around like a lot of mourners."

That sort of woke us up, and we each tried to dispel the thought of parting which had saddened us. I proposed that we make some candy and, after Maggie had cleared away the dinner dishes, we all —including dad and mother —trooped into the kitchen. I smiled as I wondered what George's fashionable friends would think if they could see us.

We made old-fashioned molasses candy, and while father and the two older boys pulled it, David cracked nuts and mother picked them out of the shells for nut fudge, which I was making. We had an awfully gay time, after that. Mother found two nice candy boxes and packed them with the fresh candy for me to take on the train, and we all ate and talked until after midnight. Then mother shooed us all upstairs, for all the world like an old hen with her chickens.

But I could not go to bed. I sat long at the window —the same window at which I had often sat before I was married. The night was soft and warm, for the time of year, and as I opened the window the air fell like a moist flower held to my face. It had rained slightly during the evening — a soft spring shower which was already dry on the sidewalks. And from below there stole the scene of rain-water in the wooden tub under the eves at the corner of the house; and of the black earth which the boys had lately turned in preparation for the late flowers. A just-set-out bed of tulips and hyacinths gave forth a delicate odour. The old scent was insidious and set me dreaming. The nostalgia of old things was upon me, and, without any reason, my eyes filled with tears which fell unheeded into my lap, or splashed upon the window sill.

Self-Questioning.

Why should I weep? Surely, life had been kind to me. I had married the man I loved; I had a beautiful home; money, and all that it meant in the way of comforts and luxuries. I could travel—why should I be sad?

Then, down in my heart, there arose a feeling; a thought came into my mind.

In spite of all these things which were now mine, I was disappointed. I had expected even more. And the more I had expected, was love. The enthusiastic love of which I had dreamed when, as a girl, I had sat at this very window on other such nights.

Then, my dreams had been all shy, happy ones. Now I was weeping. I brushed the tears away and drew the shades, first closing the window. I would shut out the sweetness of the night— the fragrance and insidiousness of the scents. Slowly I prepared for bed, then, kneeling down as I used when a child I asked God to let me be happy; to show me how to make George love me as I wanted him to, and as I wanted to love him. As I did when we were first married. Then I crept into bed and slept until mother called me to breakfast.

The Man Power of the Empire

MR. P. W. WILSON, writes in the London Daily News:

A dozen times a day I am asked to explain the mystery of man-power on the western front. Where are the British and French reserves? Where is the Army of Manoeuvre? In the British Empire 7,000,000 able-bodied men, most of them young men, have been enrolled for military service.

These 7,000,000 men have suffered over 2,000,000 casualties. One-third, or 700,000 at least, of these casualties are dead or missing, and this means that Britain has buried more men than, at present, America has transported to Europe.

Subtracting 700,000 dead and missing from the 2,000,000 British casualties, we are left with 1,300,000 wounded. I will assume that 800,000 of these have been discharged from hospitals and that 75 per cent. of them remain in the army. This means that 200,000 are back in civil life. The balance of 500,000 wounded are still under treatment, which means that the loss of effectives through wounds would be 700,000 in all. Add this to the 700,000 dead and missing, and you have a loss through casualties of 1,400,000 up to date.

It is probable that 200,000 men have been returned to essential industries. Adding this figure to the above 1,400,000 we arrive at 1,600,000 to be subtracted from 7,000,000. This leaves 5,400,000 men to be accounted for.

We will allow 5 per cent. for sickness, or 270,000, at any given time, which brings us to 5,130,000. Of these I shall reckon that the forces in Mesopotamia, Palestine, Africa, Salonica and Italy, with reserves, absorb 1,130,000 men, bringing down the army of the Western front to 4,000,000 men.

Early in 1916 our War Office aimed at a recruiting of 30,000 a week, or 1,500,000 a year. I will assume that we have not enlisted more than 300,000 men in the last six months. These men are still in training, or ought to be, and it is only pressure of events that rushes four-month recruits into the trenches. Let us follow 300,000 men for training, reducing the active forces from 4,000,000 to 3,700,000.

Britain holds more than 100 miles of Western front. Two years ago an average of 5,000 men per mile might have been sufficient for the purpose; in Russia the allowance was 3,000 men. To-day Germany concentrates her entire available force against the British line. An average defensive provision of 10,000 men per mile must be secured, or 1,000,000 men, to hold the trenches. Take 1,000,000 from 3,700,000 and 2,700,000 men remain. It is a large number.

Many of these men are well over forty years old and must be classed as non-combatants. Moreover, this battle is not over in a day. Since March 21, it has lasted fully three weeks. The fighting season for 1918 will include at least 200 days. Nobody outside official circles knows what this fighting is costing us each day. Obviously, the published return of 8,000 British casualties for a week is camouflage, and I do not myself doubt that American gallantry will prove more expensive than appears at the time to be the case. Your men have played a larger part in stemming the German tide than is yet recognized. And, however that may be, for many days recently it is clear that the British toll has been well over 10,000 British casualties. Whatever the numeral actually is, you have only to multiply it by 200 to find out how serious is the wastage involved in such bitter fighting. In the first two years of war, French sacrifices were greater than the British. It was not so in 1917, and it is even less the case to-day. For Britain, this battle is what President Wilson calls the acid test. You cannot estimate that we shall lose this year fewer than one to one and a half million men, or half our available reserves of 2,700,000.

But this does not fully express the situation. I have said that 3,700,000 men may be available for the western front. Of these, only one-third can be at any given moment in the front line. The others are moving guns, cooking food, running railroads and so on. Hence the raising of the military age in Britain to fifty years.

We are not thinking only of next week, vital though that is. My impression is that we are deliberately holding the lines with as few men as possible, and each man ready to die at his post. We have to consider the future—the certainty of other German drives—the hope of a final counter aggressive.

Do not be misled by the insinuation that troops are being held in Britain against invasion. Britain is merely a base for France. In America people do not realize always how short are the distances between London and Paris. It is cheaper and simpler to keep troops in England, but they are ready at an hour's notice to go across the Channel.

Typewriters In England.

Typewriters are almost as expensive in London as small automobiles. Owing to the restrictions on importation and the enormous demand due to increased clerical work in Government departments, the prices of all available machines have more than doubled. New machines, if they are to be had at all, are worth from $400 to $500. Remodelled machines which before the war sold at about $40, now fetch from $150 to $200. Second-hand machines in good condition have been sold recently for $50 to $100 more than they cost when new.

Furnace Management

Ease of the Sunshine

Feeding the furnace;
—shaking down the ashes,
—removing the ashes,
—keeping the health-giving water pan filled,
—fixing the drafts for the night,

—those are the five major operations in managing a furnace—and what a trial of the temper and destruction of your raiment any one of them may be.

If your furnace is the famous McClary Sunshine these operations will cause you little more trouble or effort than winding up the clock.

The feed door of the Sunshine is big—you don't hit the side and damage your shovel and temper and scatter coal and naughty words all over the basement.

You don't shake the Sunshine grates, you merely rock them a few times, —and the ashes drop from the perpendicular fire-box walls and grates and are guided into the big ash pan,

—and you lift the ash pan out with handles that are always cool.

—No shovelling of ashes—no ashdust on your clothes or in your hair or in the house.

And at night, without going down to the basement, you drop the damper and open the check with pulls that always work.

And the water pan is right above the fuel door—very accessible—in plain view, where you can't forget it.

Sunshine furnace management is not even exercise.

Engineering Service Free. McClary's own heating engineers are at your service when you buy a Sunshine Furnace, to give you free expert advice on your home-heating requirements. Write to the nearest McClary Branch and ask for particulars about this service. A booklet, "Comfort in the Home," makes clear all the things you want to know about furnaces, and it is sent free on request.

An Anesthetic.

Edgar Wallace, the British journalist whose "Tam o' the Scots," series of stories about the Royal Flying Corps appears in Everybody's, was a private in the Mashonaland Rebellion of 1896. He tells a story of an emergency amputation which he was called upon to perform in his campaign. "I'm blessed if I like this," he said to his emergency assistant, a rough-and-ready Cockney soldier; "there isn't an anesthetic in the medicine chest. "What's an anesthetic?" asked the puzzled soldier. "Something to make him insensible," said Wallace. "Oh, that's all right," said Tommy, brightening up. "I'll 'it 'im on the 'ead with an 'ammer!" Fortunately a "dope" was discovered, and the operation was successfully performed.

Russian Prisoners as Tutors.

It is reported that in Germany several thousand women — selected for their youth, energy and attractiveness—are learning the Russian language. Their tutors are Russian prisoners, who are compelled to give them lessons. These students are intended to pursue, after the war, the occupation of travelling saleswomen to capture the Russian markets, and descriptive catalogues of German goods are already being prepared in the Russian language for their use especially.

WAS OFF WORK

WITH CONSTIPATION

If the truth were only known you would find that over one-half of the ills of life are caused by allowing the bowels to get into a constipated condition.

When the bowels become constipated, the stomach gets out of order, the liver does not work properly, and then follows the violent sick headaches, the sourness of the stomach, heartburn, water brash, etc.

Keep your bowels regular by using Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. They work on the bowels gently and naturally, and will cure the worst cases of constipation.

Mr. Sylvester Clements, Galt, Ont., writes: "I desire to express my heartielt thanks for what Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills have done for me. I have been suffering from a bad stomach and constipation and would be off work 4 or 5 months a year. I was hardly able to be inside without getting a severe headache. I tried doctors' medicine and other remedies, but got no relief until a friend advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills. Now I can work inside without any headaches or pain. I would not be without your remedy for anything. I write this so that anyone suffering the same as I did may use them and be cured."

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills are 25c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Just a Mouthful.

Mrs. Brewster was entertaining her club and the ices were being served. Presently the hostess observed that one of her guests had eaten all of her serving of cream, whereupon she hastened to her side.

"Well, thank you, Mrs. Brewster, I will take some more, but just a mouthful, please," replied the young woman.

"Martha," announced the hostess, "fill Mrs. Glover's plate."

A Tragedy In France.

The scene is laid in one of the canteens in France operated by the American Red Cross for the refreshment of the soldiers. Forbes Watson was sitting there quietly when suddenly "a man with a beard and finely cut features jumped up two yards away. Out of his mouth came a word that could not have brought more people to their feet if it had been accompanied by a flame of fire. An instant uproar. Questions, looks which demanded that the word be justified, exclamations poured out. The other man stood trembling with rage. They faced each other, accuser and accused. The first was like a prophet enraged, and he damned the other in a fiery speech, telling how he remembered him as stretcher bearer at Verdun last winter, how he remembered when the bombs were dropping too thickly he refused to go out after the wounded. 'He left my friend to die of his wounds. He is a coward, and my friend died because of it.' He cursed the stretcher bearer eternally.

"Yet later on that same night he went to the girl who had done most to restore order, apologized to her for having made a scene, and gave her a shell in token of his sincere apology. The scene in fact had shattered her nerves as well as his. It left us all gasping for breath. For everyone there realized that whenever these two men met it would recur, and that some day it would not end except in the one immortal way."

Will Help Uncle Sam.

Dave Brown, former amateur 125-pound boxing champion of Canada, is making quite a name for himself as a scrapper in Uncle Sam's navy. It may not be generally known that Dave recently enlisted in the navy of our ally, and last week was promoted to petty officer. Although many pounds under the limit, Petty Officer Brown won the lightweight boxing championship of the Naval Training Station at Newport, R. I., where he is stationed.

After several easy victories in the preliminary heats, Brown met Elvie Colona, a first-class boxer, in the final, the Toronto boy winning on points at the end of six rounds. This was the first defeat sustained by Colona. In only one round did the latter have a margin. Four were won by Brown, and the other one was about even. Colona was at least ten pounds heavier than Brown.

HOW GREAT WARS ARE WON

It Is Very Rarely That Conflicts Are Victorious Because of Superior Valor, Says Writer.

The vulgar idea of war is that the victory is won by superior valor or other moral virtue, writes H. Sidebotham in the Atlantic. This, however, has very rarely been the case; almost all Western nations, at any rate, are equally brave, though the valor of some excels in obstinacy and endurance and of others in daring and elan. By far the commoner causes of victory and defeat are political or technical.

Sometimes (to take the domain of tactics) it is a new weapon that wins victory on the battlefield, or at any rate contributes to the ease with which it is won; sometimes, as in the Roman and in Frederick's armies, it is superior discipline, greater physical fitness, and practice in maneuver that win the victory. More often it is some new formation of line. Those tactics commonly succeed best of all which are both new and adapted to the genius of the people using them. Thus the Boers in the South African war developed a highly original system of mounted infantry tactics by simply using their horses in war time as they did going about their ordinary business on their wide sheep farms, and similarly in the American wars the woodsmen made ideal skirmishers.

WISH TO CONTROL CEMETERY

Foreigners in Rome Urge Italian Government to Take Over Burial Ground Owned by Germany.

War has drawn attention to the fact that the great Protestant cemetery in Rome, where are buried many distinguished foreigners including the poets, Keats and Shelley, is the property of the German government, and the rentals for plots therein are still paid to German agents.

More than a century ago Prussia was the only non-Roman Catholic power represented at the Vatican. Therefore, it was Prussia which obtained the concession for a cemetery to be used for the bodies of those not of the Roman faith, and the property still remains in the hands of the German government.

Prominent foreigners now are urging that the Italian government should take over the cemetery and place it under British protection.

The Serious Side.

The summer is past, the harvest at its end. What have you to show for your work? The days speed quickly, and "going to do it tomorrow" does not get deeds done. "Work today," "do it now," are trite mottoes, but useful admonition.

Cloudy and chilly days come occasionally, reminding one that another season is at its close. What have you gained from your summer days? Is your body stronger, your mind fuller of stored knowledge, your soul grown to wider appreciation of the true things of life? Are you more human, more charitable? Have you a better understanding of the rights and needs of men? What memories have you stored up for future reflection during the long winter nights?

Recreation and entertainment have their rightful place in life, but serious thought must fill the mind or one will not grow. Not to advance means decay, death. To be ever growing is a necessity through life. But to advance, time must be given to the higher things in life. To what end are you speeding? What are your aims, your purposes?

William Had a Poser.

"Good morning, children," said the arithmetic teacher. "How many of you have prepared an original problem in multiplication, as I requested?"

Only one hand went up.

"Well, William, you may give your problem and the rest of the class may solve it."

"If my baby sister is a year old now and weighs twenty pounds, and keeps on gaining two ounces a day until she is sixteen years old, and if the price of living doubles again in the next ten years, how much will my sister's graduation outfit cost? Mother says she would like to know."

Was Expecting It.

It was his first time under fire. He had expressed his terror to comrades a few moments before. They had tried to cheer him, and as they rushed into the fray they kept him within their observation. When the enemy opened fire he fell. They quickly bent over him and hastily tried to determine the extent of his injury. No wounds were visible.

"Are you shot?" asked one.

"I—I dunno," he whined with teeth chattering, "but I must be!"

Fuel From Peat.

A company has been formed in Norway for making fuel from peat by the Rosendahl method. The raw material for the new industry will be chiefly peat from the extensive Norwegian moors, but any other material may be used which is sufficiently abundant in the neighborhood of the factory, particularly wood waste. The product is said greatly to resemble English coal.

Air Routes.

The Italian press is boasting that one of their airmen flew from Turin to London, 700 miles, in 722 minutes. When the war is over it will be fine to travel in an aircraft that can make the trip from Salt Lake City to Los Angeles in ten hours.

The Penalized Civilian.

"Don't you think the modern fashions for men are absurd?"

"Yes. There seems to be an idea that anybody who doesn't wear soldier clothes deserves to look funny."

Percy Hawn, Sales Manager

You know, of course, that the Maxwell Motor Car is the long distance champion of the world.

You have read that a "stock" Maxwell 5-passenger car ran for 44 days and nights without stopping the motor.

And that, in the 44 days non-stop test, the Maxwell covered 22,022 miles, at an average speed of 25 miles per hour.

But have you, up to now, realized the full significance of that performance?

Do you know that no other motor car in the world has ever equalled or even approached that performance?

In a word, did you take this test seriously when you heard of it?

Or did you set it down as a "selling stunt" to give the publicity man something to talk about?

It's worth your while to read and to study the conditions under which that test was made.

You know that the American Automobile Association (familiarly known as the "A.A.A.") is the official arbiter of every automobile test and contest.

But perhaps you didn't know that when a maker places his product under A.A.A. supervision he must do absolutely as told and abide by the decisions of the Board.

That's why there are so few A.A.A. Official Records!

This 22,000-mile Maxwell non-stop test was official from start to finish.

Therein lies its value to you.

It proves absolutely the quality of the car—of the very Maxwell you buy.

For verily this was a "stock" Maxwell. Listen:—

First: the inspectors disassembled the motor to see that no special pistons, valves, bearing-metal or other parts had been used.

Every other unit was as critically inspected. Then the car was re-assembled under their own supervision.

As we had much at stake and the test was made in winter (November 23 to January 5) we asked permission to take certain little precautions against accidental stoppage.

Sounds reasonable, doesn't it?

But they refused permission to do any such thing.

For example:—They would not permit a rubber cover over the magneto—it wasn't "stock."

They refused to let us tape the ignition wire terminals—they are not taped on the Maxwells we sell—so of course it wasn't "stock."

Neither would they let us use a spiral coiled pipe in place of the usual straight one from tank to carburetor to guard against a breakage from the constant, unremitting vibration—it isn't "stock."

Nor to use a special high priced foreign make of spark plug—the run was made on the same spark plugs with which all Maxwells are equipped.

So rigid were the rules, we were unable to carry a spare tire on the rear—it wasn't "stock." A telegram to headquarters in New York finally brought a special permit to carry a spare tire.

"It isn't stock!" "It isn't stock!"

That was the laconic reply of those A.A.A. inspectors to every last suggestion that called for anything but the precise condition of the standard, stock model Maxwell that any customer can buy from any one of 3000 dealers anywhere.

We are glad now—mighty glad—that the rules were so strict and so rigidly enforced.

Any other car that ever attempts to equal that record must do it under official supervision—and comply with the same terms.

And it will have to go some.

For Maxwell set the standard when it performed this wonderful feat.

Maxwell complied with those rules—and made good.

Every drop of gasoline and oil and water was measured out and poured in by the inspectors themselves. They would not even let our man pour it in!

Every four hours the car had to report at the official station for checking.

And it had to be there on the minute.

And every minute there was an inspector beside the driver on the front seat—two more men in the rear. One got out only to let another in—day and night for 44 days and nights!

There was one technical stop.

It is interesting to know the circumstances.

Dead of night—a driving storm—a cloudburst—suddenly another car appeared in the road ahead.

In his effort to avoid a collision the Maxwell driver stalled his motor.

At least the observers thought it stopped and so reported.

The car did not stop, however, so its momentum again started the motor (if it had indeed stalled) when the clutch was let in.

The contest board exonerated our driver on grounds that his action was necessary to save life.

That shows you how rigid were the rules—how conscientiously applied by the observers.

You who have owned and driven motor cars—you who know how small a thing may clog a carburetor or a feed pipe; "short" a spark or stall a motor—will realize what a wonderfully well made car this must be to go through that test under those conditions—44 days—22,022 miles without stopping.

The exact amount of gasoline, of oil, of water used; the tire mileage, tire troubles, tire changes; the distance and the routes are matters of official record, attested under oath and guaranteed by the A. A. A.

(By the way, the average was nearly 10,000 miles per tire.)

Any Maxwell owner—or anyone interested may see those records.

And—here's the most wonderful part—though no attempt was or could be made for economy; the Maxwell averaged 22 miles per gallon of gasoline.

Some other car may, some time, equal some one of those performances. But to equal them all in the same test— that car must be a Maxwell.

An Incident of Sea War.

William McFee, author of "Casuals of the Sea," tells in an English paper, Land and Water, of an attack by a submarine upon a steamer and describes this incident of the engine room before the boat was sunk: "For those three men (the officers) stood by for the better part of an hour. The stokehold was empty, the steam was dropping, and there was considerable water in the bilges, but they stood by watching the speaking tube and the blind white face of the telegraph pointing irresolutely to 'Stand by' (the orders from the bridge). And presently the strain of waiting grew oppressive, so that the chief, looking up toward the skylight, said to my friend, 'Mister, go up and see what's doing. It must be daylight now.' And he went up, and came out on deck and found himself face to face with a problem of some complexity. For the deck of the ship was deserted, and far across the dark sparkle of the sea he saw the boats crawling toward a smear of smoke on the skyline."

"THEY SHALL NOT WANT"

In a moment of inspiration an advertising man recently hit upon the above four words as epitomizing the desire and determination of the people of Canada that the Armies of the Allies and the suffering peoples of the Allied nations of Europe shall be supplied with all that Canada can possibly furnish of the food stuffs necessary for their support in the energetic and successful prosecution of their struggle for the defeat of tyrannical Prussian aspirations.

Compressed in this little sentence is more real throbbing meaning than most full pages of printed matter contain. In sixteen letters it expresses the determination of a people that a great cause must be sustained at no matter what personal sacrifice.

"They shall not want."

How aptly these words also express the attitude of the NORMAL, HEALTHY-MINDED MAN towards, those who under our social system, naturally look to him for support and protection. As he thinks of the wife who has entrusted her future to his care and of the children whom he has brought into the world, his thought and determination is "THEY SHALL NOT WANT."

This is always the attitude of the normal, healthy-minded man who is willing to sacrifice, if need be, to attain this noble end.

A policy in the Sun Life of Canada provides the safest and most economical means of fulfilling this noble desire and determination and incidentally, if fortunately in time this mode of protection is no longer necessary he may himself reap the benefits of his savings and thrift.

Thus virtue has its own reward.

ONE MUTE STORY OF THE WAR

Sunny Nieuport on the Yser, a Little City of 4,000, Among Others Wiped Out of Existence.

Nieuport lies upon the Yser, the tidal stream that stopped the German rush for Calais, writes William Townsend Porter in the Atlantic Monthly. That June before the world went mad, the peaceful town drowsed in the sun—the pearly Belgian sun that painters love. The men went down to the sea in their fishing boats, or worked their fields; old women, their lace upon their knees, sat in a patch of shade before the door and plied their bobbins; children, with shrill sweet voices, darted about like birds; the creaking wain went to and fro piled high with the harvest.

Four thousand simple folk! Not one remains. Their houses, too, are gone. Their ancient church, their historic tower, are mounds of ruin. And still the hissing shells, hour by hour, day by day, tear down the crumbling walls, adding fresh ruin to a scene most desolate.

The people of the sun are gone. Another race inhabits there. They live in holes beneath the ground. They come not forth except to kill.

Glass Blowing an Ancient Art.

The art of glass blowing is also very ancient and had an existence probably 4,000 years before Christ. The art of blowing is plainly depicted upon the tumuli of Mastaba of Tih at Memphis, and these tombs were built more than 5,000 years ago. In the picture upon them the blower with tube in mouth, just the same as the present day, is seen squatted before his furnace, and from the detail and perfection of knowledge of the art evidenced in the ancient pictures it is readily seen that glass blowing was no new thing with the people of that time and region. The glass blower of that day made vases, beads, ornaments and bottles.

Brave London Newsboy Wins Two Decorations Fighting on West Front

ONE of the familiar characters of pre-war days in London was a street-arab newsboy who sold papers outside one of the hotels most frequented by wealthy visitors. Delighting in the nickname "Frog-faced Tich," he won the admiration of visitors as a master of repartee, varying his nightly refrain of "All the Winners" and "'Orrible Murder" with ironical comments on the world's events and caustic replies to pedestrians who ventured to bandy words with him as they passed.

Persons who knew Tich Tapley in the old days would scarcely recognize him now in his khaki uniform with a "crowned" ribbon on his breast indicating that he has been twice awarded the prized Military Cross. His comrades of the London Regiment, moreover, declare that if he had been awarded a medal on every occasion on which he has merited it, he would be covered with ribbon from head to foot of his diminutive body.

Too small to go into the army by the regular channels, Tich after several trials, was accepted as a stretcher-bearer in the London in the London Regiment. At the front, he quickly became one of the most popular men in the regiment. One of his officers, in a report to headquarters, said of him, "Cheerfulness, courage, devotion to duty, and disregard of danger are as much a part of his equipment as his haversack and his water bottle."

Tapley probably looks less like a hero than any other man in his battalion. But his caustic, good-natured humor, which was little more than an amiable diversion in civilian life, became an invaluable asset in the trenches, keeping up the morale and optimism of the whole battalion. His officers find themselves continually paying tribute to his usefulness in this respect. One of them wrote in a letter a short time ago:

"His gospel, whether consciously or not, is the gospel of cheerfulness and in practice it works out that his spirits grew lighter in proportion as dangers and discomforts grow heavier. His jests in time of stress provide just the electric sparks that turns the hearts of men from gloomy pessimism into luminous defiance."

The ex-newsboy has the reputation, from Lens to St. Quentin, of being absolutely fearless. In his his work as stretcher-bearer, he goes busily about among the falling shells, always whistling a popular tune, with an ever-ready word of sympathy and encouragement for the wounded. He is generally looked upon as one who bears a charmed life, for he has never received even a scratch and his very presence is regarded as a mascot.

Tapley won the second of his two decorations under heavy shell fire in the Chalk Pit north of Loos when, single-handed, he bandaged and carried to a safe part of the trench all he found of his own company and several from a neighboring battalion.

The Toll France Has Paid.

Four-fifths of the women in France wear mourning, say the correspondents, and we believe them, but we are not among those who credit reports of a France "exhausted" and "bled white," observes a war writer. French women go into mourning on the smallest provocation. Rye shops abound. Every little way in a French city one encounters the sign, "Mourning in 24 hours." When madame puts on black, no one straightway infers the demise of monsieur. Much more likely an uncle by marriage had dropped off, or perhaps some eighth cousin thrice removed. It is always possible that, for one wooden cross on a battlefield, there will be six dozen gowns at the dye shop. No one denies that the French army has suffered terrible casualties. No one feels inclined to understate them, the French least of all. But only Americans who have never lived in France will imagine that the swarms of black-clad women indicate a proportionate number of dead Poilus. The truth is, Poilus were never so plucky as today, never so efficient, and, despite heartbreaking losses, never so numerous.

Some Inducement.

Christopher Brown walked into the local recruiting station of the United States marine corps at Philadelphia, says the Troy Times, and after announcing that he was from Braintree, said he wanted to enlist. "The idea of enlisting is a good one," said the recruiting sergeant, "but what is Braintree—a breakfast food or an educational institution?" "It is a town in Massachusetts—the only town in the United States that ever produced two presidents," proudly replied Brown. "John Adams was born there, and so was John Quincy Adams. John Hancock was born there, too, as was Col. Charles G. Long, chief of staff of the marine corps. If you take me into the marine corps I may be running the thing in a year or two."

Camera Marks Airplane Hits.

The great aviation school at Toronto has devised a most ingenious scheme for training aviators in the use of the machine gun. Two apprentice flyers are sent up to fight under all the conditions of actual warfare. They make every effort to aim and fire their machine guns at each other, only in place of bullets the gun is fitted with camera lens and film. Every pull of the trigger snaps a picture. If the shot is a "hit" a picture of the "enemy" airplane appears on the film; if a miss, the film is blank. By examining the strip of film afterward it is possible to tell exactly how many hits each man made and how accurately he is "shooting."

CHEESE OUTPUT IS MUCH REDUCED

Brockville, May 11—At the meeting of the Cheese Board, here, Professor G. G. Publow, chief instructor for the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association, stated that the make, up to the present, had fallen away by 25 per cent., but with a favorable season the output would be normal. Due to the Military Sevirce Act, there is considerable unrest among the makers, and if the militia authorities take more men there is grave danger, he said, of many factories being compelled to close. He announced that there had been nothing done officially toward fixing the price of milk between the condenseries and the cheese factories.

Kingston, May 11—At the Cheese Board, 330 white were offered; 100 sold at 22 5-16c.

Brockville, May 11—At the Cheese Board 1,475 white and 585 colored were boarded; sales, 1,785 at 22¾c. Bissell, Smart and McVeigh were the buyers.

One of the small Paris theaters has set about proving that dramatic critics are not infallible. Every evening before the rise of the curtain on an adversely criticized but no less successful play, the irate manager appears, bearing a bundle of newspapers, from which he reads the choicest condemnatory excerpts. Having thus stated the newspaper view of his play, he leaves the rest to the judgment of the audience.

Not One Came Down.

The day was dull, as days can be dull, sometimes only in the trenches. Suddenly, high up in the sky, sailing over the lines, was discerned a flock of wild geese. In a moment, rifles were blazing upward from all quarters; even machine guns were requisitioned, while away at the other side of No Man's Land the German, too, was roused to action. But the flock of geese sailed on, their long necks outstretched and their wings rising and falling in undisturbed rhythm. And never a one came down.—Christian Science Monitor.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Wooing Desdemona

With a Moving Picture Climax

By CLARENCE LINDNER

Copyright by Frank A. Munsey Co.

Tongues in trees, sang the hard books in the running brooks, sermons in stones—and, by the same token, romance in finger nails.

The idea is not so absurd. Stella will corroborate me.

Drop into Burtscher's tonsorial parlors some day.

Go right through into the little room curtained off at the rear.

Seated at a table, with bowls of warm water, jars of red paste and various delicate instruments set out before her, you will find Stella placidly munching caramels.

As you enter she will look you over impersonally. Sigh if you are tall and dark and saturnine or smile sadly, but kindly, if you are—what you are; say something original that she has heard twenty times a day for three years and offer her your fingers to refine.

When she has massaged them for a few minutes and you think that your soft glances have quickened the beating of her heart, ask her about this romance business.

She will gaze silently at you for a quarter of a minute.

Then a pearly tear will hasten from beneath a quivering eyelid. She will swallow a sob with her caramel.

And if you are not tall and dark and saturnine she may tell you the story. It isn't much of a story as stories go. But judge of it for yourself:

His entrance was soundless. Stella was not aware of him until his shadow fell across the page of her book. She started nervously and looked up to find him seated opposite, gazing at her gravely. Her heart thumped violently as she looked into his eyes. She blushed. Her glance fell. She sighed.

Without looking up again she began to operate on the hand which he offered for her ministration. Her fingers trembled. Twice she almost stuck him with the cuticle scissors.

She never could recall with what remark he broke the awful silence. For the first time in memory she was powerless to inject the element of loquacity into a situation.

She knew before he spoke just what would be the tonal quality of his voice; knew it would be soft and low and compelling. At his first word her gaze was drawn to his. She peered into his black eyes timidly, fearfully, entranced.

Mayhap it was hours he talked, mayhap only minutes.

"In Madrid," he murmured absently, "near the Plaza de Toros, lives a soft eyed maiden whom you remind me of much."

He flinched as the scissors point penetrated a tender spot. But she was far away from cuticle and scissors.

"And once in Deini, as the regiment marched out, I saw you waving me goodby from the gate of the town"—

From land to land he skipped. He balanced the south pole on the tip of his tongue, derided the hemispheres, twisted the equator in a knot and flipped the top off Mont Blanc. He mopped up the Pacific ocean with his left hand and with his right taught backgammon to an Eskimo in Greenland.

Time and distance were exploded myths to him. He was a citizen of the universe, address anywhere.

"You must know pretty nearly every one," Stella whispered admiringly.

He considered a moment while he adjusted the green jade pin in his necktie.

"Not quite," was his modest admission.

She sighed and applied the nail buffer with feverish assiduity.

When he had gone she wept softly and tried to recall what he had looked like. He was tall, she remembered, and slender and dark.

That night she cried herself to sleep and dreamed she was Madylaine, the heroine of "Love's Last Word."

He came again many times.

There were more tales—tales of hair raising adventures in the crannies of the world. The heroes of them all were friends of his, nameless men mentioned casually, though she knew all the time that it was he who really figured in the leading roles.

She put down his delicacy in omitting names to that innate modesty so characteristic of heroes. There was a man, for instance, who twisted the tail of a blood crazed tiger in Bengal and flung the brute to starve in the branches of a tree.

His visits became more frequent, so frequent that his nails could not possibly have grown between times.

He led her to talk of herself—of her ideals, inspired by the best magazine literature; of the loveless life of a plump manicure lady in a deserted city of 5,000,000 population.

He learned, too, of the $300 she had hoarded up against the traditional day of inclement weather.

And before he left on that occasion they kissed furtively across the table, during which process he spilled a bowl of warm water into his lap.

He confided his name—Montford Reginald McShane. She smiled happily as he blew her a farewell kiss.

Monty, as she fondly thought of him, visited her always in the morning. Whether he had an occupation she had not courage to inquire of him. Suffice she was loved, and to love is to trust, says the heroine of some best seller.

She confided in Rose, her "lady friend," a statuesque blond who circulated comestibles in a lunch room. Rose was skeptical, having proved to her grim satisfaction that the stomach route is the only way to a man's heart.

"Maybe so and then maybe not," she declared oracularly. "This romance business is all very well for them as can do without sleep. What's his name?"

"Montford," breathed Stella.

"And what for dessert?"

"Reginald McShane."

"Too flossy. Keep your eye on the cashier's desk and don't let him get by without punching his check. This Romeo game wasn't invented for us stocking girls. Good providers is what we need. Remember what happened to me?"

She dabbed a fugitive tear. Stella was in arms immediately.

"Monty's different. There's something about him that—er—well, you know, he's—er"—

"I know; that was Horace's weak point. I couldn't lay my finger on just what it was till he borrowed all my money one day and skipped. Does he take you out much?"

Stella flushed.

"He hasn't yet," she confessed lamely, then flared. "He—he—well, love doesn't need such things to show it's true."

"No, maybe not, but it helps some. Don't let me throw on the damper, though. I ain't saying he's not all right, dearie. I hope so, but"—

Stella burst into tears and flounced to the door.

"You're horrid," she sobbed, "and jealous. I won't listen to another word against him."

On his next visit, however, she met his advances austerely.

"When I was in Algiers," he began reminiscently, after a few well chosen and silently received words about the weather.

"There's a new show at the Lyceum they say is awfully funny." Her tone was dreamily wistful.

He sidestepped warily. "This weather reminds me a lot of Labrador."

"I haven't seen a good show for a long time," she sighed.

"Not that it's so cold in Labrador, you know, but"—

"Have you seen it?"

"What, Labrador?"

"No, the show."

"H-m! Not yet. You see, I'm very busy now nights, my dear. I—I'm entertaining a couple of English bankers this week. Very important, you know. Some time, though," he said vaguely, "we'll"— His words faded into a murmur that lost itself in the puffing of a black cigar.

She melted. Monty was important.

"Some time soon," he promised as he started to leave. "Ah, by the way"—he fumbled in his change pocket—"I forgot my money this morning. Stupid, wasn't it? Have you a dollar handy, my dear, for car fare till I get a check cashed?"

She gave it gladly, receiving a hand squeeze as the receipt.

She did not mention the circumstance to Rose that evening as they sat in the little restaurant where three course meals are exchanged for quarter dollars.

"Want to see a picture show?" Rose asked after supper. Stella agreed languidly.

They dropped into "the travelogue," where for the sum of a dime you may sit in a stuffy room and partake of all the pleasures of a jaunt around the world without the bother of officious customs inspectors or the emotional unrest of seasickness. They found seats well toward the front and opened a bag of caramels to fortify themselves against the fatigues of the journey.

The lights went out. An automaton began harassing a wheezy piano. There was a buzz of expectant whisper.

A square of white light flashed on the curtain, then the legend, "A Trip to the Orient, Personally Conducted by One of Our Lecturers." The audience repeated it to each other in low tones. A Turkish street scene appeared on the canvas.

Some one coughed in the wings. The piano's wail died off in a flowery tremolo. The whispering ceased. A husky voice proceeded from out the shadow at the left of the stage.

"Ladies and gen'l'men, tonight—hic—tonight we shall have the pleasure of leading—hic—leading you through the—the"—

There was a pause. The lecturer whispered hoarsely to some one behind him.

"Where we gonner lead 'em, Mr. Blank?"

A red and yellow mosque that was just peeping into the house stopped suddenly in its course and withdrew.

There was whispered colloquy in the shadow. Another cough.

"Ladies and gen'l'men," the voice resumed more huskily, "tonight we're going to Shpain."

"No, no, you chump!" clear and grating from behind the wings. "The orient—orient! I told you to study it. You've been drinking again!"

"'Tisn't so." The husky one was evidently aggrieved. "Ladies and gen'l'men, we've changed our minds. We're going to the orient."

A whistle sounded shrilly. The canvas suddenly went blank.

The lights flashed on blindingly to reveal an unresisting figure being drawn behind the wings from public stare.

Stella uttered a little shriek before she collapsed.

"It's Monty," she blubbered.

"No," muttered Rose tensely. "It's Horace!"

The Beer of Borneo.

Beer as made by the natives of Sarawak, in the northwestern region of Borneo, varies in its ingredients according to the different tribes who make it, the most intoxicating being that made by the Bisaiyahs of Limbank. These people make their beer by boiling rice, adding yeast, crushed wild chili, and a large lump of wood ash. This is all put into a jar till the jar is two-thirds full, and covered over with leaves which are held down with bamboo supports; water is poured on till the jar is full, and the beer is then ready for drinking. The drinking is performed by putting bamboo tubes down to the bottom of the jar and then sucking up the liquid. So that no one shall have more than his fair proportion at a time, a system of floats is arranged whereby the amount of drink consumed by each man is registered.

China Is on Guard.

While China has not provided for the internment of Germans and Austrians, even those of military age, all citizens of the central powers are required to register and are forbidden to travel. They may engage in peaceful occupations with China's permission. The mildness of the regulating created some comment among foreigners, but Chinese officials replied to such criticism by saying they closed the German banks and are limiting the activities of Germans and Austrians even more than the United States and Japan are.

DUNLOP TIRES SEAL OF QUALITY BICYCLE

Dunlop Means "Original"

When you hear a bicycle owner say his tires are the original, not the imitation, he means that all other wired-on bicycle tires took Dunlop Tires for their model, because Dunlop was first in the field.

The Pneumatic Tire Industry rests on the name "Dunlop."

And next in importance to your realizing that fact is the necessity for realizing this one: Dunlop Tires from the first—1894—were made by a patented process.

We found the way to make them right—a way that would impart to them such road mastery, such superiority of toughness and resiliency that they would sell eight times faster than any other make of bicycle tires. Eighty per cent. of all bicycle tires sold in Canada are Dunlop.

He Meant Well.

(Guelph Mercury.)

A bishop's injunction to the police in Ireland to 'make their peace with God," reminds us of the religious fanaticism of a barber, some time back, who had vowed to remind every customer of the eternal verities. After getting one well lathered, and stropping his razor he remarked, with great unction, "Prepare to meet thy God," and then wondered why his customer made a flying leap from the shop. The Irish injunction to the police sounds of the same order.

THE DAYS OF RECONSTRUCTION FOR ALL PALE, THIN PEOPLE

This is the Season When It Is Most Necessary to Tone Up the System and Build Up the Blood and Nerves

Applied to health the expression "run down" means a condition in which some, or all, of the bodily functions are enfeebled. This is a condition which only too frequently follows the long indoor months of winter when people live and work in imperfectly ventilated houses, shops, offices and schools. If you find yourself at this season easily tired by slight exertion you need a tonic. If the appetite is poor or fickle, the digestion impaired, the nerves shaky or impoverished, if you are pale and easily worried, winter has left its mark upon you. No particular organ being affected, you must look for relief to the blood. It is only by enriching and toning up the blood that you can regain what you have lost during the past winter and at the same time put yourself in shape to stand the trying heat of coming summer. To build up the blood, tone and strengthen the nerves, increase the appetite and bring vigorous strength to weakened bodies, there is no medicine can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These pills actually make new, rich, red blood, which will make you feel better, eat better, sleep better, and work more cheerfully. If you are in need of a tonic, and most people are at this season, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills will not disappoint you.

COULD HARDLY WALK.

Mrs. J. McDonald, Jr., Hay, Ont., says: "Some years ago I suffered greatly from anaemia and as I did not realize the seriousness of the trouble I soon became a complete wreck. I got so weak I could hardly walk. I neither ate nor slept well, and could not go upstairs without stopping to rest. At times I had an almost unbearable pain in my back and would have to remain in bed. I suffered almost constantly from a dull headache, and when sweeping if I would stoop to pick up anything I would get so dizzy that I would have to catch hold of something to keep from falling. My eyes were sunken and my hands and limbs would be swollen in the mornings. I tried several kinds of medicine without benefit and my friends thought I would not recover. Then I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and before long could see and feel that they were helping me. I gladly continued the use of the pills until I was completely cured and I cannot say enough in their praise, and I strongly recommend them to all run down girls and women."

SOME GOOD ADVICE.

Mrs. Alice Black, Amherst Beach, N.S., says: "I have received much benefit from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and would advise all who need a medicine for a run down system to make use of them. In my own case I have found the pills do all you claim for them, and shall always have a good word to say for this medicine."

RUN DOWN AND NERVOUS.

Mrs. B. Wainlott, Beaver Bank, N. S., says: "I was sick, run down and awfully nervous. The slightest noise would startle and annoy me. I suffered pains around the heart and every particle of color left my face and hands. I always felt tired, and slept poorly at night. I was so poorly that my friends thought I would not recover. I tried many medicines but they did not help me. Then I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to drop all other medicine and try them. It was fortunate I did for in the course of a few weeks I found them helping me. I continued taking the pills for some weeks longer and they completely cured me. I earnestly advise every weak woman and girl to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial, and I am sure they will not be disappointed."

AFTER THE GRIPPE.

Mrs. Thos. Covert, R.R. No. 2, Bancroft, Ont., says: "Following an attack of grippe I was left very weak and miserable. My appetite was poor. I suffered from headaches, my skin was sallow, and two boils broke out. I began taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and had only used a few boxes when I felt as well as ever. They drove all the impurities from my blood, gave me a good appetite, and I have since enjoyed the best of health. I can recommend the pills to anyone suffering from impure blood or skin disease."

STOMACH TROUBLE.

Mrs. James Martin, R. R. No. 1, Perth, Ont., says: "I suffered greatly from stomach trouble, which was accompanied by severe pains in the side and around the head. At times I was so bad that I vomited everything I ate, and even the medicine the doctor gave me. I grew weaker every day and would frequently have to lie down, and a the doctor was not helping me I was about discouraged. Then I saw Dr. Williams' Pink Pills advertised to cure the trouble and decided to try them. In a few weeks the pain had left and I could eat a little. I continued until I had used six boxes when I felt myself fully cured. In fact my friends tell me I am a living advertisement as to what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can do."

A SERIOUS CONDITION.

Mr. Wilfrid Donald, West Flamboro, Ont., says: "Before I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I was in a serious condition. I was not only badly run down, but my nerves seemed to be completely shattered. I slept badly at night, and got up in the morning tired as when I went to bed. I seemed to be on the verge of a nervous breakdown. At this stage I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In the course of a few weeks I felt much relief, and continuing the use of the pills they completely restored my health. I can now sleep soundly, eat well, and am enjoying complete freedom from the old nervous troubles."

Do not be persuaded to take a substitute. See that the full trade mark name, "Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People." is printed on the wrapper around the box. If you cannot get these Pills through your dealer they will be sent by mail at 50c a box, or six boxes for $2.50, by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Government to Use Buildings.

Prof. C. C. Nutting, who will lead a party of Iowa scientists in an expedition to the West Indies next summer, has received word, says the Iowa University News Letter, that the English government building on the Pelican Islands, which will be the base of the expedition, will not be turned over to the explorers without cost. Some of the men who intended to go with this expedition at first have since entered war service, but plans are going forward rapidly and the outlook is most promising, Professor Nutting declares. He made a preliminary visit to the goal of the expedition last summer, and says that he has never seen a place where the opportunity for scientific research was any greater.

Unmanned Boats Foiled.

The Germans recently attempted an attack on British warships by means of small boats loaded with high explosives, unmanned and controlled by wireless. The idea was originally an American one, and was developed in the Hammond wireless controlled torpedo. But the drawback in all these radio-controlled devices is that the enemy can send out "interfering" waves and throw the boat off its course. The latest improvement in boats controlled from shore is said to be a craft whose course is directed by playing a searchlight on a selenium cell. The electrical resistance of selenium varies in light and darkness, and this fact can be taken advantage of to manipulate a steering apparatus by means of the finger of the searchlight beam.

PATRONS ARE THE PATRIOTS

Customers of Some Hotels Profit Very Little by New Plan of Conservation of Food Supply.

The food administration is pleased to pieces with the New York hotels for saving more than a thousand barrels of flour a week and some 17 tons of meat a day by these wheatless-meatless occasions that are so popular now, a writer in Collier's observes. Provision dealers report a falling off in sales, and all is lovely and statistical. 'Tis a fair picture to gaze upon, but honor where honor is due! That patient hero, the hotel patron, ought to come in for a few kind words, since he pays the full price and eats the half portion.

"Save wheat—use corn"—bread is 10 cents, corn bread is 15 cents. As a transient consumer, the other noon, we paid 90 cents for a slice of beef as large as a postal card, plus one tablespoonful of creamed potatoes, plus a bit of Yorkshire pudding about the size of a watch. No doubt it was all that was good for us, but the price was more. If the widely known principles of economics are still working, we helped make meat and bread cheaper and paid as much as if we were making them dearer.

A patriot is a noble thing, but isn't it better to be one than to trim one? The hotel keepers of Manhattan are playing both sides of the game and the food administration furnishes a jazz band of statistical admiration for their efforts. These bonifaces who are shrinking the meals and swelling the prices need something all right, but not "governmental" encouragement. Meanwhile the hotel user can feel sure that the war has not changed his function at all—he's the paying goat now just as he used to be.

HOLD WOOL IN THIS COUNTRY

War Trade Board Takes Steps to Meet the Requirements of Both the Army and Navy.

Restrictions governing the exportation and importation of wool were tightened recently by the war trade board with a view to conserving American supplies and checking the increase in prices, which have risen 200 per cent.

No commodities containing wool will be permitted in future to leave the country, it was announced, if, in the judgment of the board, the wool is needed for the uses either of the army or the navy.

Importers before they can obtain licenses will be required to sign an agreement that they will sell no wool to persons other than manufacturers and that they will give the government an option to purchase all wool imported at a price 5 per cent less than the price that obtained for the same grade July 20, 1917.

PLATINUM "FAKE" IN OREGON

Geological Survey Explodes Report of Find of Precious Metals in a Western District.

The present shortage of platinum and the consequent greatly increased price of the metal bid fair to result in a considerable increase in the domestic production of platinum during the coming year, according to the United States geological survey. At the same time, while legitimate miners are increasing their production and to some extent relieving the country's shortage, other persons are using the interest aroused by the present nation-wide search for the metal to make extravagant claims for utterly worthless deposits, and some honest prospectors are led by false assays, made by inefficient or venal assayers, to believe mistakenly that they have valuable platinum deposits. Reports of platinum in some mythical combination—"volatile platinum" or "colloidal platinum"—should be regarded as sufficient evidence of the incompetence or dishonesty of the assayer.

During the season of 1917 the geologists of the United States geological survey, department of the interior, spent much time in visiting platinum deposits that proved to be worthless. A notable example is seen in the supposed platiniferous sands of the Deschutes river, near Terrebone, Ore.

The material collected there consists of loosely cemented dark volcanic sand and conglomerate interbedded with basalt and volcanic tuff. The black basaltic sand is supposed to have the richest content of gold and platinum, but neither in panning the material in the field nor in the chemical tests made by the geological survey could any trace of platinum or other metals of the platinum group be found. Neither was any gold found in the concentrates, and it is concluded that material of this type is very unlikely to contain workable amounts of gold.

MONEY LOANED FOR THE WAR

Dollars Invested in Bonds Expended for Food, Clothing, Ammunition and Other Necessaries.

What becomes of the dollar which is invested in government bonds? Here is the course it takes as visualized by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo in his annual report to congress:

First, it goes to the government as a loan for the war.

Second, it is expended by the government for food, clothing and ammunition, which go directly to a gallant soldier or sailor whose fighting strength is kept up by the food, whose body is kept warm by the clothing, and whose enemy is hit by the ammunition.

It has not been expended in the purchase of needless food and clothing for the man at home, and is, therefore, released for the use of the soldier, it is saved wealth to the man at home and can be loaned to his government at interest with resulting benefit to himself and to his government.

Utilized Artificial Flood.

By means of an artificial rise, started on October 18, 1917, at Dam No. 7, Ohio river, and augmented by water from the Muskingum, Kanawha and Big Sandy rivers, more than 80,000 tons of coal from the Kanawha river were delivered to Cincinnati and other river cities, says a bulletin of the department of commerce. Every available tugboat and barge was used in this movement, even the small harbor boat of one of the coal companies being utilized to bring down four coal boats, and a snowboat pusher was chartered to bring down ten barges. Fourteen tows of more than 200 craft were in the movement. Last August, during a period of extremely low water, a fleet of barges, which carried 13,000 tons of coal, was successfully moved by means of artificial floods. About a year ago two similar experiments were carried out successfully at a time when there was a shortage of coal in Cincinnati.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat also take glass of Salts before eating breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish, ache, and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy; the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll be a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach gets sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumati "twinges when the weather is bad. Eat less meat, drink lots of water also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithea-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say they sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

What the Draftsman Does.

Generally speaking, a draftsman, or draughtsman, is one who draws plans from instructions given him. A mechanical draftsman is an assistant to a mechanical engineer, and he draws the plans of the engineer's proposed works. If he is a mechanical engineer it will be plans of machines, bridges, etc. An architect plans buildings, and his draftsman, from instructions furnished him, draws the plans. The draftsman is largely a copyist. He creates nothing, but he gives expression to the ideas of his superior.

Found Answer in His Sleep.

Mathematical students will be interested in the experiences of the Marquess de Cordorcet, who published a volume on the integral calculus at the age of twenty-two. A problem had been submitted to him which, try as he might, he could not solve. To use a colloquialism, he "went to sleep on it," and successfully obtained the answer, which he remembered on waking.

Avoid Brilliant Lights.

If you have a sense of faulty vision it is a natural inclination to seek a very strong light by which to read or study. This simply adds to the eyestrain. The best light is an indirect, diffused light of sufficient strength to make the letters on the page stand out in uniform distinctness. Avoid the brilliant reflection from metallic objects that may be on the desk.

Noted Cricketer Enlists.

Bert Kortland, an international sportsman, has enlisted voluntarily in the 6th Canadian Field Engineers, in training near Vancouver. Kortland, in the years of 1909 and 1910 was, according to the averages, the leading Australian cricket batsman. He is known in sporting circles throughout Canada and the United States and England, as well as in Australia.

A NECESSITY IN THE HOUSE.

Most of the common ills of life arise from a torpid, sluggish condition of the Liver, Kidneys or Bowels, and because they act on each of these organs in a direct and specific way Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills overcome serious and painful diseases over which ordinary medicines have no control.

Motor Machine Guns.

Hamilton Fyfe writes the London Daily Mail describing the splendid gallant and useful part played by Canadian motor machine guns, which gained precious time for saving things which would have otherwise fallen into the enemy's hands. Their duty was to assist wherever the line was particularly pressed. They attacked and dispersed the German cavalry. The Canadians put these guns in the front wire till finding themselves in danger of being outflanked, then withdrew behind the wire. They suffered in the withdrawal, only one sergeant, two privates being left unwounded. A captain had his arm blown off. Some men had only twenty hours' sleep in eight days, yet the commander reported every man cheerful and full of fight. "Nothing could be more successful than the first appearance of this vastly useful unit," concludes Fyfe. "They saved many situations from developing seriously, and killed a tremendous lot of Boches. Both our troops and the French speak of them with the highest admiration and gratitude."

Blind Billiard Player.

A blind man played a billiard match recently against a man with sight, and scored 62 points in 1 hour 40 minutes. The blind player was Sergt. Shawl, late of the Princess Patricia's Regiment, who lost his eyesight in the second battle of Ypres.

The strangest thing was that, although he advanced his hand to locate the exact place of the balls, he only two or three times actually touched a ball. He said that he could sense the ball, just as anyone in a dark room could tell by the "feel" on his face when he is close to a wall. He described it as feeling a coldness. His highest break was nine.—Tit-Bits.

In the Mud.

The following is a Munchausen tale in Everybody's showing the quality of the mud in Flanders at the present day. A soldier walking along a road noticed a hat, which he attempted to kick out of the mud. What was his surprise to find a head under it, and to hear a voice calling for help. When the man was extricated, he said, "I was on horseback." So together they proceeded to dig out the horse. The horse's mouth was found to be full of hay taken from a waggon which had sunk still farther down.

CHILL STARTS COLD

WAS SICK FOUR WEEKS

JUST ABLE TO CRAWL ABOUT

Mr. Weldon T. Hawkes, Curryville, N.B., writes: "Last spring I was taken very ill with a severe cold. I got wet and it started with a chill. I was sick four weeks, and was just able to crawl about. People all said I had inflammation of the lungs, and I think I did. I told a friend to get me two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, and before the first one was taken my cold and cough were broken up, and the second did its work completely. I am raising a famly and I find that it is a good medicine for the children."

There is no remedy that will cure stubborn colds or coughs, the kind that won't let go, like Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup.

It allays the inflammation, soothes the irritation, heals the diseased mucous lining of the lungs and bronchial tubes, and rids the system completely of all the bad effects of lingering coughs and colds.

There are so many spurious "Pine" preparations on the market that you should see you get "Dr. Woods" when you ask for it.

Put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; price 25c. and 50c.; manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

VERY LITTLE CHANGE IN THE SITUATION ON WESTERN FRONT

GERMANS FAVOUR BOLSHEVIKI PARTY WITH ANOTHER ULTIMATUM

THE CHANNEL IS BLOCKED

Thrilling Story of the British Naval Raid on Ostend--Guns Thundered on All Sides

LOSSES WERE LIGHT

(Special to The Examiner.)

DOVER, England, May 11. — The German naval base at Ostend undoubtedly is effectively blocked, as the result of Friday morning's daring raid, except for the passage of small craft.

The old cruiser Vindictive, 320 feet long, lies quartering in the 327-foot channel. The rapid filling in around her with silt by the current will cause the Germans considerable trouble.

British casualties were remarkably light. Officers and men who participated in the venture reported five dead, 29 wounded and ten missing.

OFFICIAL REPORT.

Commodore Hubert Lyns, commanding the operations, made the following report to-day:

"It was a lurid scene. At 2 a.m. the Vindictive arrived, on programme time. There was a thundering of guns on sea and land, the exploding of bombs from the air, and an occasional cry of agony from the wounded. Searchlights criss-crossed above the whole scene, which was further illuminated by star shells and flashes of guns.

"For a full hour this picture was witnessed off Ostend. The Vindictive cruised for twenty minutes in the fog, looking for the entrance.

"Finally, the old cruiser located the entrance," the Commodore said, "and entered the channel, jamming her bow against the piers. Meanwhile, she was being raked by machine guns from the shore. An officer cleared the engine rooms and the stokers fired the prepared charges.

Crew Taken Off.

Motor boats which had been manoeuvring outside the channel, then dashed alongside to take off the crew. In a hail of machine gun bullets they transferred two officers and 38 men, and rushed toward the Warwick.

"Admiral Keyes, who had been watching the operations, thereupon rescued the men. Some of the motor boats which were badly battered, were blown up."

The Dover Patrol.

LONDON, May 11.—A large number of officers and men who took part in the operation against the Zeebrugge mole on April 23 claimed the right to participate in the Ostend operations, says a Central News story of the raid, and their wish was gratified. All the men on the Vindictive were volunteers from the Dover patrol.

According to the Press Association, the Vindictive had a complement of 52 officers and men. The effect of the operation was to restrict greatly the use of the harbour, the Press Association says, making it impossible for cruisers to go in and out. Experts do not go so far as to say that the same disability applies to submarines

PREPARATIONS FOR AN OFFENSIVE UNDER WAY ON ITALIAN FRONT

Austrian Armies Are Being Completely Re-organized—Divisions Are Being Reinforced—German Officers in Command.

THE MACEDONIAN FRONT

(United Press Service.)

(By Henry Wood.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, May 10. —Information from the Italian front establishes the fact that since the inspired announcement by the entire German-Austrian press regarding the impending offensive against the Italians, indications are daily apparent of a complete reorganization of the Austrian armies in that theatre and of preparations for an offensive.

Campaign of Raids.

The Austrians have inaugurated a campaign of raids and reconnaissances usually the prelude of major attacks. The Austrian High Command apparently has divided its forces into two groups, the armies of each being commanded separately.

The effective divisions holding down the Italian front, which were allowed to decrease during the winter have been reinforced, the number of companies has been increased and the artillery filled out.

May Be Diverted.

From various sources it is learned that extensive efforts are in progress for the purpose of restoring the combative quality of the Austrian army.

While these preparations seemingly indicate an offensive against Italy, allied military officials recognize that this new military concentration could easily be thrown against the Franco-British front.

Reports from the Macedonian front state that after a winter of inactivity the French and British have begun activities, capturing several villages during the past month.

The Macedonia Front.

The Macedonia front is now held exclusively by Bulgarians. The German divisions formerly there have been transferred to the French front and into Asia Minor and Syria. Although German officers are still commanding the artillery and aviation units, and the Bulgarians presumably are acting under the German Imperial Staff, they do not give any evidence of an offensive.

Stone Porch For The Courthouse

The porch on the Court House, which following the fire on December 12, 1917, was torn down, is now under reconstruction, and will represent a outlay of about $4,000. Standing on a platform 12 by 13 feet, six round stone carved pillars will run the height of the building, while four square pillars will stand on the inside next the walls. The cornice will be of Indiana stone while a stone fan will complete the top.

Finnie and Gordon, the contractors, expect the building with the porch completed, will present an appearance second to none in the city, and able to compete with any in Ontario.

The stone used in the porch is ordered from Hamilton, and the completion of the building will depend upon the speedy delivery of it.

AMERICANS WILL PARADE BEFORE THE KING TO-DAY

(Special to The Examiner.)

LONDON, May 11.—Secretary Baker's announcement that 500,000 American troops are in France adds to the heartiness with which the American soldiers, marching before King George to-day, will be greeted, the London press declares.

Kentucky Derby Will Be Accounted For To-day—Ideal Weather Prevails

A PREMIER EVENT

Canadian Press:

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 11.—Clear weather promised ideal racing conditions for the forty-fourth renewal of the historic Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs here this afternoon, when ten of the best three-year-olds in the land will contend for supremacy in this, the premier event of the American turf.

A Big Event.

All of the entries are conceded to be of high calibre and the race is expected to be one of the most open in the history of the event. A. K. Macomber's "War Cloud" will go to the post as the public choice, with K. D. Alexander's "Escobazcond." Aside from these, "Sewell Combs," "Lucky B," "American Eagle" and "Viva America" are all well liked. The race is for three-year-olds at a mile and a quarter, and is worth approximately $20,000, making it the richest event of the year.

A Later Despatch.

Later in the day a steady rain poured on Churchill Downs and made prospects of a muddy track. This may affect the chances of the favourite horses considerably.

Russian General Reported Wounded By The Bolsheviki

Canadian Press:

COPENHAGEN, May 11.— General Rennenkampff, Russian commander in the Japanese and present wars, has been murdered by Bolsheviki at Taganrog, in Southern Russia, according to the Vienna correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger of Berlin.

In the Japanese war, General Rennenkampff commanded a Cossack cavalry division. Later he made an unenviable record as governor-general of Trans-Baikalia.

Germans Issue An Ultimatum

Demand That Russian Government Stop Arming Troops and Arrange For Return Transportation of German Prisoners

MAY OCCUPY MOSCOW

(Special to The Examiner.)

MOSCOW, May 11.—Count Von Mirbach, German Ambassador to Russia, has issued an ultimatum to the Bolsheviki Government demanding that it stop arming troops and disband those already armed. He also declared that the question of transporting German prisoners of war back home must be settled quickly.

The Ambassador mentioned the possible German occupation of Moscow as an alternative.

Y. W. C. A. Exhibition Was Largely Attended

Miss Littlefield Was Presented With a Bouquet of Roses

The third Y.W.C.A. gymnasium exhibition this year, held last night at the Y.W.C.A., was equally successful to either of the previous presentations. A feature of last night was the addition to the already splendid programme of two interpretative dances by Miss Caroline Littlefield, a Russian dance followed by an encore of "On to Victory."

Pennant and Prizes Presented.

Miss Madeline Pulkinghorn was presented with a splendid Y.W.C.A. pennant for winning the high jump competition on two successive evenings. Miss Littlefield was presented by Miss Mary Denne on behalf of the Juniors with a bouquet of roses. Miss Margaret Denne won the first prize, a box of chocolates, for selling most tickets, and Miss Jean Robinson second prize.

OUTLOOK IS SERIOUS

Extra Session of Bolsheviki Government Has Been Held—Capital May Again Be Transferred

GERMAN DEMANDS

Canadian Press:

LONDON, May 11.—Russia has been suddenly faced with events that may again change the political outlook, the Petrograd correspondent of the Daily Express telegraphs. Germany, he says, has apparently found that economic dominion over Russian territory is insufficient, and is seeking military occupation. An extra session of the Bolshevik Government Council has been held in Petrograd to discuss the situation created by the ultimatum recently delivered by the German Ambassador, Count Von Mirbach, which embodied the demands of a character apparently calculated to turn Russia virually into a German colony. Premier Lenine's speech at this meeting was extremely pessimistic, the correspondent reports. According to the newspaper, Podnia, the question of transferring the capital to Nijni Novgorod was broached, as was the subject of immediate military measures for the defence of Moscow against possible aerial attacks.

Y. M. C. A. Campaign Was A Big Success

The committee in charge of the Y. M.C.A. campaign, has now practically completed its programme and desires to thank the community, county and city for the splendid manner in which support has been given to the raising of this fund.

The county, without canvass, through the County Council, voted one mill on the dollar toward the quota of $10,000 which was asked for by the general committee in Toronto. This will net about $9,250 from the county, outside of Peterborough. Peterborough city was thoroughly organized and in so effective a way that the work was practically completed in one day instead of three.

There were very few objectors and the spirit in evidence was patriotic to a very high degree. There was a very general expression, however, that all funds of this nature, including Patriotic Red Cross, as well as the Red Triangle, should be a matter of general taxation and placed on the rates as this would most equitably distribute the charge and also insure that there was general participation by all the people. Properly speaking, the tax should be a federal one and the various amounts, as required, made a part of the federal budget so that proper provision would be assured.

The Quaker Oats Co., with its splendid contribution of $1,000, heads the list. The employees of the Quaker Oats Co. and the Leonard Construction Co. made a very splendid contribution of $345.

FRENCH OFFICIAL

Spirited Artillery Fighting Continued Throughout the Night—French Gained Ground

LOCAL OPERATIONS

PARIS, May 11.—Heavy artillery fighting on the front below Amiens, in the region of Grivesnes and Mailly Raineval, is reported in to-day's official communication. The French gained ground on the southern side of the Picardy battle front, near Orvillers Sorel, south-east of Montdidier.

The statement follows:

During the night very spirited artillery fighting continued all along the front in the region of Grivesnes and Mailly Raineval. North of Grivesnes our troops carried out a raid and took fifteen prisoners. In a local operation at Marcuil Wood, north-west of Orvillers Sorel, we made an appreciable gain of ground. Thirty-nine prisoners and several machine guns fell into our hands. A German counter-attack was broken up completely by our fire. French detachments made several incursions into the German lines, especially south-east of Montdidier, north-east of Thiaucourt, in the sector of Sapignuel, and in the Woevre, taking prisoners and material. There is nothing to report elsewhere on the front.

TRINITY CHURCH OFFICIAL BOARD

Resolution of Appreciation of Rev. J. P. Wilson's Ministry Was Adopted

At the regular meeting of the quarterly Official Board of Trinity church, very gratifying reports were received from the various departments of the church. Financially, socially and spiritually marked progress has been made during the year under the able guidance of Rev. J. P. Wilson, D. D. New members have been received into the church every quarter.

At the conclusion of the business the following resolution was carried unanimously by the Board:

Service Appreciated.

Moved and seconded, that this Quarterly Official Board wishes to express its high appreciation of Dr. J. P. Wilson's work as pastor Trinity church during the past four years. His excellent pulpit work, his tact and good judgment and his untiring devotion to the work of the church were mentioned and praised.

During July and August, the congregations of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church and Trinity Methodist church will worship together in union services.

THE WEATHER

Last night the temperature was down to five degrees below the freezing point, (27), and there was ice on the water and a crust on the newly worked garden. However, unless the gardener was over-ambitious and had his crop in unseasonably early, there was probably little damage done. The rainfall of the last few days has brought the total up to almost as much as the whole of April.—W.P.

...COUNTY ROADS SYSTEM.

...attention of the Peterborough ... Council is respectfully called ...most interesting article on the ... Roads System by Mr. W. M. ..., which appears in another ... of to-day's issue. Peterbor... at present holds the unique re... being the only county in the ...ce which has not adopted such ...em. It is a distinction that is ...tified by the general condition ... roads in the county.

...Maclean states that there has ...n a single instance of a county ...ning a county road system ... under the Highway Improve...ct, and adds that "it is safe to ...t no county council which has ...ystem in existence a sufficient ... to give it a fair trial could or ...seriously attempt to abandon ...e work accomplished as a rule, ...n a revelation of efficiency to ...epayers as compared with or... township management."

...e are significant statements ...he county legislators would do ...o consider at their meetings, ..., while Mr. McLean's explan... of the financing of the system ...also be carefully noticed. ...A CHANGE NEEDED.

...Abbatt-Bradbury cases and the ...ion they have aroused should ...most beneficial effect upon the ...ystem of pensions, and it is ...e therefore that these glaring ...s have been uncovered. For ...e the agitation has already re... condition of affairs that was ...ected heretofore, namely, that ...ases of officers the fact that ...s been granted a commission ... by medical boards as prima ...idence that they were in per...sical condition when they ...e service, and their disability ...ave judged to have been caus... service, while in the case of ...nlissioned officers and men a ...different method seems to be ...

It has been the custom of ...boards in estimating the am... disability an enlisted man ...ered to endeavour to find that ...r's condition is partly at least ...e to ailments which had their ...before he joined the colours. ...is is that the findings of ...ards reads something like ...This man is suffering from ...disease of the heart, aggra... but not due to service,' and ...ating the extent of disability ...ich his pension is to be based ...on is made because the Board ...ded that heart trouble existed ...e soldier was enlisted.

...case of the officer it is ...ailing. Whatever disability is ...id ascribed to his service ...s recommended for a pension ...ely. With the non-com. or ...e system appears to be out of ...d the plan seems to be to whittle the disability down as low as possible. The Great War Veterans' Association have been urging for some time that the government should accept the principle that when army doctors have accepted a man as fit for service, and he has been sent to England and then to France, passing half a dozen medical boards en route, the Pension Medical Board should base this man's disability on his condition as he appears before them, and recommend him for pension accordingly, it being taken for granted that he was perfectly fit when he joined the army. Now that it has been shown that this system has been adopted in the case of officers, the demand of the Veterans for a revision of the whole basis of pensions is likely to be much more vigrous than it has been.

It is bad enough that there should be a difference in the monetary value of the pensions granted to officers as contrasted to the awards to privates, but when it is learned that two different methods are used in arriving at disabilities, there is every reason for indignation. As the Toronto Star aptly puts it: "Before the present session closes, Parliament should see that the foundations of the pension system are sound and that officers get no more than a square deal and the men no less."

PUBLIC EXPENDITURE.

(Monetary Times)

Hon. W. S. Fielding was quite correct in his contention, made during the recent debate in the House of Commons on the financing of Canadian Government Railways, that the expenditure of public moneys without the approval of the representatives of the people was a distinct menace to the principle of representative government. We are ready to admit that during war times it is quite proper to expend public funds without the sanction of parliament, providing the emergency is acute. On the other hand, it is dangerous practice to place in the hands of the administration power to make great outlays of public funds that have never been appropriated by parliament.

The Hon. Mr. Maclean, in this particular instance, offered the explanation that the funds to be expended were to come out of railway receipts; and that to include in the budget estimates amounting to a huge total on railway account, without also including in the estimates as counterbalancing items railway revenues, would give a wrong impression of the financial condition of the country. In this case, appropriations are to be made out of railway earnings, and manifestly—especially during these difficult days—such earnings cannot be accurately forecasted. Nevertheless, it strikes us as dangerous practice to permit public moneys to be appropriated and expended by any department merely by government sanction. And the case in point is not by any means an isolated one.

In recent years the practice has become all too common, both in provincial as well as in federal administration, to make large expenditures of the people's money that have never been appropriated for those specific purposes by the legislatures or by parliament. In the case of the provinces, receipts and expenditures have been growing at an accelerated rate; the expenditures increasing in response to popular demands for enlarged government service—for the building of roads and bridges, the construction of public buildings, and more ambitious undertakings. Some of the moneys expended have never been appropriated by parliament, but have been paid out under warrants. In all the provinces the major part of special war expenditures were incurred through the use of orders, or governor's warrants. This is not a violation of constitutional practice, to be sure; but it is a violation of a sound principle underlying both private and public finance—that the people who ultimately pay should control through their designated representatives.

Warrants are issued, under the approval of the governor-in-council, upon a report being made by a department that appropriations are exhausted and that additional funds are required for a particular undertaking; or the cabinet may authorize the issuing of warrants on the plea that such expenditures are "for the public good." Plainly, both these practices can be justified only when the need is imperatively urgent.

We are not disposed to find fault idly during these hard and difficult times; but the provincial and federal administrations will act most wisely in cutting to the lowest level all expenditures that have not received the direct sanction of the people's representatives. The control of taxation and public expenditures is of the essence of democratic government.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Lord Curzon's statement that Lloyd George's fall would cause rejoicing in Berlin, is not likely to be denied.

The feat of Lieut. Fonck of the French aviation corps, in destroying six German bi-planes in one day's fighting, forms a new record.

A STRANGE DOCUMENT.

There have been many revelations as to the peculiar viewpoint of official Germany, but the extracts published by the State Department at Washington from a document circulated in Spain by German agents, seems to be the climax. This strange pamphlet calmly sets forth the horrible treatment accorded the people of Belgium and Northern France, mentioning the number of cathedrals and churches destroyed, the number of non-combatants killed, the quantity of watches, spoons, bottles of wine, and other booty stolen. The document of "frightfulness" calls attention to the difference in the methods used by the Germans and the British in treating prisoners of war:

"It must be remembered that the English treat their prisoners with notable kindness," says the statement, "while the regime imposed on the English prisoners by the Germans is one of extreme rigour, so that the Germans with a much smaller number of prisoners have secured a much superior moral effect."

The whole effect of this strange German propaganda is to impress the Spanish people of the dire fate that awaits nations who oppose Germany, or favour the enemies. The tone of the communication is scarcely a compliment to the Spaniards.

Twice as easy as walking— Three times as fast

Impossible.

The old lady was going to visit with her married daughter, and, incidentally, make her first railway journey. When she arrived at the station she did not know what to do next.

"Young man," she said to a porter who looked about as old as Methuselah, "can you tell me where I can get my ticket?" "Why, mum," he replied, "you get it at the ticket office, through the pigeonhole." Being very stout, she looked the pigeonhole in amazement, and then burst out in a rage. "Go way with you, you old idiot! How can I get through there? I ain't no blessed pigeon!"

The Sardine.

The fresh sardine is a beautiful little fish. The scales on its back are an iridescent blue-green, the exact tint which the sea so often takes, while beneath the scales there shows up the most wonderful peacock-blue. There are bars on its back and sides when it first comes out of the water like those on the mackerel, but they seem to fade and disappear the moment it is exposed to the air. The rest of its body is pure silver.

COULD NOT SLEEP.

Miss Gertrude Pratt, Wolseley St., Barrie, Ont., writes: "I was very much run down and could not sleep either day or night, and my arms and legs ached so that life was very miserable. After using six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I feel well and strong again."

Maxims of the War.

Albert Guinon has some interesting "Maxims of the War" in Le Gaulois of Paris, a few of which follow:

"The Germans are excellent creators of the irreparable.

"The tendency of some persons to see transcendent genius in the enemy commanders is not an evidence of the spirit of justice, but merely a form of fear.

"There are some statesmen who join to their political folly the brusque manners of honest men.

"Let us appreciate at its full value, which is the highest, the organizing faculty of the Germans; but let us not forget that our allies, the British, have organized the universe.

"In politics, when one has solemnly pronounced certain words, one cannot say the contrary. But one can do it."

Irish Crop Report.

According to the agricultural statistics of Ireland the total acreage under crops in 1916 was 4,806,375. The acreage under crops the past year was 5,570,453, showing an increase of 763,878 acres, or 16 per cent. The total area under potatoes in 1917 was 709,263 acres, as compared with 586,308 acres in 1916, an increase of 122,955, or 21 per cent; under hay, 2,532,723 acres, as compared with 2,406,247 acres in 1916, an increase of 126,476 acres, or 5.3 per cent.

Home in Halifax roofed with Brantford Asphalt Slates

A handsome roof that defies the weather

An added touch of beauty to any house is a roof of Brantford Asphalt Slates, which are in soft, harmonious shades of reddish brown and dark green. The colors are permanent and unfadeable, being the natural shades of the slate just as it is taken out of the quarries.

It will also prove a very economical roof, because Brantford Asphalt Slates do not split, get loose, absorb water or rot. They are strongly fire-resistant and are classified as non-combustible by the fire insurance companies, and allowed to be used in cities where the most rigid fire-prevention By-laws are in force.

Brantford Asphalt Slates are very moderate in cost. The regular size of the slates and their pliability make them easily and quickly laid, thus saving time and cost of labor. Being made of high grade felt saturated and coated with asphalt, and with a surface of crushed slate, they make a roof that defies the elements and is a permanent part of the building, just like the walls and the foundation.

Brantford Asphalt Slates

are being used more extensively every year for city, country and summer homes, churches, golf clubs, stores, garages, and wherever an artistic effect is desired on a pitch roof.

If you are going to do any building this year or have an old roof that needs replacing, it will be to your advantage to Investigate Brantford Asphalt Slates.

STATUS OF CANADA IS TO BE DEFINED IN HOUSE OF COMMONS

Day Has Been Set Aside for Important Discussion — A Place in the Sun.

THE RESOLUTIONS

(Special to The Examiner.)

OTTAWA, May 11.—The Prime Minister has promised a day for the discussion of a resolution dealing with the status of Canada in the British Empire. A group of members on the Government side has taken the initiative in view of the imminence of Sir Robert Borden's and other ministers' visit to England for the Imperial War Conference. It is felt that the Canadian Parliament should go on record as to the national status of the Dominion and not leave things "in the air" as they have apparently been doing whenever the Prime Minister has gone to London, and that the country should be given a load in considering the effect of the war upon its international position.

"Consultation."

Sir Robert Borden has always taken the ground that Canada is in the war as a nation; but as the Canadian army has not been under direct Canadian control, and it has been intimated that the place of Canada in the peace conference shall be one of "consultation" only, a more definite understanding should be sought. The most that has been said by the Imperial Government is that the Prime Ministers will be consulted "if possible personally," when peace is in sight and under negotiation. It is likely that the resolution to be submitted to the House will affirm the principles laid down in the resolution adopted by the Conference last year to the effect that the dominions shall preserve "all existing powers of self-government and complete control of domestic affairs," and "a full recognition of the dominions as autonomous nations on an Imperial Commonwealth."

National Spirit.

The debate, which it is said, will be participated in by leading supporters of the Government will be in harmony with the book just published by the Prime Minister on "The War and the Future," under the heading of "Awakening Nationality." Sir Robert Borden, speaking in the early months of the war said, "one cannot but perceive an awakened national spirit and consciousness in this Dominion of Canada." An expression of this by the headquarters it is expected will reveal that despite the differences of opinion there is, on both sides of the House an agreement on national aims, which again to quote the Premier, will prove to have "dissolved prejudice and curbed discord and dissension."

Your Bad Taste In The Morning Is Due To Catarrh

Destroy This Poisonous Disease Before Your Health is Seriously Injured.

Perhaps you haven't thought of calling those unpleasant symptoms that affected your nose and throat by any particular name—but it's Catarrh just the same.

When the attack is severe, your eyes are watery and look weak. Your breath is offensive, due to inflammation in the nose and throat.

At last science has discovered a real remedy, a new scientific marvel which acts like no other Catarrh remedy on earth. "Catarrhozone" operates on a new plan; it is a direct remedy; goes instantly to the source of the trouble. Its rich, fragrant essences and healing balsams are breathed in vapour form through a special inhaler and give instant relief.

Catarrhozone doesn't stop at the relief stage—it goes further—keeps on going till a cure is effected. Bad cases are cured, as you can judge from the following letter:—"Every morning for six months last winter I awoke with a bad taste, an awful breath and stuffed up feeling in my nostrils," writes Bob E. Rutland, of Regina. "It was simply an awful case of chronic Catarrh. Relief first came from Catarrhozone. I used that inhaler twenty times a day and took it to bed with me at night. I am cured, and by the use of Catarrhozone stay well. Now I am free from irritable throat trouble, coughs, colds, headache, or catarrh."

No medicine on earth is so certain to cure every form of Catarrh or throat trouble as "Catarrhozone." Get the large $1.00 size, lasts two months and is guaranteed; medium size 50c.; sample size 25c.; all storekeepers and druggists, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

AIRPLANE STANDS STILL.

Germans Try to Perfect an Old Invention.

Advices from Amsterdam inform us that the Germans have devised a new type of airplane which can be made to stand still in the air long enough to let the aviator aim bombs accurately at his objective in the landscape below. This would solve an important problem that has given the flying men of the allies and Germany much trouble. Elaborate tables have been constructed to help solve. These allow for drift and speed over the earth, for wind and the effect of these factors on the falling bombs. Ingenious aiming devices have been invented to automatically solve some of the problems.

The idea of making an airplane stand still is not new or impractic able. It is the principle of the helicopter, a machine that rises straigh into the air without a running start It has propellers, the backward push of which sustain the machine in a given position. Last spring a machine of this type was being tested. Its value for bomb dropping was suggested at that time. The craft had two shafts each with double propellors, one on each side of the driver's position. Each shaft was supplied with a movable diamond frame, geared to which were attached to the propellers. The front blades gave the initial impetus, the rear blades the needed additional push. Both propeller frames are movable up and down independently through an arc of twenty degrees. In starting the propellers are raised to the required angle and full power is put on. Motions up and down are controlled by raising or lowering them propellers up and back of a vertical line. The helicopter idea is very old but comparatively neglected. Now it seems the Germans are making the most of it. Experiments were being conducted in 1907 with a helicopter invented by J. Newton Williams, of Derby, Conn. One of the problems then was that of descent. Stopping of the engines meant disaster. The Dulaux helicopter was experimented with in France in 1905 and it greatly impressed interested observers.

There is an impression from such phrases as "one of our great battleplanes," that there is in some minds an anology between a battleship and a battle-plane. As a matter of fact, there is no parallel. The machines which do nearly all the fighting are the smallest, lightest and fastest because results depend chiefly on speed and ability to manoeuver quickly. Speed is needed to catch the enemy; and quickness in handling is needed to attack him when caught, to make sure of being able to attack from the best possible position, and to enable the attacker to dodge about and avoid being hit.

The big airplane is invariably slower than the small one, therefore it offers an easier target. In attacking a big machine the pilot of a small fighter throws his machine into extraordinary attitudes impossible for a more cumbersome craft.

The Germans, who were the first to produce big airplanes in quantities—although the British produced the first satisfactory examples of the multiple-engine type — soon discovered that the big airplane is not a satisfactory fighting machine. As soon as the very first squadron of small fighting machines was organized for the defence of London, the big German attackers were defeated. Being slow to manoeuvre, they cannot easily escape from the rays of a searchlight and when so sighted they are easier for a gunner to hit than are small fast machines. The big, multiple-engined plane is the right weapon for big bombing raids but they have to be used skillfully and with a proper tactical plan. Attempts have been made by the Germans to make these planes safe against attack by small machines by mounting many guns upon them for their defence. This has never deterred the allied aviators from attacking them on sight. The fighting airplane, then, the "battleplane" is no "dreadnought of the air."

House Is Popular Again.

To avoid the use of petrol needed for war work, the Queen and other members of the royal family have been using horses in London for over two months.

A big family barouche that looked as if it had come out of a fairy tale stood outside a Knightsbridge draper's shop the other day. The well-groomed but elderly horses were driven by a coachman of the old dignified type in the family livery, and a tall footman stood with a fur carriage rug, while three little girls in white fur capes were as pretty a bouquet as ever a carriage held.

A passing closed carriage and pair was driven by a coachwoman who with her "footman," a bright-faced girl, wore dark green livery. An open victoria was seen in Regent street.

"There is very little jobbing by the month or year now," said a job master; "charges are too high. We hire out instead single-horsed broughams at 12s. 6d. for two ours, 16s. for dinner and theatre, 17s. 6d. for dinner and supper. These are nearly double the pre-war charges."

"Say It With Flowers"
MOTHERS' DAY, SUNDAY, MAY 12th

There is but one day in all the year, apart from all religious festivals of Christmas and Easter, which the people of Canada and the people of the United States celebrate together. From the Mexican border up to the towns that have sprung up along the Grand Trunk Pacific, the coming Sunday will be kept as "Mothers' day." Canadian and American mothers in every part of Canada and the United States will on Sunday, be honored by their children.

Just eleven years ago a Philadelphia woman, Miss Anna Jarvis, conceived the idea of choosing one day of the year on which all the land should pay tribute to the mothers, the mothers living and the mothers who had passed into the great beyond. A few years ago the American Congress favored the adopted of the second Sunday in May as "Mothers' Day," and he people of Canada, quick to see the beauty of the idea, decided that Mothers' Day should be for them, too.

It is worthy of note that in the time of Queen Elizabeth "Mothers' Day" was held very sacred in England. It was called "Mothering Day" at that time. Church services commemorated the day. White robed girls took part in the ceremonies, and many beautiful costumes in vogue in he reign of "Good Queen Bess" combined to make the day impressive.

The observance of Mothers' Day fell into use centuries ago, but the last few years have seen it revived.

In these days of war Canadians have a very special reason for honoring the mothers of the land, for it has been the loyalty to the Empire, and to the cause of freedom, taught in thousands of Canadian homes, that has inspired Canada's hundreds of thousands of fighting men, and has sent them "over there" to do their share in the struggle for the freedom of the world. Behind the great Canadian army stands the silent army of Canadian mothers who have bravely given of their best.

MARK DAY "OVER THERE."

And "over there" where the khaki line awaits the next great German drive Mothers' Day is remembered Every Y. M. C. A. hut bears on its walls posters reminding the fighting men that "Mother" claims a letter on Mothers' Day. The American army in France is officially recognizing the day by proclaiming that every letter to "Mother" bearing on the corner of the envelope the magic words "Mothers' Day" will take preference over all other mail sent to the home land.

Flowers have been of late years, particularly associated with Mothers' Day. One of the objects of the Mothers' Day International Association at the time of its establishment was to induce everyone to wear a white carnation on Mothers' Day; indeed that flower is still the badge of the organization. But the demand for white carnations on that day soon became so enormous that the growers could not begin to meet it with the result that the public settled the matter for themselves by wearing white flowers in memory of the mother dead and colored flowers in honor of the mother living. The custom has broadened now to such an extent that besides wearing flowers emblematic of the day floral gifts are preseted to living mothers in keeping with the sentiment in the preamble to the United States Congressional resolution, "We honor ourselves and the mothers of America when we do anything to give emphasis to the home, as the fountain head of the state."

Carnations are generally arranged with foliage other than their own, such as asparagus and ferns, and often with light and small-foliaged flowers like stevia and gypsophila. Sprays of carnation foliage, when procurable, cost as much as the flowers, for the reason that every spray cut means teh loss of a flower to the grower.

Pansies and violets usually look best when arranged in low bowls, and as color is the predominating feature in them, as it is also with sweet peas, wallflowers, and the like, they may be massed. But lilies, iris, and orchids should be arranged so that their forms are accentuated; massed arrangements do not suit them.

In Peterboro churches Mothers' Day will be made the occasion of special sermons on Sunday, and members of the congregation have been asked to wear flowers, white for a mother dead, and colored for a mother living.

THE TEMPLE SONGSTERS

Entertained Inmates of Protestant Home.

The Temple Songsters, instead of their usual practice, went last evening and gave the inmates of the Protestant Home a musical evening. Old-time hymns and songs were sung by the Songsters, including some well rendered items, as follows:

Recitation by Mrs. Lashbroke.
Soprano solo—Miss B. Payton.
Duet—Miss Laura Thomas and Miss Elsie Northcotte.
Recitation by Mrs. Thompson.
Trio by Mrs. W. C. Forde, Miss B Payton, and Miss E. Payton.
Pianist—Miss Mary Yost.

After a closing hymn the Songsters left, feeling they had brought a little sunshine into the dear old people's closing days.

Colds Settled In The Kidneys

Lumbago, Backache and Rheumatism Was the Result—Now Enthusiastic Over Cure Obtained.

CHATTERTON, Ont., March 27. — The kidneys are extremely sensitive to sudden changes of temperature, and much pain and suffering is a frequent result, as all who have had attacks of lumbago and rheumatism know.

The writer of this letter was a great sufferer until she found that by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills she could regulate the action of the kidneys, and thereby remove the cause of lumbago and rheumatism.

Mrs. John Lancaster, farmer's wife, Chatterton, Ont., writes: "We would not want to do without Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the house, for we have proven their merits in so many cases. I have weak kidneys and whenever I catch cold it settles in the back and develops into lumbago. I used to suffer terribly from lumbago and rheumatism, but find that by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and applying Dr. Chase's Backache Plaster that I obtain the greatest relief, and am soon all right again. My daughter has also used the pills with splendid results, as has also a neighbour woman who suffered greatly from constipation."

ACCUSED OF ATTEMPT TO MAIM HIMSELF.

BRANTFORD, May 9.—A court martial consisting of Major N. P. Kelly, presiding and Major Clark and Capt. Richardson, all of Military District No. 2, was held here to-day behind closed doors. Private Percy L. Prine was charged with deliberately throwing himself in front of a Grand Trunk engine, near the motor trucks factory in this city, last February, in an endeavour to secure injuries, in order to avoid service. Prine had to have one leg amputated. The decision of the court will be announced in the usual way, after confirmation by the general officer commanding.

ECZEMA ON MY FOREHEAD FOR OVER EIGHT YEARS

Electrical treatment and other so-called remedies failed to cure this case. Then she tried Swaizema. Read the letter:

"Being troubled with eczema on my forehead for over eight years, I tried several special remedies which did me no good, also tried electrical treatment. I stopped the electrical treatment and began with Swaizema. On using it I saw very great improvement the first week, the redness almost entirely disappeared. I continued taking Swaizema which, when I had taken the fourth bottle was entirely cured. I am well pleased and will recommend it to others suffering from eczema."

20 DAYS WITHOUT BREAD!

Press Despatch from Washington:

Food shipments to the civilian populations of the allied countries will be suspended for ten days to move three million bushels of grain to the Belgians, who are declared to be in desperate straits.

The decision to concentrate on the shipment of this grain was made following the receipt of urgent cablegrams from the Belgian Relief Commission's representative in Brussels.

One of the cables said:

"Provided all shipments now en route arrive, the Belgians will still be without bread from exotic grains for 20 days."

Will You Help to Get these Children Out of this Country of Death ?

Children under 13 years of age who have become debilitated through lack of nourishment can now be removed, for the duration of the war, to Holland, Switzerland and France, where they receive medical care and proper treatment. BEAVERBROOK BEATING PACIFIST PROPAGANDA.

London, May 10.—In the House of Lords, the Earl of Denbigh called attention to pacifist activity in this country and the general ignorance on the subject of the German war aims.

Lord Beaverbrook stated that the War Aims Committee was dealing with pacifist propaganda. The publication of the Lichnowsky memoire had done much good and was undoubtedly partly responsible for the fact that there was very little industrial unrest at present.

Lord Lansdowne objected to being classed with the advocates of peace by surrender. He had not participated in the secret conferences in connection with them. He adhered to his published views but during the present offensive it would be wrong to create the impression that the country was divided.

POPE ORDERS

Persevering Supplication the Best Means to Bring About the Supreme Desire of Mankind.

ROME, May 11—A special prayer for the cessation of the evils tormenting humanity during mass on St. Peter's Day, June 29, is urged by Pope Benedict in a special message addressed to the whole world.

"The end of the fourth year approaches since Europe is in conflagration," says the message. "During this time the tension has never been diminished but increased so that we, never had moments of relief from ever-increasing ills and afflictions."

Continuing, the Pope says, owing to the ministry entrusted to him by Providence, and animated by the charity of Jesus Christ, nothing has been left unattempted to remedy these afflictions.

The Pontiff recalls the words, in substance, of King Jehosophat, praying:: "O Lord God of our fathers, art Thou not God in heaven? And rulest not Thou over all the kingdoms? . . . In Thine hand is there not power and might, so that none is able to withstand Thee? . . . We will cry unto Thee in our affliction, then Thou wilt hear and help. . . . O our God, we know not what to do, but our eyes are upon Thee."

The Pope urges the world to trust in God, who is the arbiter of the will of man and human events, and to trust. His mercifulness to put a speedy end to so many storms hastening peace and restoring among men a reign of justice and charity. Above everything, God, who is wrathful at such persistent sins, must be placated.

Humble entreaties and persevering prayers are the best means to do this. He urges the clergy throughout the world to divide the sacrifice for the purpose on June 29, a day sacred to the Apostles St. Peter and St. Paul, supplicating that the supreme desire of all the granted and that justice be restored."

Blue-jay

For Corns

Stops Pain Instantly
Ends Corns Completely

25c Packages at Druggists

How Blue-jay Acts

A is a thin, soft pad which stops the pain by relieving the pressure.

B is the B&B wax, which gently undermines the corn. Usually it takes only 48 hours to end the corn completely.

C is rubber adhesive which sticks without wetting. It wraps around the toe, and makes the plaster snug and comfortable.

Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. After that, one doesn't feel the corn. The action is gentle, and applied to the corn alone. So the corn disappears without soreness.

This magic spot ends corns

PLACE it on your throbbing corn tonight. It takes but a second. Relief will come instantly, because the felt ring relieves all pressure.

The medicated spot of wax soothes while it works.

You will wonder why you waited so long.

Tomorrow your corn will not hurt as it has today.

And within 48 hours the corn will come out easily, painlessly.

Blue-jay is the gentle, certain way, discovered by a great chemist. Blue-jay Plasters are made by Bauer & Black, famed for surgical dressings.

Paring Is Extremely Dangerous and only a makeshift. Infection is possible. Harsh and mussy liquids are disagreeable.

Blue-jay is irresistible to the average corn. Once in a while an old and stubborn corn requires a second treatment.

Tonight prove these truths yourself. It costs so little. Then you will never let a corn hurt again.

TWELVE PER CENT OF THE ROADS IN PETERBORO COUNTY SHOULD ACCOMMODATE TRAFFIC

Peterboro is the Only County in Ontario Which Has Not Yet Established the County Road System—County Roads Are Market Roads.

PROVINCIAL AID IS SUBSTANTIAL

In a letter addressed to Mr. B. D. Hall, Secretary of the Peterborough Board of Trade, Mr. W. A. McLean of the Highways Department of the Provincial Government, has the following to say regarding the question of good roads as applied to Peterborough County:

The principal means by which general improvement is being brought about is through the County Road System. Peterborough is the only County in Ontario which has not yet established such a system. This is no doubt due to misunderstanding as to its merits among the ratepayers of your County. It would, therefore, appear only just to the County of Peterborough that we avail ourselves of the opportunity to outline the situation.

Experience Favours County Roads.

Under the Highway Improvement Act, passed by the Government of Ontario in 1901, each County Council is empowered to adopt a System of County Roads. These roads are to be under the control of the County Council.

County Road Systems are not a new institution. Four Counties were maintaining county roads at the time of the passing of the Highway Improvement Act in 1901. By 1904, seven systems had been adopted. Six additional were established in 1906 and 1907, so that thirteen have been in operation for over ten years. Six more were established by 1912. The remainder were established in 1916 and 1917, the provincial grant having been substantially increased in 1917.

No county road system created under the Highway Improvement Act has been abandoned. Wherever it has been properly established, public opinion is strongly in favour of road improvement under this system. It is safe to say that no county council which has had a system in existence a sufficient period to give it a fair trial, could or would seriously attempt to abandon it. The work accomplished, as a rule, has been a revelation of efficiency to the ratepayers, as compared with ordinary township management.

It is not intended to say that county road systems are in all cases entirely above criticism. As with other public services, some criticism has been justified in individual cases, while much has not been justifiable. No merely human organization can be perfect. A county road system is successful in proportion to the determination and earnestness of the county council.

County Roads Are Market Roads.

County roads are selected by the county council and are individually described in the schedule attached to the County By-law. It is expected that they will be the market roads of the district; that is, they are the roads radiating from the local towns, villages and shipping points. The City of Peterborough is central to the County, and it is to be assumed will attract a good deal of traffic.

"Market" includes not only Peterborough, however, but every village where produce is sold, and every railway station or siding from which produce is shipped. All farmers have to sell their produce. All farmers go to the village, to the store, to the church. A very limited mileage of roads, properly located, will serve a large proportion of the traffic. It can be demonstrated that 20 per cent. of the roads, if well built, can serve 80 per cent of a county's traffic. A map suggesting a system of county roads has been submitted to the county council by this Department. If these roads are not the roads which best serve the county traffic, the county council has full liberty to prepare a plan of roads which will do so.

This map, prepared by the Department merely as a suggestion to the county council, comprises about 110 miles of roads, situated in the southerly and more closely occupied portion of the county, and includes about 12 per cent. of the total road mileage. A county road cannot pass every farm, but under a properly selected system, few farmers will be able to go far from home without reaching and travelling on a county road. To infer, of course, that, because only 12 per cent. of the roads are selected, only 12 per cent of the residents of the county will be benefitted, is an absurdity.

Good roads attract traffic, and vehicles accumulate on them. It has been shown by publications of this Department and by the United States Office of Public Roads at Washington that, as ordinarily laid out, 20 per cent. of the total road mileage in a district will accommodate 80 per cent. of the traffic. In Peterborough County, 12 per cent. of the roads should accommodate 70 per cent. of the total farm traffic.

Provincial Aid Is Substantial.

The general proportion of provincial aid is 40 per cent. of the total expenditure for construction, and 20 per cent. of expenditure for maintenance. Construction on which aid is granted, includes not only the ordinary roadbed, but also bridges and culverts on the designated roads, the cost of machinery, the cost of gravel pits, and the salary of the County Road Superintendent.

It should be clearly understood that the provincial grant, as stated, is not a proportion of the county's contribution,—but of the total expenditure. There is an important difference in favour of the county. Forty per cent. of the total expenditure is equivalent to two-thirds of the amount raised by the county; reduced to a concrete example,—

The County raises	$1,000.00
The Province grants	666.66
The County spends	$1,666.66

Maintenance and repair are estimated on a similar basis; the provincial grant, however, being one-half that for construction.

In addition to ordinary county roads, there is a class of road carrying heavy traffic between cities or important terminal points, and which are designated "Provincial County Roads." It is to be expected that such a road should connect the City of Peterborough with the Provincial Highway which will ultimately traverse the north shore of Lake Ontario. To roads of this class, the provincial grant is 60 per cent. of the total cost of construction, and a like proportion of maintenance.

The grant for maintenance and repairs commences as soon as the roads are assumed by the county, with a view to getting the best service from roads as they exist; pending the time when construction can be reached. Counties, upon assuming a system of county roads, are expected to at once establish a comprehensive plan of maintenance. Coupled with maintenance, construction is carried on, so that the roads give good present service, and are gradually developed to a higher standard.

A Starting Point in Construction.

A county road system is a starting point in construction. One of the great mistakes of ordinary township management is that there is an effort to improve all the roads at one time. That has been an impossibility in the past, and will continue to be an impossibility for the future. It is to the advantage of a county road system that a limited mileage of roads, capable of serving the public generally, are set apart for continuous construction. When these are satisfactorily built, the system can be extended. In the meantime, however, it is the experience that townships will have been active on a reduced mileage, and the more general improvement of the feeders entering the county road system has resulted. This is the universal experience in connection with old established county road systems under the Highway Improvement Act.

CROPS UNHARMED.

Farmers Say That Last Nigth's Frost Was Not Serious.

Farmers stated to-day that the young crops had apparently not suffered from four degrees of frost last night. Mr. Robert Duff, of Selwyn, driving in this morning, particularly observed the field and noticed no damage. Several farmers on the market said they believed the clover had been slightly nipped. On the whole, however, there was little or no damage, although in the city some tomato plants that had been put out early are believed to have been killed.

SAVES WOMEN FROM TORTURE

Put a few drops on a touchy corn, then lift corn out with fingers

Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on the bottom of your feet, but why care now?

For a few cents you can get a quarter ounce of the magic drug freezone recently discovered by a Cincinnati genius.

Apply a few drops upon a tender aching corn and instantly, yes immediately, all soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn so loose that you lift it out, root and all, with the fingers.

Just think! Not one bit of pain before applying freezone or afterwards. It doesn't even irritate the surrounding skin.

Hard corns, soft corns or corns between the toes, also hardened calluses on bottom of feet just seem to shrive up and fall off without hurting a particle. It is almost magical. It is a compound made from ether says a well known druggist here.

WORE SISTER'S CLOTHES.

To Evade Military Service Draft, But Is Arrested.

KITCHENER, May 11.—Norman Schmidt was taken to London by the military police as an illegal absentee. Norman was ordered to report on March 1st, but failed to do so.

A military policeman noticed what appeared to be a young widow leave a house, but the step was like that of a man, and an inquiry was made. A search was made of the premises, but Norman could not be located. Up in the garret was found a used bed. In the clothes closet in his sister's room was found his living room, where behind a camouflage of a shelf full of old shoes was found an opening large enough for a man to crawl through, and there he lived like a hermit during the day.

Dressing in his sister's clothes, he went out motoring in the evenings.

Norman was not at home when the officers called, and his mother was ordered to produce him or be arrested. On their return he was properly dressed in his own clothes and accompanied the officers to the police station.

A Clergyman's Wife Wants Women to Know Advantages of Internal Bathing

If women could only see the thousands of letters Dr. Tyrrell has received from grateful women in all parts of the world, thanking him for his wonderful invention for Internal Bathing, they would soon discard the medicine bottle and look to the cause of their trouble. 95 per cent. of all human ills are due to accumulated waste in the Colon or Large Intestine. Warm water, properly used with the "J. B. L. Cascade," will relieve the cause of your troubles and perfect health will follow.

A Winnipeg clergyman writes: "My wife is naturally sensitive about having her name appear in public print, yet is anxious that others should know what the 'J. B. L. Cascade' has done for her. It has really given her a new lease of life. For years she had been doctoring for Constipation, which became worse each year. Since using the 'J. B. L. Cascade', first about 4 years ago; she has not been sick a day, and has become robust and strong again. Should any person wish this letter confirmed, you are at liberty to give my name in private."

The "J. B. L. Cascade" is an invention perfected by Dr. Chas. A. Tyrrell of New York, and has done more during the past few years to restore health and lessen disease than all other means combined. The "J. B. L. Cascade" is shown and explained at Warne Drug Co., Peterborough. Ask for Booklet explaining all about Internal Bathing and what it has done for others. It is free.

British Airmen Are Fully Sustaining Great Reputation Established Early in The War

Near Ypres One British Machine Attacked Five Enemy Machines Single Handed.

(Associated Press.)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 11.— There has been much activity in the air during the past few days, and British airmen have fully sustained the great reputation they established early in the war. A series of battles might be recounted in which the British triumphed over a greater number of adversaries. All of these stories vary only as to detail.

Several days ago ago near Ypres one British machine attacked five Germans single handed. The Britisher engaged one of the enemy and fought him until he turned tail and fled. The English pilot then went after another German and pressed the attack so hard that the enemy was forced into a nose spin in an attempt to escape. The ruse was futile, however, for the Britisher went after him and brought him down. Another British plane was attacked by six enemy machines which came at it from below and behind. The British observer opened fire at close range, riddling the leading German machine, which dived and then burst into flames. This finished the work of the British pilot who got away safely.

But fighting planes are not the only ones that have been busy. British bombing squads have been doing wonderful work destroying railroads, billets, ammunition dumps, and bombing enemy troops and trains.

ARCHBISHOP OF REGINA STATES THAT HE IS NOT GOING OVERSEAS

Monsignor Mathieu is in Quebec for a Brief Visit—Will Return to Regina Shortly.

GRANTED INTERVIEW

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 11.—The simultaneous arrival in Ottawa of Monsignor Mathieu, Archbishop of Regina, and Premier Gouin, of Quebec, has given rise to many rumours. His Grace of Regina, arrived in the city from Montreal last night. The Premier of the Province of Quebec arrived to-day. His Grace proceeded to the Archbishop's palace and last night was too busy to be communicated with. This morning, however, he graciously consented to converse over the telephone.

An Interview.

Questioned as to the purpose of his visit to Ottawa, he stated that he was on his way back to Regina after a brief visit in Quebec.

"It has been stated," he was told, "that you have been designated by Cardinal Begin, at the request of the government to proceed overseas to pay a visit to the troops. Is the report correct?"

"It is not correct," he replied. "I am not going overseas."

"It is further stated," he was informed, "that you will consult with members of the government while here."

His Grace stated that he had seen none of the Ministers. Beyond that he would say nothing at present. "I am on my way home," he declared.

Premier Gouin could not be seen this morning. It is believed, however his chief purpose is to see his son, who is in the Tank Battalion, which is booked to leave shortly for overseas.

"It's Confidence That Does It."

The British Lion.

L'Homme Libre (Paris, France.)

To-day one can measure the tenacity of the British lion. In a whole week the enemy has succeeded only in obtaining the results which he had appointed for his first day's rush alone! Honour to the brave Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, whose clearness and cool-headedness with the management of his army in this formidable trial have saved the allied fortunes in this memorable epic. Honour to his brave officers whose names we hope will soon be made known to the admiration of the people, and glory to that heroic Grand Army of Great Britain, and to the magnificent youth of her soldiers, of whom said one of their officers, "the sight alone made the heart beat, when at the first breathing space one saw true resolution and serenity on their faces."

Building Bigger Business

Building up a Business and watching it grow and develop is an absorbing occupation. The Milk, Cream Butter and Ice Cream Business, of the late Peterboro Creamery Co., is a notable example.

Like many other businesses, some departments grow faster than others. For instance:—The Retail Milk Distribution grew so rapidly that old methods have been replaced by new. And still it grew, and is still growing. It has now become an established business—and it is up to us to see that "what we have we'll hold."

Safe Milk Distribution For Peterboro

has been the result of years of strenuous watchfulness and labour.

Safeguarding the milk bottle has been and will continue to be our mission. To produce Milk and Cream and supply it to the customer as pure and sanitary as modern scientific experience has made it possible, has been, and will continue to be our hobby.

Our Milk is Clarified and Pasteurized before bottling

Clarified—Means Clean
Pasteurized—Means Pure

Bottled by modern and sanitary fillers, so that at no time is the milk touched by the human hands from the time of the milking of the cows until the bottle is delivered to the customer

Remember—Clarified First—then Pasteurized—clean to the last drop, and costs no more than others. Insure your milk supply by placing your order for our Milk To-Day.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE WOMEN'S PATRIOTIC LEAGUE OF ASHBURNHAM HELD WEDNESDAY

The reports of the year's work of the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham were received at the annual meeting of the League on Wednesday afternoon, with the president, Mrs. R. H. Parsons, in the chair. The League raised $2,066.76 and disbursed $1,835.18. The League received and distributed 746 pairs of socks.

The officers for 1918:—
Hon. Pres.—Mrs. R. B. Rogers.
President—Mrs. R. H. Parsons.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. J. Butcher.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Mrs. A. Fowler.
Rec.-Sec'y—Miss I. Morgan.
Cor. Sec'y—Miss A. Erskine.
Treasurer—Miss E. Scott.

Secretary's Report.

To the President and Members of the Women's Patriotic League of Ashburnham:

This society is now closing its third year of work and, while we have not accomplished quite as much in our work room as we have done in the previous years, we have been more successful in a financial way.

After our last annual meeting we made a house-to-house canvass to revise our monthly donation and one-cent-a-day lists, and this resulted in the addition of a great many new contributors. Mrs. G. L. Hay has had charge of the one-cent-a-day collections as convenor, and we feel quite sure that it owing to the careful, diplomatic way in which Mrs. Hay and her associates have managed this branch of our work that the contributions have kept up so well during the year.

Mrs. Eva Anderson has been a very successful collector of our monthly donations, succeeding Mrs. J. Smith, who resigned in January.

Mrs. Taylor resigned as second vice-president, and Mrs. A. Fowler was elected to fill this office.

In July we received a letter from Mrs. Rivers-Bulkley advising us that Pte. Heber Rogers was receiving all he was allowed to have in the way of parcels, and suggesting that we adopt S. A. Connon, who was not so well cared for, in Heber Rogers' place. This we decided to do, also to adopt our four prisoners of war completely. These are G. Butcher, H. Godfrey, E. Crofts and S. A. Connon, and also to increase their allowance to $14.40 each per month.

In August Miss A. Erskine was appointed corresponding secretary to succeed Miss M. McWilliams.

St. Luke's Church W. A., instead of holding their annual picnic, sent a donation, which was greatly appreciated.

At the Peterborough Fair a booth was very capably managed by some of our members, and the proceeds, after paying expenses, amounted to $128.70.

In September Mrs. Parsons was made convenor of a committee to prepare the Christmas boxes. One hundred and sixteen boxes were sent, each box containing one pair socks, one pound of Christmas cake, one pound of raisins, one pound dates, one package loaf sugar, one package shelled almonds, one tin condensed coffee, one jar maple butter, and a Christmas card. From the many grateful letters received and read by our corresponding secretary, these boxes were evidently very much appreciated. We are indebted to Mrs. Parsons as convenor and to Mrs. C. Moore, Mrs. W. Mein and Mrs. S. Taylor for the responsible work of making the Christmas cakes.

Owing to illness in her family Mrs Graham Convener of the Sock Committee sent in her resignation, this we received with regret, but Mrs. A. Wright and Mrs. Jas. Gillespie have been a very careful and efficient Sock Committee in Mrs. Graham's place.

In January we lost two very capable members in Mrs. J. T. Craig, by death and Mrs. J. Smith, by removal, we have missed the presence and help of the two members very much.

The Young Men's Association of Mark Street Church again very kindly gave us the use of their rink and a most successful skating party and tea was held.

A concert was given in Victoria Hall under the direction of Mr. J. Primeau by the Ashburnham Dramatic Society and Knox Church Y. P. A. Also a Shamrock Tea was held at the home of Mrs. H. Morgan in spite of severe winter weather, the proceeds from these entertainments helped our finances to a large extent.

In response to an appeal from the local Red Cross Society to help with a rush order for head bandages some twenty or more of our members went over to the Red Cross rooms and gave their assistance.

We have shipped two car loads of paper in the year—one in June and one in April and a substantial sum was realized from them both.

The workroom has been open every Wednesday afternoon during the eary and we have held a regular monthly business meeting the first Wednesday of each month, and as a result for the time we have given and the money we have made we have been enabled to make and ship:

216 suits pyjamas.
108 grey flannel shirts.
746 pairs of socks, hand knitted.

Buy wool for the socks knitted, to the amount of $300.00.

Send each of our Ashburnham boys at the front a Christmas box.

Send to our Prisoner of War whom we have adopted $14.40 each per month.

Also donations to:—
The Prisoners of War Fund.
Field Comforts Commission.
Serbian Relief Fund.
Halifax Disaster Fund.

I am sure I am voicing the sentiment of the heart of every member in saying that we are both grateful and glad that we have been given the health and strength and the privilege of doing this work if it has in any way provided comfort and cheer for our brave soldiers.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Sgd.) Isabella Morgan,
Rec.-Sec.

Sock Committee

We have taken in since last May 746 pairs of socks knitted by the members and friends of this Society.

We have sent overseas by the local Red Cross Society 516 pairs and to the Ashburnham boys at the front 108 pairs to distribute to those who needed them; also for the Christmas boxes, we sent 116 pairs.

In November we bought 240 lbs. of wool from the local Red Cross Society to the amount of $300.00.

(Sgd.) A. H. Wright,
Convener of Sock Com.

ONE CENT DAILY—$651.

The collections made during the 12 months ending March 31, 1918, amounted to the sum of six hundred and fifty one dollars and fifty-nine cents, an average of $54.27 per month.

The members of the committee all testify to the very kind way in which they were received by the contributors generally.

In June last there was a canvass made with a view of increasing if possible the collections, but any new members that were secured that way were offset by those discontinuing to contribute.

Convener One-Cent-a-Day Collection

Crack at the Dentists.

(London Free Press.)

What will the dentists do when sugar is cut off? Here's another industry likely to be affected.

Selfishness.

(Ottawa Journal-Press.)

Out of every 100 adult persons in Canada about 98 are probably thinking they are being taxed pretty high by the new ten cent levy on the pound of tea But the other two are thinking that this tax on tea is perfectly justifiable and a splendid thing— because they don't drink tea and won't have to pay the tax. There probably isn't a non-smoker in the land who isn't convinced that it's all right to lay a good stiff tax on tobacco generally—because he won't have to pay it. And the pipe smoker equally justifies a tax on cigarettes.

It's human nature, a trait of human nature that the millionaire has in common with his gardener. And much as the war may change men's minds and souls, it won't eradicate this gentle selfishness.

If not convinced, take a sudden notion to buy an automobile and note your feelings about a tax that yesterday looked to be a very fine means of raising revenue.

FRECKLE-FACE

Sun and Wind Bring Out Ugly Spots. How to Remove Easily.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is trifling.

Simply get an ounce of Othine — double strength—from any druggist and a few applications should show you how easy it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength Othine as this strength is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

WAS ON THE VERGE OF GIVING UP JOB

Advised by Friend to Take Tanlac —He Now Feels Like a New Man

"I was just about down and out and ready to give up my job when I started on Tanlac but it certainly put me on my feet again," said Edward G. Ralph, a machinist employed with the Universal Tool & Steel Company and living at 22 School Road, Mt. Dennis, near Toronto, the other day.

"I was always a strong and healthy man," he continued, "till I started on night work about nine months ago. Then I lost my appetite completely and could hardly force down enough to keep a child alive. Soon after eating anything my food would sour and bloat me up with gas that pressed around my heart so I could hadly get my breath. I would feel so dull and drowsy it was all I could do to keep my eyes open and attend to my work properly. All the time my stomach felt like it was burning up inside and I would be so miserable I didn't know what to do. After working all night I would go home and to bed, but my nerves were so worn out that I'd just roll and toss for hours unable to get to sleep. I lost thirty pounds in weight and was looking so bad that the boys in the shop noticed it and warned me that if I didn't quit work it would sure get me.

"Then one of the fellows said to to me, "Ed, why don't you try Tanlac? I've taken it and it'll sure fix you up all right." Well, I followed his advice and got me a bottle and, positively, I hadn't taken more than three doses before I began to feel better. I have taken five bottles so far and it has surely straightened me out to the Queen's taste. My appetite is first rate and I can now eat anything I want and haven't had a touch of indigestion or gas since I started on it. That burning sensation has passed off, I never feel dull and drowsy like I did before, my nerves are calm and steady and I sleep like a log. Tanlac has certainly made a new man of me and I can't say too much in its praise."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. R. Warne Drug Co., Ltd. In Havelock by A. C. Denike. In Lakefield by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd. In Fowler's Corners by W. A. Hunter. In Gelert by A. J. Scott. In Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

CHAPLAIN FROM THE FRONT WILL SPEAK IN ST. JOHN'S

Captain (Rev.) Harold McCausland M.C., Will Visit Peterboro' To morrow

An interesting visitor to Peterborough to-morrow will be Captain (Rev.) Harold McCausland, M.C., who has lately returned from France, where he had a long period of service as Brigade Chaplain on the front line. In recognition of gallantry under fire Captain McCausland was recently awarded the Military Cross. By his manly and soldierlike demeanor Captain McCausland commended himself to both officers and men, and exercised a healthy religious influence. He expects to continue his work as Chaplain in Canada. Captain McCausland was for many years a member of the Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto, and as sergeant acted as one of the representatives of this regiment at the Queen's Jubilee Celebration. His home is in Toronto, where he was assistant at St. Augustine's Church before the war.

Captain McCausland will preach both morning and evening at St. John's to-morrow, and will give some account of religious work and conditions in the army at the evening service. Returned soldiers will be particularly welcome.

Conserving the Milk Supply.

(London Free Press.)

The "save a calf" movement in the United States is alleged to be leading to the rescue of thousands of calves from the butcher. The argument of the backers of the movement is that, while mutton and pork supplies may be doubled in a year, the slaughter of cattle will lead to a famine of milk, man's best food.

Higher Heights to Climb.

(Montreal Gazette.)

We are only beginning to realize the danger confronting us, only beginning to understand the full measure of the task laid upon our people. Save and serve, work and serve, 'Tis but for a little while in the life of the individual, as a moment in the life of the nation; but it is a little while in which all our energies, all our means, must be bent to a single purpose. Canada has played a noble part during nearly four years, but there remain yet higher heights to climb.

THE FARMERS' DELEGATION

Huge Delegation Will Swoop Down on the Government To-morrow—Little to Hope For

THE SPEAKERS

Ottawa, May 13.—The vanguard of the huge farmers' delegation which will to-morrow meet the government, and express to it their views on the new Military Service Act regulations, has already arrived, and preparations are being made for the organization, and the order of the speakers, etc.

Certain of the representatives of the United Farmers have already met certain members of the government, but it is stated that beyond expressing a feeling to hear and consider whatever preparations the delegations have to present, they were given to understand that there was not much hope of any change in the regulations.

LITTLE HOPE.

It is understood that the Minister of Militia, General Mewburn, is adamant in that no discretionary powers than are at present incorporated in the Act and regulations, and that no doors be left open to the former system of litigation and appeal. In fact the general feeling prevails that beyond the possibility of a few more cases of leniency in exceptional individual cases the present delegation have little ground to hope for.

The speakers for the farmers will it is suggested, call attention to the war office report published in the Canadian papers this morning in which it was stated that the American army, on account of the plentitude of reserves, might be kept intact until it had assumed sufficient proportions for action as a unit.

Must Give Notice Of Auto Transfers

Chief Thompson stated today that automobile owners when selling or transferring cars must notify the department in order that the change may be recorded by the Department at Toronto. This is a very important duty, and if there is any further evidences of negligence the Chief is prepared to take action against offenders. Recent accidents when traced by the license numbers, have been blamed on former owners who had sold their cars, but had not notified the department or the police of the new owners.

SCOW OF COAL SINKS IN PIGEON LAKE

Mr. Bruce Freeburn was towing a scow of coal to Sandy Point, the summer home of Sir Edward Kemp, this week, when suddenly it dove to the bottom of the lake. This peculiar occurrence is explained thus: The launch which is a high powered one, was travelling at a good speed, raising the bow of the scow up in the air, and upon approaching the wharf at the Point, the speed was lowered and the weight of coal caused it to dip at the bow and sink immediately. Only quick work with a knife, cutting the line prevented a complete disappearance of the scow, launch and all.—Independent.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The closing days of the war will see Russia rising to shake off the German fetters, according to Prof. Thomas Carrigue Masaryk, Bohemian educator and political leader, in an interview with the United Press to-day. "The masses of the Russians are not satisfied with peace under German domination," said Dr. Masaryk. German influence in Russia to-day is welded solely by the sword, Dr. Masaryk said. EXEMPTION APPEALS WERE HEARD BEFORE HIS HONOUR JUDGE HUYCKE

Most of the Men Examined This Morning Will Have a Chance to Learn What "Zero" Time Means.

LIST OF CASES

The military exploits and activities of various uncles, cousins and brothers were eulogized his morning by various B men who appeared before Judge Huycke, at the review tribunal. "No doubt you are prouder of them than they are of you," said His Honour.

Most of the men were pretty well assured of a chance to follow the example of their relatives.

Raymond Barrie, age 20, works a 200-acre farm with his father, who is 56 years of age. Considerable production was evident.

Judgment reserved.

MAY GO.

Daniel O'Brien, the Ridge, Hastings, is blind in one eye; has three brothers; two married and one in the west. He works a 200 acre farm with his brother and does his best to aid production. He will probably be sent.

Percy Forbes, default.

Nelson Daniels, default.

NOT SHIRKING.

George V. P. Shaver, Hamilton, a school teacher at Apsley, has been married since the act came into force, which His Honour assured him would not help him as the Act specifically states those married after the 6th of July, 1917, would be considered single, as far as the service is concerned. His immediate conscription will terminate his education and he wishes to try his final examination for matriculation, and would ask for time to do so. His chief trouble was his general unfitness and weak eyesight. On account of the fact that his family record shows that they are not shirking, he will probably be given until July 1.

BIG CROPS.

Samuel Willard Slater thought his activiy on greater production justified his exemption. "Your friends at the front would probably think differently," said His Honour. He works 212 acres and has big crops. His case is to be considered.

His father appeared for him.

WILL PROBABLY GO.

Raymond Hunt, age 22, a farmer, thought that he was necessary to greater production; works a 180-acre farm with his brother in Harvey and has another brother farming. He is quite willing to go if the Judge thinks it necessary.

He will probably go.

A GOOD WORKER.

John Butler of Garden Hill, age 22, applied for exemption on the grounds of physical unfitness. He is a farm laborer, and his employer needs him for greater production on a 400-acre farm.

Mr. Hatton said that if he fights as well as he works, he would make a good soldier.

Judgment was reserved.

Michael Ryan, default.

John O'Brien, default.

TWO OVERSEAS.

Archibald Downing, Apsley, who has two brothers at the front, one of whom has been gassed and twice wounded, the other wounded, applied for exemption on account of impaired eyesight and his activity as a producer. He works a 280-acre farm alone and raises considerable cattle.

Judgment was reserved.

George Kirk, default.

NOT YELLOW.

Thomas Brownlie, city, age 33, does not wish to be considered yellow, and wants to go overseas, but for domestic obligations of an invalid brother and mother to support. He wanted 3 weeks' exemption to settle some business.

He will probably be sent but allowed his asked for time.

James Devillin, Indian River, default.

Clare Scully wanted another examination, which His Honour granted.

He will go to Kingston to-night.

Stirring Prophecy

Hon. James Beck Prophesies Time When the United States Will Not Accept Repayment of Its Loans to the Allies

MEETING LAST NIGHT

(Special to Examiner)

MONTREAL, May 13.—A stirring and almost utopian prophecy of American Generosity to the Allies was made by Hon. James M. Beck, former Assistant Attorney General of the United States in an address at St. James Methodist church last night, when he said the United States would not accept the repayment of its loans to the Allies. Great applause greeted speaker when he told of how enthusiastically American audiences of stock brokers, hard headed business men and others had greeted his prophecy that when after the war, Great Britain and France come to settle for the $4,000,000,000 they owe now and the $7,000,000,000, they will owe before the war is over, the reply of the United States will be "receipted in full it is paid already, paid by the blood of your sons who died as much for the United States as for you." Mr. Beck said that [illegible] had received the [illegible] all over the United States and everywhere it met with general and [illegible] acceptance. [illegible] Mr. Beck stated that when [illegible] back to the United States after the war, these [illegible] would not hear a word of the old [illegible] animosity against her French or British soldiers, and that an enduring friendship would be cemented for ever. He also prophesied the ultimate victory of the Allies, saying that every prophecy he had made so far had come true.

The Speaker had on the pulpit with him Sir Vincent Meredith, Sir Charles Davidson, Sir William Paterson, Senator Foster and other prominent citizens.

German Minister of Marine Says German Naval Offensive is Much Stronger Now

REPORTS FAVOURABLE

(Special to Examiner)

AMSTERDAM, May 13.—Admiral Von Capelle, German Minister of Marine, addressing the Reichstag declared that the German naval offensive is stronger than at any time since the beginning of unrestricted submarine war. The April reports from the submarines were favorable, he said. Herr Pfliger, a centrist said that despite the differences of opinion in the Reichstag it was agreed that the Submarine war should be kept up.

Shipping Losses For Past Two Months

Germany Is Preparing to Launch a Series of New Submarine Cruisers.

PARIS, May 13.—The Allies' navies are sinking more German submarines than the Germans can turn out, and the Germans are making exaggerated statements to convince their people that the submarine campaign is still a big success. This is the statement of Georges Leygues, the French Minister of Marine. Leygues declares the situation most favourable for the Allies, and on the other hand the number of submarines destroyed has increased progressively since January, owing to the close methodical co-operation of the Allies.

"I know the enemy is about to launch a series of new submarine cruisers of a great size, but we are ready and will not step over the fine results already obtained," declared Georges Leygues to-day.

Statement Is False.

PARIS, May 13.—During February, March and April 4,511 ships passed safely through the submarine danger zone, it was officially announced today. The Germans claim to have sunk 600,000 tons of shipping during April. This statement is false, as only 268,784 tons were sunk.

McDonald Hillier Won Overland Car Given By E. R. Wilson

McDonald Hillier, 188 Rubidge street, won the Overland runabout donated to the Motor Show committee by Mr. E. R. Wilson, to be disposed of as they deemed best, the proceeds to be given to the Canadian Red Cross Society. Since the Motor Show week, a jar of beans has been displayed in the window of the Richard Hall & Son store, and the automobile was offered to the person estimating the closest to the number of beans it contained. Mr. Hillier's guess was 2,135.

Mr. E. J. H. Vanston announced this morning that Messrs. Peter Campbell and Arthur Stevenson, who counted the beans, reported the correct number to be 2,134. Mr. Wilson's gift netted the Red Cross $300. Other estimates that were only a few figures wide of the count were as follows: Mrs. Thomas DeForge, 835 Patterson street, 2,136; R. C. Hillier, 184 Rubidge street, 2,129; Mrs. C. H. Ackerman, 353 George street, 2,127.

An offering will be made during the evening.

FRANK JENNE SAYS—

To get a suit of clothes, custom-made, to your exact measure in a few hours, was the basic idea of Semi-Ready Tailoring. To have the garments finished as well, to fit as well, as of fine cloth texture, as the best retail custom tailor could make them, and yet save the wearer from $5 to $10 in real money, was a concurrent idea. In our samples there is something you will like; this we will give to you if you will "Come to me."

WASHINGTON, May ... Canadian announcement that the ... tente will use the American army only when it becomes a powerful separate unit, caused surprise here today.

There had been no indication of any shift in the plans for brigading the Americans with the Allies, and thus taking away the identity of the United States forces. In the absence of Secretary Baker other officials maintained silence as to the significance of the statement. As Secretary Baker was expected back from inspecting Camp Green, Charlotte, North Carolina, today, some explanation was anticipated.

A Strong Reserve.

The cheering factor in the published Canadian statement was its supreme confidence. It showed a new strategy by Berlin that of resisting the German push to the fewest possible troops, adding when necessary, but maintaining a strong reserve. It pointed out that Germany has massed enough and that now it is only a case of victory deferred for the Entente, and of certain defeats for the Teuton. This strain of optimism deferred from the warning of British Ambassador Reading here Saturday night against a "false optimism." This is the second time in recent days that foreign British statements have failed to tally with utterances from the British services here.

A Surprise.

These conflicting views mystify the authorities so. Especially is the Canadian announcement a surprise in view of the recent clamour for more Americans speedily and because under the strain of this appeal General Pershing agreed to brigade the Americans with the British and French.

If the German is as badly off as the Ottawa statement would indicate, or if the Entente is as well off as the announcement claims, then the situation is far better than military men here have believed it to be.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The nature of the bombardment that preceded the German assault on March 21st, may be judged by the statement that in three hours the German batteries fired nearly three times as many shells as were used by the Germans in the whole of the Franco-Prussian war.

You have to take off your hat to the German press bureau. The official German account of the last British raid on Ostend calmly tells the people of Germany that in the attack "a British cruiser was sunk near the harbour entrance," omitting to add that she was purposely sunk by the British.

An announcement from England that first drafts of Canadians called under the Military Service Act, and proving good soldiers, will surely follow. It is gratifying to hear that the instructors speak in the highest terms of the new men and their physique and eagerness to learn and make the best of impressions.

The City Council fail to have the necessary fuel reserve available for winter, the local press cannot be blamed. Both papers have endeavored to impress upon the aldermen the desirability of securing an adequate supply of wood.

Dr. Chabot of Otawa, is not one of the members who is worrying about losing his privilege of dispensing patronage. He described the system as making his life "a Hell on earth." Still there are members who, as the song puts it, like to be "devils in their old home town."

Canadians everywhere will unite in congratulating Sir Wilfrid and Lady Laurier on the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage, which is being celebrated to-day, and in wishing that they might be spared to enjoy many more years of happiness.

WHAT OTHER EDITORS SAY

Niggardly.

(Toronto Star.)

If the allowances granted returned soldiers for the purchase of civilian clothes is but $8.00, what is the idea? What sort of clothes can a man buy for that? Or is he supposed to wear only shirt and pants?

Doing Well.

(Hamilton Herald.)

The work of the British air service at the front is not so well advertised as the French; but the bald figures just given out by the British ministry are sufficient evidence that the British airmen are doing fairly well. The official report is that in March British aviators dropped 58,179 bombs over the enemy lines, and in the same period the Germans dropped only 2,465 bombs over the British lines.

Placing the Germans.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer).

A Swedish naturalist has discovered that ants are neither wise nor industrious, but merely muddle-headed time wasters. And after a while another scientist will discover that the Germans are not efficient, but merely —ants.

Unfair Reciprocity.

WORTHY TO RANK AS NATION

Finland Has Right to Be Welcomed Among the World's Republics—Its Great National Epic.

Finland of to-day is a prosperous and rapidly developing country, inhabited by an enterprising, progressive and hospitable people. The population is, roughly speaking, 3,000,000. Dairy farming has become one of the most important industries. It is more profitable than the raising of grains because of the uncertainty of the seasons. There is absolutely no reason why the republic of Finland should not be a success, if left undisturbed by more powerful and ambitious neighbors. The people are intelligent, democratic and frugal, and have had enough experience in self-government to be of great help in solving the various perplexing problems that are sure to arise. There is no logical reason why they should be subjects of Slavic Russia. Hence the republic of Finland should be welcomed among nations of the world.

We are indebted to Finnish literature for the inspiration of one of our great poems by one of our sweetest singers, Nevin O. Winter writes in the Christian Herald. Without a written literature, there was handed down from father to son for many generations in Finland a great national epic. In the long winter evenings the singers sat beside the flaming pine logs and there sang snatches from this epic. Finally there appeared one Elias Lonnrot, a simple country physician, who traveled over the country and collected this unwritten epic from the memories of hundreds of these singers. He called the collection the Kalevala and it was first published in 1835. Longfellow copied the style in his "Hiawatha."

Forty Miles of Jam.

So enormous has the business of jam making become in Dundee, Scotland, since the great firms there organized to supply preserves to the British army and navy that, according to a report sent by E. H. Pottle, U. S. vice consul there, to the department of commerce, the tins in which they put up one week's supply alone "would, if stood end on end, form a column fully 40 miles high. It is no unusual thing for this firm to deal with 100,000,000 oranges, and all kinds of fruit are dealt with on a similar scale."

The Dundee manufacturers are about to give up the use of earthenware, glass jars and tins, for a stout cardboard container is now being made and experiments with it have proved highly successful.

Delight of Berlin Life.

One of the beauties of autocratic government, says the Springfield Union, is shown in the snow-removal order issued by the military authorities in Berlin, under the provisions of which every property owner is required to remove the snow not only from his sidewalk, but from the roadway as far as the center of the street, and is authorized to call on all tenants between the ages of fourteen and sixty to assist him in this work. Failure to comply with the order is punishable with a fine of not more than $375 or imprisonment for not more than a year, and the police are authorized to handle all such cases without the formality of a trial.

Four Priests Ordained At St. Peter's Yesterday's With Solemnity And Ceremony

Impressive and Unique Event Attended by a Great Congregation —Sacrament Administed by Bishop O'Brien—Many Relatives and Friends of the Young Men Were Present From Distant Points.

No. 113

BISHOP O'BRIEN'S ADDRESS

In the presence of a large congregation at St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday morning, four young men were ordained to the priesthood by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien. They were Rev. Michael L. O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. O'Brien, of Toronto, formerly of Peterboro; Rev. John J. Garvey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Garvey of Douro; Rev. Gerard J. Maher, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Maher, 545 Homewood Ave., and Rev John J. O'Leary, son of Mrs. Patrick O'Leary, 273 Romaine Street.

To the pervading solemnity of yesterday's event, almost unique in the records of the diocese of Peterboro, was added the deep interest with which the many relatives and friends of the candidates followed the impressive ceremony. A large section of the nave of the church was reserved for the relatives. The rest of the congregation were friends who had known one or more of the young men for many years and had observed their progress in their long studies for the vocation to which they have given themselves. Rev. Father O'Brien was educated in the local Separate Schools and Collegiate Institute, afterwards attending St. Michael's College and Toronto University and finishing his studies at the Propaganda College in Rome. His father was formerly Inspector of Separate Schools. Three of his brothers enlisted for overseas service early in the war. Lieut. W. J. O'Brien won his commission since going to France and is still on duty; Gunner Richard A. O'Brien went over with the 33rd Battery and was invalided home, and Corporal James O'Brien at present in France joined the 93rd Battalion.

Rev. Father Maher, is also a Peterboro boy, who has a host of friends here. He too received his early education in the Separate Schools and Collegiate Institute and with Fathers Garvey and O'Leary completed his studies at St. Michael's College and St. Augustine's Seminary. The two latter priests attended Douro schools and matriculated from the Norwood High School. Father O'Leary, has lived in Peterboro for some years and has already many warm friends here. His brother, Private David O'Leary, has been two years and one-half in France, serving as a signaller.

Hence, not only were there a great number of citizens present for the ordinations, but there were also many persons from Douro, Otonabee and Ennismore. The masses in the several churches in these parishes were held earlier than usual to enable the pastors to assist at the Cathedral.

THE CLERGY PRESENT

For the ceremony, Bishop O'Brien was clothed in full Pontifical vestments, wore the mitre and carried his crosier.

The mass was celebrated by His Lordship, assisted by Rev. C. J Phelan and Reverend Dean McColl. Reverend J. V. McAuley, of Ennismore, was master of ceremonies. Among the priests present were Rev. Archdeacon Casey, of Lindsay, Rev. F. Powell and Rev. J. Collins, of St. Michael's College, Toronto, Rev. Father Foley, of London, editor of the Catholic Record, Rev. Father Dutton of St. Mary's Church, Toronto, Rev. M. J. O'Leary, of Bracebridge and Rev. Fathers McGuire and Ferguson, of Peterboro, Galvin, of Downeyville, Meagher, of Lakefield, McGuire, of Douro.

Rev. Cyril Kehoe, O.C.C., of St. Augustine's Seminary, Toronto, preached the sermon.

The Bishop's Address.

At the close of the mass, Bishop O'Brien briefly addressed the congregation and gave a final injunction to the young priests. He spoke of the importance of the ordinations not only to the church, but particularly to the diocese of Peterborough. "They are not only important for to-day, but I was going to say for eternity, recalling the words, 'Thou are a priest forever, according to the order of Melchisedech.' We have been looking for this day for a long time. It was forced upon us by present demand. These young men sacrificed their entire vacations last year in a summer school, finishing their studies, that they may allow others to go abroad as chaplains in the war. This ordination is but the climax, for they have already received seven ordinations, ascending step by step nearer God's sanctuary. It gives that power God gave to men, whereby that power and knowledge may be resident in this world.

I congratulate these men, and also their parents who sacrificed their work and time and efforts to educate them." His Lordship said that the parents would be remembered by their sons in the intentions of the masses they will celebrate. He expressed the hope that the ceremony would be an inspiration to others.

Addressing the priests, Bishop O'Brien recalled their long periods of education at the Separate schools, High schools and Collegiate Institute, St. Michaels' College, the University of Toronto and finally St. Augustine's Seminary. "You are equipped by nature, and, I believe, by grace. The power given you this morning with the words, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost, whose sins you shall forgive they are forgiven them," is as effective as when Christ gave it to His apostles. You have the same mission as the apostles, Teach all nations. What are you told to teach. 'Teach all things, whatsoever I commanded you,'' were Christ's words. Go therefore and preach and carry on the work for which you were ordained. Notwithstanding the difficulties the church meets with, bear in mind the earnest of success, the assurance of Christ, "Behold I am with you all days even to the consummation of the world."

"In your breviary this morning you read and contemplated on humility. Practice it before God. Be humble in spirit notwithstanding the glorious power you have received. Keep in your hearts day in and day out a love for God, and your neighbour, no matter whom that neighbour may be. Keep that love of the brotherhood, of which St. Paul speaks, that ultimately we may see the words of the Divine Son fulfilled, that through the love of God there may be one fold and one shepherd."

The Sermon.

Rev. Father Kehoe quoted his text from the epistle read during the mass, 1st. St. Peter, 4-11:—"If any man speak, let him speak, as the words of God. If any man minister, let him do it, as of the power which God administereth: that in all things God may be honoured through Jesus Christ."

"We have witnessed this morning a very interesting event. An ordination is comparatively new to most of us. It is something we have heard of often. It is familiar to us in our thoughts and in our doctrine. But it is an old scene. In substance it goes back from year to year, from Pentecost to Pentecost, for that is the favourite time for ordinations, commemorating the descent of the Holy Ghost upon the Apostles.

"At Caesarea Philippi, by the Lake of Genesareth and elsewhere, the Master had lived with his disciples. He had walked with them, and ate and slept with them. Finally He called them together and said to His chosen twelve, "As the Father hath sent me, I also send you." Then He breathed on them and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them: and whose sins you shall retain, they are retained." That was an ordination. It was the same as that which the prelate administered before you this morning, the same words, the same spirit, the same valid effect."

Holy Writ and Tradition.

Father Kehoe declared that not only did the Holy Writ testify to the first ordinations when the apostles received their commission from Christ, but also there were the unbroken traditions of 1900 years, of a church that comes down to to-day with three hundred millions of people. "I will also summon as many more who have every doctrine that we have, every ceremony, who have a celebration like this, and yet they have been separated from us for more than one thousand years. I speak of the great Greek church that broke away from the jurisdiction and discipline of Rome. It has stood ready to check us if we swerved a line from the path of tradition, even from ceremonies not to speak of doctrine."

Father Kehoe referred to the failure of the Council to resolve the differences between the Catholic church and what, he said, might be called its Greek branch. Stating that men have become pragmatic, that they distrust human season and love established facts, Father Kehoe recalled the evidences the first Christians left behind them. "In the catacombs of Rome where they lived before Christianity dared show itself on the surface, you see depicted in the art they left on the walls scenes like this you are witnessing this morning. You see the pontiff with young men about him, stretching forth a power from head to head. Behind him you see the altar. Only the other day a church that dates back to the sixth century was unearthed in Rome. It had been preserved by the ashes that buried it. As it was cleaned and dusted it was found to be an old Catholic church. There was a holy water font at the door, the tabernacle on the altar, and the odour of old ceremonies seemed to linger there. It came out of the sixth century and yet is was very familiar to us."

Another Power.

The ordination, Father Kehoe continued, celebrated the Last Supper when Jesus blessed and broke bread, and giving it to his disciples said, "Take ye and eat. This is my body." After He had supped He gave them the chalice saying, "Take ye and drink. This is my blood which shall be shed for many. Do this in commemoration of Me."

"These two powers were communicated this morning by the Bishop, using the very words of Christ and repeating the instructions He had enjoined upon His apostles. Jesus sent them forth with doctrine and great power. Thus the church was organized of twelve priests who were sent out to convert the world. How strange the story."

Father Kehoe added that the Church was guided by God, Himself. What success could there be for Christianity if it could go astray. Only the power of God strengthens the weakness of men. It would be a great travesty of power if God did not stand with the Church and keep it holy and infallible.

No Higher Criticism.

"These young men represent the living church of the past and present. We have laboured with them to make them worthy of their high position. Notwithstanding the culture we have tried to impart they are not by nature more talented, nor by culture above those outside the church. I will not say that we gave them a longer course of study, that they are more conversant with history, philosophy, and science than others, but we thank God that they are not at the mercy of any man's talent.."

Father Kehoe said that higher criticsim had torn the scriptures apart. The divinity of Christ is questioned, also the Trinity, and some assert that Jesus was a mere man born as we are. "God save us from that," remarked the speaker. Explaining by analogy the meaning of a living church, Father Kehoe said that Great Britain had a constitution, with constitutional history and learned Englishmen to interpret it. From it we find that laws which William the Conqueror enacted are still alive. Discussing the divergence between the Anglican and Catholic church he stated that while there were similar ceremonies, the differences arose in the searching of traditions. Anglican scholars had read Augustine, Jerome, Cypnan and others back to apostolic origins, and had constructed a church accordingly. "They are near the truth we know, but they didn't see the living Church in the background. It was that church that taught St. Augustine, and brought him groping out of paganism. It taught Jerome who gave us the Scriptural translations as we have them now. The great doctors were but the spokesmen of the Church."

Appeal for Prayers.

Speaking of the young priests Father Kehoe said: "They are of yourselves. You have opened the gates of the sanctuary for them and they should reflect honour on you. There is no royalty in the sanctuary. They have been studying for a long period, responding to the college and seminary bells from 5:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. with a discipline even the army doesn't know. They are skilled moralists. They have studied the law of God, civil law, natural law, and the laws of the church. I have often heard it said by men who were not hostile to the church that it was a blessing to have these trained men in society. There is no greater duty I know of than to pray to God for the stability of the clergy. They leave their homes, giving up home and married life for a solitary life of sacrifice until the years whiten their hair. Their only reward is the approval of God."

Relatives Present.

Relatives of the new priests who were present were Mr. and Mrs. M. J. O'Brien and family, of Toronto; Mr. J. J. Sheehy, Mr. P. W. O'Brien and Mr. D. O'Brien of Chicago, uncles of Rev. Father O'Brien. Sister Barbara, of St. Joseph's Hospital, Port Arthur, sister of Rev. Father Garvey, also his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Garvey, of Douro, and uncle, Mr. Rich. Heffernan, of Norwood; also Father O'Leary's mother and his sister, Sister St. Bridget, of St. Joseph's Hospital, Port Arthur, and his cousin, Rev. M. J. O'Leary, of Bracebridge. Relatives and friends of Rev. Father Maher were his parents, his grandfather, Mr. James Maher, his aunt, Mother Juliana, of St. Joseph's Convert, Sault Ste. Marie; Mother Clotilde, of Parry Sound; Rev. Father Dutton, of Toronto; Mrs. John Duck and Miss Marion Duck of Toronto; Priestes Neil and Vincent Masterson, of the 69th Battery, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Piggott and Messrs. Joseph and Aloysius Piggott, of Downeyville, and Miss Delphina Piggott, of Napanee; Mrs. F. Guilfoyle, of Collingwood. Lindsay relatives and friends were Mr. Ed. Gillogly, Miss Mary Gunn, Fabian Gillogly, Miss Sadie Gunn, Miss Mary Fleury, Mrs. Chas. Collins, Messrs. Fred and Matthew Cayley, Miss Mary Cayley, and Mrs. Henry Matthews, Mrs. Hudson, Mr. and Mrs. D. Cartin; also Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Morrissey, Miss Mary Harrington, Dennis O'Leary, Mrs. Timothy Piggott, of Downeyville; S. J. Edmundson, of Ottawa; Miss Rose Masterson, Mr. E. J. Masterson, and Mr. Thos. Masterson, of Toronto; Misses Walsh and Anna Duck, of Young's Point.

The ushers were: Dr. F. P. McNulty, Dr. J. V. Gallivan, Messrs. W. S. Merrell, Harry Phelan, Thos. Lane, Ed. H. Hickey, John Hanrahan, Cecil Wolff, J. Gerald McFadden, and Frank Lynch.

The newly ordained priests sang vespers last night and celebrated their first masses this morning at the following churches: Father O'Brien at the Cathedral; Father Garvey at St. Joseph's Church, Douro; Father Maher at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and Father O'Leary at the Church of the Sacred Heart. They will celebrate High Mass at the same churches next Sunday.

The singing of the Cathedral choir added an impressive note to the ordinations.

Editor Evening Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I was very much interested in your editorial on Col. Labatt's case which appeared in one of your issues of last week. As there is considerable injustice in the matter of adjusting pensions, either through lack of knowledge on the part of the Board of Medical Officers when the claimant is subjected to an examination or through discrimination which is being shown, and which has been proved in the case of Col. Labatt, I would like to cite a case under my purview for some considerable time, and which I have taken up with the Board of Pension Commissioners, but up to date no satisfaction has been given.

This man proceeded overseas on the outbreak of war with the 4th Battery and served some two years in France and Flanders, taking part in all the engagements which the 4th Canadians were in, and through the force of explosion of a heavy shell derived valvular disease of the heart in a very acute form. Now, Mr. Editor, I come to my point. The man's disability is claimed by the Medical Board to be 2 p.c., or equal to $10 a month pension, while the allowance for each child is $2. Compare this with Col. Labatt's allowance, $1,890 per annum and $120 for each child. Can any reasonable thinking person, after reviewing these facts, come to any other conclusion than the fellow who has got the pull; no matter whether he was in heaven or hell, can generally manage to squeeze out a mighty good thing through the grafting of his political friends. No matter what camouflage the government has in this case we at least cannot be hoodwinked and the sooner the government sees the returned man who has done his bit in France and Flanders to protect the hog barons and other parasites of that like get a just and honourable deal. Let there be an equal pension for all ranks as far as full disability is concerned. The man who was a colonel was paid for that rank and the entire duty that his position curtailed, and should have no bearing upon his pension. Neither should there be any discrimination shown between the wife of an officer and the wife of a full blown private. Each one has made a sacrifice and each one is entitled to the same amount of compensation from the committee.

Yours truly,
Sidney Whatley,
Secretary G.W.V.A.

Hardware And Metal Markets

Rapidly advancing markets feature the situation in turpentine during the week, prices going up from 8c. to 10c. per gallon, with prospects of even higher levels being reached, says "Hardware and Metal" this week. At primary points the market on this commodity shows increasing strength. Great difficulty in getting shipments through to Canadian points is being experienced, and supplies are within a very small compass.

A further advance in tin of 15c. per pound features the metal markets. This, it is intimated is the result of increased costs, due to advances in primary markets. Stocks are at a very low ebb, and no shipments from Great Britain are reported on the way. Solder has been influenced to higher levels by the increase in tin, and quotations are up about 4c. per pound in some quarters, which has served to narrow the range. Stocks are none too heavy, and manufacturers are trying to equalize distribution as carefully as they can.

Steel Outlook.

The outlook for all steel grows more uncertain. The action of the United States government in taking over the entire output of the mills must result in supplies for commercial requirements reaching a low point. At the present, fair stocks of sheets are reported available, and a very firm undertone exists. Business, however, must be conducted on the basis of a constantly decreasing supply.

A very big advance in China bristles has been put into effect at primary points, and this has resulted in a very firm undertone for brushes. French and Russian bristles are not coming in, and under the exceptionally heavy demand for war work in shipbuilding, railroad equipment, etc., there has been some question as to whether bristles available would take care of all requirements. Corn brooms are in a very firm market, and higher prices are not altogether unexpected.

The general tendenby of the markets during the week has been upward. Fire-welded coil chain is quoted at higher levels and other lines similarly affected include small bore rifles, shovel, spade and scoop handles, blow torches, fire pots, nut and chain wrenches, automatic hand drills, spiral screwdrivers, breast drills and alarm tills. An advance in some quarters of 1 1-2c. per pound on horse shoe nails has been made, and horse clippers have also gone to higher levels. Ready roofing is another line to make an advance, and asbestos sheathing is also up. Business in spring lines is reported excellent.

Tonnage Being Destroyed That Will Be Needed After the War.

(Special to The Examiner.)

AMSTERDAM, May 13.—"After fifteen months, the submarine warfare has not brought peace any nearer. In the meantime, we continue to destroy tonnage that will be needed after the war." Herr Vogtheir, Independent Socialist, declared in the Reichstag to-day, commenting on Admiral Von Capelle's declaration that "unrestricted submarine warware is winning the war."

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES WERE HELD YESTERDAY AT ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Speaker For the Occasion Was Rev. A. B. Winchester of Toronto —Excellent Music Provided.

MORNING SERVICE

Large congregations attended the anniversary services of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church held yesterday. Special music was provided for the occasion. The choir was augmented by Captain and Mrs. Maurice Park, who sang at both services. The services were in charge of the Rev. A. B. Winchester of Toronto, who at the morning service took for his subject —"The head of the body of the church."

The speaker showed the omnipotence of Him who is the image of the invisible God by whom all things are created. He is the head of the body and the centre of all things no matter where we look. He is the living head of the church which is His body.

"He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father."

"All things shall return when they have served His purpose," said Mr. Winchester.

"Your stature is in exact accordance to our knowledge of Him. That is why we don't have crucifixes and pictures of the deity. We don't want the conception of the Lord Jesus of any age by any master. It is according to our knowledge of Him.

"Many Christians seem to be very narrow. They build four walls around them and do not and will not look beyond, and they call that Christianity. Christ is Head over His Church, holds a higher Thone than Head of all the Governments of the world.

The speaker showed the power of God not only as regards this earth, but the solar system, Saturn, Mars, and the other planets.

"If they deviated for one particle of a second or went one hair's breadth out of their course, they would crash into this planet. Yet for thousands of years noting like this has happened ,and yet some men say. He is merely a Prince among men, and everything in the end will be reconciled, but this is not so. Men who are eternally lost will they be reconciled? No.

"Christ is omnipotent in everything. He is not only Head of His Church, which is His Body, but also Head of everything else. He is supreme."

KNOCKED UNCONSCIOUS.

When the chestnut colt he was driving shied and threw him off the "sulky" seat, Fred Stewart was rendered unconscious on Saturday afternoon and had to be removed to the Nicholls Hospital. Stewart fell heavily on to the ground, near the Empress Hotel, and the horse immediately started to run away. P. C. Deannard held it up at the corner of Charlotte and George streets.

THREE BOYS WERE TERRIBLY BURNED

LIT PAPER COVERED WITH GLYCERINE

KINGSTON, May 13.—Boys who are truants from school wandered down to an old shack in a quarry on the Petawawa Military Grounds and when the rain began to fall they gathered up papers to start a fire. As soon as they touched the matches a great explosion followed and all the boys were terribly burned. With blazing clothes they plunged into a pool of water and started home. In a pitiful state they were found and moved to the Pembroke hospital, where they are now suffering intensely from burns aggravated by the water plunge. The boys were Maurice and Edward Clouthier sons of Jos. Clouthier, and Geo Courth, all sons of Andrew Weinke. The boys set fire to paper covered with glycerine and which had been used for blasting purposes.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 13.—Business is being hustled through Parliament with the most feverish rapidity. What cannot be hustled through is being shelved or dropped. It was expected that the session would close at the end of the week, but it is now believed that even by dint of rushing tactics and of the session lasting from eleven in the morning until after midnight it will hardly be possible to get through until the 22nd.

Fall Session.

In fact there are members who think that the Parliament should adjourn to meet again in August and the opening session of a new parliament assembled at a time when there is much pressing business both war and domestic, and should not they believe be prorogued until all that business has been disposed of. However, the question of a fall session has not been very definitely considered and a compromise may be reached whereby the November openings may again be adopted.
